ROSEBURG, OREGON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1926.

PRINEVILLE—"THE COWBOY CITY."

Though a city of only a little over a thousand inhabitants, Prineville, in central Oregon, has a citizenship with a spirit that bespeaks thrift and prosperity, and as entertainers to visitors exemplifies a degree of enthusiasm in the way of generous hospitality that might well be followed by communities ten times its size. That free, easy going manner so noticeable among the true western cowboy is still prevalent at Prineville, but has been lifted to a much higher plane during the past twenty years. Now you witness the "Cowboy City" in an entirely new role—modernized in every way, a thrifty and prosperous community whose inhabitants are alert to their own requirements and are building for the future. Some four years ago the city business district was almost entirely wiped out by a disastrous fire. Today modern and substantial brick and stone buildings have taken the place of those destroyed and the little city nestled among one of the richest agricultural sections of the state stands as a monument to the untiring efforts of a sturdy and progressive class of people with that true western spirit evidenced on every hand.

Probably the most serious handicap to the central Oregon agricultural interests is the extensive irrigation system, known as the Ochoco project, and which has placed a burden on the land owners in and near Prineville entirely too stupendous for them to cope with. While the farmer of that district depends largely upon adequate irrigation, he cannot bear excessive rates for this privilege, which are now and have been in effect ever since the irrigation project came into existence. There must be some adjustment for the heavy penalties being imposed on the farmers of Crook county. There is no other alternative. Under present oppressive rates for water they cannot possibly emerge from present financial difficulties without state aid of some sort which should be forthcoming at no distant date. This is a very important matter that will concern the state legislature when it meets and ways and means should be devised to bring about a fair and equitable settlement of the difficulties existing between the bond holders and land owners who are deeply interested in the Ochoco irrigation project.

Crook county has long been known as the greatest stock section of all Oregon. Other branches of industry are now being capitalized and will soon come into profitable bearing, adding a lot of wealth to the county. All the people need is a little encouragement to extricate themselves from the burden thrust upon them by excessive irrigation rates. The farmers are a hardy, thrifty set of men who are exerting all possible energy to make good and their efforts in the past is conclusive evidence that they have more than ordinary ability, otherwise the progress shown in Crook county could not have reached that degree of success evidenced among the farming element generally.

Prineville people are a mighty fine bunch to mingle with and their efforts put forth to entertain the newspaper men of the state at their recent convention held at the "Cowboy City," will never be forgotten.

The lost has been found. "It pays to advertise," Mrs. Aimee McPherson, after eluding the watchful eye of thousands of friends and acquaintances—including an army of officers—"showed up" today at Douglas, Arizona. The distinguished lady claims she has been held a captive since her disappearance at Long Beach, Calif., since May 18. Half million ransom was the price placed upon her liberty by her abductors—but no evidence is at hand that any sum of money passed to those responsible for her absence. We're mighty glad Aimee will soon be back on the job.

Elks from all parts of the state will frolic at Eugene Thursday and Friday of this week. A sort of "eye opener" to the Natron Cut-off celebration to be held in August at the University city.

When you "trot" out on the highways these days behind the steering wheel you should always have the address of your nearest undertaker.

The Louisiana house has passed a "safe and sane" evolution bill wherein the monkey is not mentioned. "This is detailing the pesky little animal to his proper sphere."

Many a young fellow is attending to dress a "chicken" on twenty bucks a week. This accounts largely for much of the undressed product.

TENNIS VICTORY WON BY DEFAULT

WIMBLEDON, June 23.—Sally Suzanne Longdon, 19, of the University of California, won her first Wimbledon title today by defeating the defending champion, Miss Maud Watson, 6-1, 6-0, 6-0. Longdon's victory was a surprise, as she was considered a novice. She won the match in straight sets, with the first set being a walkover. Longdon's coach, Mr. J. H. Patterson, said she was "a natural" and that she had been practicing tennis for several years. She is now the youngest woman to win the Wimbledon title.

Mrs. Mollie B. Mallory, former American champion, defeated Mrs. H. Edgington 6-2, 6-1.

INTELLECTUALS.

There are a lot of writers in these unholy days, who pose as fearless fighters of everything we praise; man's faith they would be stealing, his higher hopes congealing, they fear him when he's kneeling, they josh him when he prays. They laugh at all religion, at every gospel tale, from Noah and his pigeon to Jonah and his whale; the faith that's lived for ages, expounded by the sages, they scorn, in futile rages, as being false and stale. They live in ease and splendor, they have good grub to cook, they draw much legal tender for knocking on the Book; they draw a price gigantic from magazines romantic for proving preachers frantic, insane or on the crook. They do not have to struggle or starve in garrets cold; on cushions soft they snuggle and knock the speed laws cold; in gilded clubs they linger and happy crook a finger at one who is the bringer of cocktails manifold. Their lives are soft and slothful, they loaf the years away, and throw their wheezes mofthful at those who watch and pray; all worshipping is fooling, all clergymen are drooling, philosophy is cooling all pious zeal, they say. If they some day were taken from fortune's kindly care, and found themselves forsaken, in danger and despair, would they keep on their teaching, their atheistic preaching, would solace still be searching from Ingersoll, Voltaire? If certain shipwreck faced them where angry billows roar, would arguments that braced them when they were safe ashore to peaceful lovens steer them, would Huxley's lectures cheer them, or Darwin's chapters clear them of dread that made them sore? When man is fat and hearty, with three square meals a day, he's prone to be a smarty, and foolish things he'll say; but when misfortunes bound him, vicissitudes confound him, he trembling, looks around him for gods to whom to pray.

DENTISTS' URGE

PORTLAND, Ore., June 23.—Prevention of decay of teeth was declared more important than repair in a resolution adopted today by the Pacific Coast Dental conference in session here. The conference adopted the Delaharrie resolution, sponsored by the Massachusetts State Dental association, and advocating the care and treatment of teeth before they reach diseased condition. The resolution emphasized the importance of proper care of young children's teeth, declaring that no defect is too slight to receive definite attention.

Officers of the Oregon Dental association elected today are: President, O. T. Wherry, Portland, re-elected; vice president, C. R. Willoughby, Eugene; secretary, Dr. P. W. Hollister, Portland, re-elected; treasurer, Dr. O. J. Ferrin, Portland, re-elected; editor, Dr. Earl Abbott, Portland, re-elected. Three new members of the executive council were named: Dr. Carl Stanley, Portland; Dr. A. P. Watson, Portland; Dr. A. W. Chance, Portland. Holdover members of the council are Dr. Lyle A. Baldwin, Portland, and Dr. T. W. Anderson, Portland.

Dr. Francisco was prominently mentioned today as likely to get the next triennial coast dental conference. Officers of the conference are to be elected today and next meeting place definitely selected.

The Ninth Corps area auxiliary association of Military Dental Surgeons of the United States was formed here today. There are five chapters, one each for Oregon, Washington, Montana, Southern California and Northern California.

The following officers were elected: President, Lieutenant Colonel John W. Liggett, San Francisco; first vice-president, Lieutenant Colonel Shirley W. Bowles, Los Angeles; second vice-president, George R. Hoop, Seattle. These three officers will select a secretary and treasurer. One executive committee member will be chosen for each chapter. The auxiliary decided to meet with the Pacific Coast conference at the triennial sessions.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

MALTED NUTS
Mr. S., who writes a beautiful, firm hand, is 33 years old, is interested in my articles on nuts as a protein food, and wants to know how much protein should be taken. He writes "Most vegetarian stuff that masquerades as meat is unpalatable, but malted nuts, O. Boy! Have I heard of them! He's very fond of them; and some years ago, when he was under pain he ate them regularly to build himself up, with excellent results."

Well, Mr. S., the opinions of a man who has reached the age of 33, who is so evidently alert and well physically and mentally, as you are, certainly deserve attention.

Malted nuts consist of a combination of nuts and malted cereals in about equal parts. When diluted with water in the proportion of one part to seven of the nuts, it makes a palatable milky liquid, sometimes used, with equal parts of cow's milk, for babies and those who find difficulty in digesting cow's milk. Kellogg recommends malted nuts as being especially valuable for nursing mothers to help improve the quality of their milk.

BEAUTY CHATS

SHINY NOSE

A shiny nose is due to several things, but the one which can be most easily treated is the actual oily condition of the skin, which produces the shine. The deeper reason for this should be treated too—it will probably be a matter of diet and bathing, perhaps of blood purifying tonics.

One easy treatment is powdered oatmeal. Little cardboard cartons, often with sifter tops, can be purchased from fifteen cents to a dollar, according to size. It is nothing but oatmeal powdered very fine into a dry meal, sometimes scented and sometimes not. I don't believe you can make a real powder oatmeal yourself, though you can make a fair imitation by running the ordinary breakfast oat meal several times through a meat grinder with the smallest blade screwed on.

But for treating a shiny nose, you should if possible have the finely powdered kind. First wash the face with hot water to relax and open the pores. Then take a little of the oatmeal on your fingers and rub it into the skin all over, the nose and especially around the nostrils. Wet the fingers and rub in more oatmeal.

Mrs. B.: "Here is my recipe for Pepper Steak, recently requested by another reader: After cutting the steak in pieces (usually I prefer the pieces twice as wide as they are long) pound them thickly with flour to which has been added both salt and pepper (use a regular steak pounder or the edge of a plate). Brown in a frying pan, adding onion and peppers (one large onion, three green sweet peppers) after placing the browned meat in a casserole or any baking dish. Sprinkle with a regular soup with a little sugar and thin it with a little water (the mixture should almost cover the meat in the casserole). Now slip the dish into a moderate oven and cook till liquid. This is a dish which improves with warming up. It is an excellent dish to serve guests, as one can cook the whole steak, which serves many, and yet if not all eaten is a fine left-over."

Mrs. G. W.—Butter-Scotch Fanny: "Some time ago one of our Sister Readers asked for this recipe. Cream one-half cup of butter with one cup of granulated sugar, then add three well-beaten eggs and stir vigorously. Now sift two cups of flour with three teaspoons of baking powder and a pinch of salt, and add this to the other ingredients, alternately with two-thirds of a cup of cold, sweet milk. Flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla, and scrape into a round pan in which you have previously sprinkled one and one-fourth cups of brown sugar and dotted this sugar over with a generous half-cup of butter, then, over all, place slices of pineapple. After turning the batter over this sugar-butter-pineapple mixture, slip the pan into a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) and bake 50 minutes at the same temperature. Serve with whipped cream."

Another Reader Friend: "Here are some discoveries of mine, which may help others: When making apple pie try maple syrup instead of sugar and dot the butter before top crust is put on. The different flavor makes a pleasant change. I use no sugar at all in the pie. Also, when making pie crust add a few drops of vinegar to the ice-water; the pastry will be tender and flakier as a result. To clean felt hats, just rub with sandpaper."

All of the cabins were filled and the tents were numerous, and parties still coming in at 10:30. Everybody was happy, and were having a most enjoyable time, and were very appreciative in having the Greeters call and tell them of Roseburg and the Umpqua Valley.

Only one party was interested in finding a location, the rest of the camp were merely taking a vacation trip.

Unconscious, that is the one word that expressed the situation regarding the people living in the Umpqua Valley, when the two representatives of the Greeters Club visited the Auto Park last evening. Local people are "unconscious" of their opportunities.

J. R. Skelly, of Long Beach, Cal., said: "You people—don't realize what a wonderful climate you have here—we were so thoroughly satisfied when we camped here that we have stayed three or four days longer than we expected. Your highway leading up through the beautiful hills south of you, is a wonder, it is inspiring, magnificent. They don't you people advertise it!
