LOCOMOTIVES CONSUME 27 TIMES OWN WEIGHT—To do the work, to get the cash, to buy the fuel, to make the steam, to do the work...

During 1925 the company's road engines burned an average of 4,948,310 pounds of fuel per unit. In other words each of 1,358 freight and passenger locomotives in regular service that year required an average of 59 carloads of 43 tons each to keep up steam in its boilers. In all, the company last year used 3,259,835 tons of fuel oil and coal.

Indirectly, as well as directly, the railroad is a tremendous factor in the nation's industrial prosperity. Dyer said, "They use one ton of coal out of every four tons mined in the United States. Their purchases from other industries total approximately one and three quarter billion dollars annually."

Each year they pay out over three billion dollars in wages, which expenditures, passing through regular channels of trade, are an important factor in sustaining both business and manufacturing. In the instance of coal the railroad's purchases are equivalent to providing means of support for one out of every four miners in the country.

HEADACHE JUST NEARLY DROVE HIM DISTRACTED

Portland Man Also Suffered From Indigestion and a Rundown Condition, but Karnak Soon Put Him on the Road to Recovery Again.

"Do you know it was just all I could do to drag myself down to the drug store to get my first bottle of Karnak but now since I have taken three bottles of the medicine I have more pep and energy than I have had before in many a day," says Louis Lehner, of 882 E. 7th St., N., Portland, Ore.

"For some time I had been running down, but gradually and about a month ago I gave up altogether and had to stop work," continues Mr. Lehner. "I dieted very carefully, but nothing seemed to agree with me and I felt so miserable I didn't know what to do.

"Sleep was almost out of the question, and I had awful headaches that just seemed to stay with me all night and day. I tell you they just almost drove me distracted, and I wasn't able to find anything that seemed to reach my case.

"That since I have been taking Karnak I have been sleeping better than ever and mornings I get up refreshed and cool for the day. My appetite has improved wonderfully and I eat most everything on the table now. Those awful headaches are gone, my head is as clear as a bell, and I have gained in weight and just feel the good of Karnak all through my body. After suffering like I did it certainly is wonderful to get the remarkable benefits that Karnak has brought me, and I can't say half enough for it."

Karnak is sold in Roseburg by Nathan Fullerton, the Rexall store, and by all other leading druggists in Roseburg and every other town.
