LEOPOLD'S STORY CONTRADICTED BY GUARD AT PRISON

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

JOLIET, Ill., May 8. — Two stories involving Nathan Leopold, slayer of Bobby Franks, one that he refused an opportunity to flee with seven convicts from Stateville prison Wednesday, and another that he pleaded to be taken along and was refused, have come out of the investigation of the escape.

The youthful son of a rich Chicago family, who is serving a life sentence with Richard Loeb, after conviction in one of America's most sensational criminal trials, says he declined to join the seven fleeing convicts, four of whom have since been captured. His statement was made to E. J. Connelley, state's attorney of Will county, who is directing the grand jury investigation of the prison break.

A different story is told by Jacob Judnich, one of the guards wounded by the escaping sextet. He related that Leopold had asked to be taken along, but that the convicts refused.

OREGON-WASHINGTON MEET ON HEAVY TRACK

EUGENE, Ore., May 8. — A heavy shower on an already dampened field here this afternoon gave every indication of a show meet between the University of Washington and the University

Liberty

PROCLAIM Liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof — this was the legend inscribed on what was later to be known as the Liberty Bell, when it was recast in Philadelphia in 1753.

Twenty-three years later this prophetic admonition was carried out when the now historic bell heralded the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

A century after this assertion of American liberty, Alexander Graham Bell gave to America and to the world, in the telephone, an instrumentality of a new form of freedom. Limitations which had confined the scope of the spoken word were swept away. Doors of isolation were thrown open. In his contacts with his fellows, man had achieved a new independence.

For fifty years this emancipation of speech has undergone an unceasing evolution into a larger and ever larger liberty. Year by year man's voice has reached out over greater and greater distances until today it speeds from coast to coast, borne on the wires of a nation-wide telephone system.
