(Associated Press Leased Wire.) His assailant was arrested. As the man was taken out by detectives, he said he had assassinated Count Bethlen because he did not properly represent Hungary.

The assailant is supposed to be Ivan de Juth, secretary-general of the Hungarian Republican party. After striking Count Bethlen with his hand, he threw a manifesto into the air signed by de Juth and giving the address number 100 rue de Montmore, Paris.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) EUGENE, Ore., June 10.—Three men were injured, one quite seriously in an automobile accident at Lancaster, a mile and a half south of Harrisburg at 12:30 p. m. today.

M. A. Hagen, 39, of route 3, A. Portland, had both legs broken. Ed Rees, a neighbor of Mr. Hagen, and driver of the car, was badly stunned, and is thought to have sustained a broken rib. J. A. Catterson, 28, of Los Angeles, sustained head scalp wounds above the left eye. All were thrown clear of the car and were badly dazed when picked up.

The men, who are structural wood workers, were on their way from Klamath Falls to Portland when the accident occurred. As described by the driver, Mr. Rees, they were going at a rate of about 25 miles an hour when the car, for no known reason, swerved from the highway and smashed against a heavy power pole. The car was badly damaged.

The men were picked up by O. A. Daniels of Harrisburg almost at once and taken to Harrisburg where they received first aid treatment. An ambulance was sent for to take the men to Albany for further treatment.

All three men are expected to recover. Mr. Hagen having recovered consciousness late this afternoon and the other two being able to walk about.

ROTARY ANN DAY PLEASANT AFFAIR

At today's Rotary luncheon the wives of members were entertained in a pleasant manner. President Booth presided and after the introduction of visiting members, business affecting the club was discussed at some length. The first matter called to the attention of the members was definite reports reaching the club concerning the activities of a certain member, who, it was claimed, had been purloining silverware, not only from members of the Rotary, but during visits to distant cities. A telegram was read showing that only last evening the silver "bonnet" gracing the head of Queen Mary at Bandon had been stolen, along with numerous other articles, and that suspicion was strongly directed to a member of the Rotary club. The only thing that saved the fellow from complete suspension from the club was the fact that his wife testified that all the allegations made against him were the absolute truth and that she was anxious to know when he was bestowing the gifts upon her. As a happy climax to the complex situation President Booth shifted the responsibility for the theft to another member, who was unable to offer an alibi, thereby lifting a great burden from the shoulders of a certain Cass street business man.

Mrs. Foster Butler spoke from the standpoint of a Rotary Ann, and her remarks were very entertaining, saying that the wives of Rotarians felt that it was an honor to have their husbands chosen as members of the club. That she had always felt that a Rotary club was a sort of select organization until she had become familiar with its programs, which had led her to believe very much to the contrary.

Mrs. Max Harnung sang two solos in a very charming manner and was loudly applauded for her rendition. Gordon Cook accompanied her on the piano.

Miss Rowe Wright, representing the Camp Fire Girls, was a pleasing speaker before the club. She explained the activities of the club and its purpose and invited Rotarians to take on more active interest in the welfare of the girls of the community. Good, wholesome activities, including indoor and outdoor programs to engage the minds of young girls is the best cure for jazz lilt affecting the younger generation today, Miss Wright stated.

Food Preservation

The Canning Trade says that the first canning in the state of Maryland was apparently done by Thomas Kessett some time between 1820 and 1830. There is definite evidence that he canned oysters in Baltimore city in 1841, which is possibly the earliest definite date. Previous to this William Underwood is supposed to have preserved foods in glass jars at Boston about 1820. These two men are credited with having brought the science of canning to America from France and England, and it does not seem possible to advise definitely the exact dates on which they first produced canned food. Probably canned oysters were the first things of the strictly canned food line, because preserving in bottles, jars and otherwise is not canning.—Washington Star.

British House of Lords

The peers of England were summoned to consult with the sovereign in matters of state in very early times, but the earliest writ in existence dates from 1205, in the reign of Henry III. The house of lords consists of the temporal and spiritual peers of the realm, and is presided over by the lord chancellor of England. He is the keeper of the great seal, and acts as speaker of the house on formal occasions.

The house of lords is the court of final appeal for all parts of the kingdom, and exercises original jurisdiction in trials of its members for treason or felony, and in cases of impeachment brought by the house of commons.—Exchange.

Colored Musical Genius

"Blind Tom" was the name given to Thomas Greene, Georgia. He was born blind and a slave near Columbus, Ga., on May 5, 1819. He exhibited unusual musical talent before he was two years old and played the piano when he was four. He was able to imitate birds, rain, thunder, etc., and could imitate almost any sound he heard after listening to it once. He appeared in his first concert when he was six years old and traveled extensively through America and Europe. He died July 3, 1908.

Disease Epidemics Not Rare Among Canaries

That even canary birds are not immune from the ravages of disease epidemics is shown by a report from experts of the New Jersey experiment station, published in the Journal of Bacteriology.

The first outbreak of the epidemic occurred among canary birds in a bird store in New Brunswick, N. J., where a stock of 200 birds became badly infected. The total loss in this store alone was about 70 birds, or a mortality of 35 per cent.

Other private breeders lost 25 out of a stock of 30 birds. Many other owners were losing birds from the disease in the same period.

The canary bird fanciers had never known of a disease which caused such a death rate, spread so rapidly and seemed to affect both young and old birds. Nine of the birds which had died from the disease were therefore brought to the laboratory, where post-mortem examinations were made.

By means of a small glass tube a sample of blood was drawn from the heart of each of the nine birds and cultures made from these samples revealed in each case the presence of a bacteria of the paratyphoid group. The source of the infection could not be traced.

Common Legal Terms

Derived From Latin

The words council and councillor are derived from the Latin "concilium," "con" or "cum," together, and "sali," call. A council is a body called together, and it has come to mean such a body as a legislative council or a city council. A member of the body is a councillor, usually spelled in the United States as counselor.

The word counsel is from the Latin "consilium," to consult. The verb to counsel means to give advice or counsel. The noun, counsel, has several meanings. There is counsel, the advice given, and then counsel is used to mean an adviser belonging to the legal profession, and in this sense it is either singular or plural—plaintiff's counsel may mean one lawyer or several. This title is given to lawyers specially commissioned to represent the crown, hence called king's counsel, but this distinction is now also conferred by the government on prominent members of the legal profession without regard to service for the crown. Counselor properly means the same, that is, one who gives counsel. The English form of the word is counselor, the United States is counselor. In Canada the English spelling is always used.—Montreal Family Herald.

UNION OIL ISSUES MAP FOR MOTORISTS

Summer time is just around the corner and the fortunate motorist who lives on the Pacific coast where there are so many good motor trips over excellent roads, is beginning to give thought to vacation outings. Naturally he wants to plan his trip ahead. He has in mind, perhaps, some particular beauty spot of which a friend's spoke in glowing terms. He is however somewhat hazy on those details which go to make the vacation outing a success—the choice of a route, the condition of the roads, and the distance involved.

How many motorists have not gone through these throes of uncertainty at this season of the year when the open road is calling, and who, rather than make haphazard choice have given up the contemplated trip and sought other scenes?

To those who have, the announcement that Union Oil company of California has prepared road maps covering the entire Pacific coast slope including British Columbia, Arizona and Nevada, will be welcome news. The maps are free to the motorist. They have been placed with independent dealers handling Union oil products and also with the company's service stations for distribution to all motorists who may desire them.

In all four maps have been prepared by this California oil corporation. One deals with California, Oregon and Washington; a second covers British Columbia; a third deals with Arizona and the fourth with Nevada. Each map, which is made up in handy pocket size, carries a wealth of information to the motorist. There is shown for instance such important facts as paved through routes, graveled through and graveled secondary routes and unpaved routes. Local roads are also indicated. Cities and towns and even the smallest hamlets in many instances are shown together with the distances separating them.

In placing these maps with independent dealers and at its own service stations, Union Oil company has aimed at the widest possible distribution.
