Medical Man Gets No Thrills in Sideshow

The sideshow is commonly regarded as blood-curdling and mirth-provoking. It has become a byword to indicate lightness, hilarity and utter nonsense.

With a medical friend, I visited the sideshow before entering the big circus tent. I enumerate some of the exhibits:

1. A number of small cretins.
2. A case of acromegaly—a man eight and one-half feet tall.
3. Two albinos, mentally subnormal, who seemed unhappy, uncomfortable and constantly blinking, advertised as "men from Mars."
4. A sad case of rickets, advertised as "man from Borneo."
5. A pathologic case of obesity, a young girl weighing more than 600 pounds.
6. A man with pathological and abnormal growth of hair over his face and body, advertised as the "dog man."
7. Three healthy looking young girls about eighteen, advertised as "triplets."
8. A case of progressive muscular atrophy, well advanced, advertised as the "rail man."

There were others. The sideshow to a medical man is a collection of pathological and abnormal individuals which affords him a more or less interesting field of study.—Letter to Philadelphia Ledger.

Simple Chemise Worn by Marie Antoinette

I studied with interest the other day a certain modest and pathetically simple garment displayed in one of the showrooms of the Carnavalet museum. It was a long blouse effect of linen, chastely decollete and with short henamed sleeves. Near one shoulder—unless a reflection in the glass deceived me—was a patiently executed darn.

Upon this garment was neither lace nor embroidery, nor ribbon—none of the things, in short, demanded by even the least coquettish women of today for intimate wearing apparel.

Below this exhibit was the notice: "Chemise worn by Marie Antoinette in the Temple."

Where is the woman of today who, confronted by this pathetic relic, would dare ratify the judgment of history and charge with coquetry a queen whose chemise she would scorn to wear even down to her last sou?—Le Matin, Paris.

Pomposity Rebuked

A certain man is inclined to be pompous and obstinate. A short time ago he visited a navy dockyard, and somehow managed to get aboard a vessel where visitors were at the time excluded.

An officer encountered him upon the deck and told him that he could not remain. The visitor swelled up and said that he was a taxpayer, that as such he owned part of the warship upon which he was standing, and that he had a right to be aboard and would not depart.

The officer looked at him a moment. Then he walked over to an anchor chain and with his pocketknife scraped a bit of rust from it. Returning to the visitor, he offered him the flake of rust, and said:

"Here's your share of this ship. Take it and get out."—London Answers.

Couldn't Read It

An African housekeeper, having saved a little money, visited an optician. He tried on pair after pair of glasses, but each time stated that he could not read the test letters. At last in despair, the optician asked him if he'd ever been taught to read.

"No, boss," was the reply. "I have never had the money till now to buy glasses to read."

And it took the optician quite a little while to convince him that glasses alone would not have the desired effect.—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Lassos Vary in Length

The length of lassos depends upon the use to which they will be put. Some are from 50 to 75 feet. This will allow a fairly good throw. Some lassos, however, are much longer than this, such as the western lassos. These run sometimes as long as 50 feet.

Elsie Knew All About It

Elsie—"Mother, Bobbie and I were playing we're married and we quarreled and I'm going out to get a divorce." Mother—"A divorce, dear?" Elsie—"Yes, I know how to get one; you just go to a judge and get a transfer."—Boston Transcript.

Freak Rock Sculpture Work of Dame Nature

On the Cornish coast of England, Dame Nature has excelled in the art of sculpture in the number of faces she has carved in the rock by means of wind and wave and weather. Every visitor to Land's end is taken to a certain point of vantage where can be seen the rugged features of Doctor Johnson, but in this case a little imagination is required. Far better is the remarkable likeness of Queen Victoria on the north coast of Cornwall. At Redcuthen steps, the Queen Elizabeth rock rises majestically out of the sands. Every motorist through the lake district sees the lion and the lamb, on the summit of a mountain near Grasmere. The lion especially looks as well carved as one of the Landseer lions in Trafalgar square. Strangely enough, approaching from the other side, two or three miles beyond, another rock on the same mountain takes precisely the same form, and on coming closer this rock changes to what is called "The Lady at the Organ." This is a great rock in the shape of an organ, at which sits a woman with outstretched hands, as though producing "the sound of a great amen."

Exposure to Cold Not Harmful in Still Air

Professor Bancroft's heart beat and blood flow test on naked persons in the extreme cold of ten degrees below the freezing point suggests the question: What degree of cold can the unclad human body withstand? Perhaps the most surprising experiment in this direction was made during the International circumpolar expeditions in 1882-3. The officer in charge of the northern Siberian station, clad only in his nightshirt, left his tent for a stroll in the open air when the temperature was 72 degrees below freezing point, and he was none the worse for it! This result was explained by the fact that during the promenade not a breath of air was stirring. Had there been a purga (the terrible blizzard of that region), with its dense, blinding, and suffocating cloud of ice needles, it would have meant instantaneous death.

Organ Built of Bamboo

Tuneful melodies of sweet, well-rounded tone still flow from the pipes of a bamboo organ built into the church at Las Pinas in the Philippines more than 110 years ago by the Augustinian fathers. This instrument is constructed wholly of bamboo cut from a jungle near the church. The builders treated the bamboo to make it impervious to the elements. The pipes were buried in sand for six months for seasoning and hardening as a protection against the atmosphere and white ants, which attack nearly all wooden articles in that climate. In 1863 and again in 1882 the organ was damaged, the first time by an earthquake and the second time by a typhoon which blew off the roof of the church. It was silent for 39 years until in 1911 Father Faniel, a Belgian missionary, had it repaired, and since that time it has been in constant service.

History of Suez Canal

The Suez canal, 92 miles long, connecting the Red sea and the Mediterranean, was built by a stock company organized in 1854 by the French engineer, De Lesseps. Work was commenced in 1859 and November 16, 1869, the canal was opened in the presence of the emperor of Austria, the empress of the French and the khedive of Egypt. The cost of the undertaking was somewhat more than $100,000,000. The canal is a sea-level canal and its completion reduced the sea voyage from London to India more than 3,500 miles. In 1875 the British government purchased the khedive's interest in the canal for about $20,000,000, and now owns the controlling interest.—Kansas City Times.

Seal the Bargain

The young plumber had proposed to the girl that evening and had been accepted. Several hours later they parted and he went home.

At three o'clock in the morning a loud ringing of the front door bell of the girl's abode was heard. Her father, roused from slumber, went to the window and, sticking out his head, inquired who was there.

"It's John," said a voice from below; "I asked Agnes to marry me and she said she would, but I forgot to kiss her."

Tribute to Mighty London

London, the world's metropolis and the heart of the British empire, has been for more than two centuries the political and commercial center of the globe. Its position is unique and such as no other city in history has attained. It is the capital and center of the world-wide British empire and is the headquarters from which more than a quarter of the entire population of the globe, occupying more than a quarter of the world's area, is governed.—Christian Science Monitor.

Simple Remedy

Should the voice be lost from the effects of a cold, a simple, pleasant remedy is furnished by beating up the white of an egg, adding to it the juice of one lemon, and sweetening it with white sugar to taste. Take a spoonful from time to time.

VARE NOMINATED ON FUND MILLION BELOW PEPPER'S

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Expenditures in the Pennsylvania Republican primary as disclosed before the senate campaign funds committee total $2,793,582.

This includes $1,804,979 for the Pepper-Fisher coalition ticket; $800,114 for the Vare-Beidleman ticket and $188,489 for Governor Pinchot in his unsuccessful fight for the senatorial nomination.

AUTO PINS OWNER AND ENDS HIS LIFE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EVERETT, Wash., July 8. — M. Leach of Snohomish, aged 60, was killed this morning, when his light runabout automobile overturned on a curve on the Seattle cut-off road, pinning him beneath it and crushing his chest. He was alone at the time.

McCART, FORMER O. A. C. HALFBACK, ON STOCKTON JOB

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

STOCKTON, Cal., July 8.—Ray McCart, captain of the Oregon Agricultural College varsity eleven in 1924, has been appointed coach at the college of the Pacific here for the season of 1926-27. McCart, who played halfback in college, will assist Head-Coach "Swede" Righter with the Pacific varsity eleven and handle the Freshman basketball team for the Tigers. He will also be in charge of the baseball squad.

The new mentor has had one year of experience as high school coach and he is now attending football coaching school at U. C.

CARRIER PIGEONS APPARENTLY RESUME JOURNEY HOME

The carrier pigeon which for two days has been making its temporary home at the Churchill Hardware store apparently left on its return journey to Seattle yesterday evening. The bird walked into the hardware store Tuesday morning, apparently quite exhausted, and made itself at home while employes provided it with food and water. The bird perched in the show window, walked up and down the aisles, and made itself perfectly at home. Tuesday afternoon it departed, but Wednesday morning turned up again and quite plainly demanded more food and water, which were provided. It left again last night, and so far has not been seen again.

Another bird, apparently from the same cote, annexed itself to the A. B. Houser family in North Roseburg. The bird stayed around the house over Tuesday night, obtaining food and apparently resting. It did not object to being handled and made itself at home inside the house. It bore the same Seattle aluminum band as the bird at Churchill's, with the numbers 25-219, but the rubber leg bands bore different numbers, the right leg having the number 985-V and the left leg 937-V.

BEN TURPIN, CROSS EYED COMEDIAN, IS AGAIN A BENEDICT

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—Ben Turpin, cross-eyed screen burlesquer of married life, himself, has entered the conjugal fold for the second time. He was married yesterday to Miss Babette Elizabeth Dietz, formerly of Bismark, N. D., and whom he first met a year ago, while a patient at a Santa Barbara hospital. The ceremony was performed at the church of the Good Shepherd, Beverly Hills.

Turpin's first wife died several months ago.

ROOSEVELT AND WILSON WERE HARD TO GUARD

INDIANAPOLIS, July 8.—(A. P.)—Guarding United States presidents is no easy task and one of the reasons is that some of the chief executives elude their escorts.

So states Captain Thomas E. Halls, chief of the Indianapolis district, who after sixty-five years in the secret service, will retire next month at the age of eighty-two. The captain was body guard to six presidents.

President Wilson was wholly indifferent as to his safety. Roosevelt scoffed at danger and frequently eluded his guard for the pleasure of being alone. On one occasion his body guard after a frantic search found him walking unattended through a Washington tenement district.

Taft Easiest to Watch

Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley and Taft were the other presidents whom Halls served as body guard. Taft was the easiest of the six to guard because he followed routes mapped out by the secret service and schedules of public appearances. McKinley, like Wilson was indifferent to danger, while Harrison and Cleveland sometimes chafed under the constant attendance of secret service operatives.

Because of illness, Halls was unable to make the trip to Buffalo with the presidential party on the fateful occasion when McKinley was shot to death by Czolgoz. Czolgoz was in a queue of visitors shaking hands with the president, and as it came his turn to greet McKinley, fired from a pistol hidden in a handkerchief bound around his hand.

Says Two Guards Needed

"Had I been there I believe my precautions would have averted the tragedy," Halls reminisced. He explained that instead of one guard at the president's elbow there should have been two, one on either side.

As it was the assassin, screened by a large man in front of him, was abreast of the president before he came under the eyes of the operative standing at McKinley's left. A guard to the right would have seen the handkerchief wrapped hand before Czolgoz was near McKinley, Halls said.

Always during his years as guard, Halls watched for persons with bandaged hands, or others carrying anything in their hands. Suspicious persons were searched without their knowledge. An operative would brush against them and run his hands swiftly over their pockets.

Tackled Congressman.

Once at Kokomo, Ind., Taft was entering the speakers' stand when a man broke through the crowd and rushed toward the president. Halls dove at his legs, and with a football tackle carried him off the platform. Both tumbled on the ground. It developed the man was a member of congress, and a personal friend of Mr. Taft.

Halls became a member of the secret service department in 1861, and with the exception of a term as United States marshal in Illinois, has been continuously in the work. After joining the Union army at seventeen he was assigned to secret service operations because of his youthful appearance.

FULL COATS FOR MEN WIN OVER WASPLIKE VESTS

LONDON, July 8.—(A. P.)—Wasp-like waistlines for men have been a good deal of a washout.

Last year many prominent London tailors persuaded some of their young customers to display their boyish figures in coats cut to fit very snugly. But straight lines won out.

Coats next fall will be even fuller than those for summer wear, so Mayfair tailors say.

Fines Paid—

R. O. Ames of Comstock and C. D. Swearingen of Drain, were each fined in the local justice court for setting fires on forest lands without a permit. Mr. Ames was fined $50 and Mr. Swearingen $25. The arrests were made by M. E. Slack, law enforcement officer with the Douglas Fire Patrol.

RADIO CLAIMS KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY AS FANS

LONDON, July 8.—(A. P.)—The routine of Royalty has been altered by radio just as it has changed the habits of millions of other people throughout the world.

Whereas King George, formerly, spent many an evening over his postage stamp collection, now, with wireless sets in Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle, his majesty often listens in to what the radio waves are saying.

Queen Mary, too, is fond of the wireless, both she and the king preferring ear phones to the elaborate loud speakers which were originally arranged for them.

STRAW SHOPPING BAGS

NEW YORK, July 8.—(A. P.)—With summer naming coolness as the keynote of fashion, even the carfare in Miss Fifth Avenue's purse keeps cool in the open mesh straw shopping bags that are the smart shops' latest.

In silk raspberry weave straws of the new colors to match the summer hats, these pouch bags, about 10 inches in width, have white ivory or celluloid frames in added concession to July's penchant for white.

FARMING WITH GASOLINE

HUTCHINSON, Kan., July 9. — Tom Gray, farmer near here, raised a 1,760-acre crop of wheat this year with gasoline power exclusively.

There is not a horse or mule on the farm. Gasoline tractors pulled plows, drills and discs across the fields. Four big tractors and three combines cut and threshed it. A fleet of motor trucks hauled the grain t market. The total yield was more than 45,000 bushels.

Mrs. Clark Improving—

Mrs. Chas. Clark, who strained the ligaments in her right ankle early this week, received from a fall as she caught the heel of her slipper on the porch, is reported to be slowly improving.

The value of reputation

The value of a man is what he does, the worth he shows the world. He may be ever so good inside. If he doesn't prove it, he's worthless.

The value of a watch, a skillet, an automobile, is what it does, the worth it shows its user. It may be of highest serving power. If it can't prove it, it's useless. The reputation of any product is the known proof of its worth. The value of that known proof is that you can recognize it.

When you buy an advertised watch or skillet, you buy value with a reputable manufacturer's name behind it. You don't have to wait till you use it to know it. The qualities which made it advertisable have proved the worth for you. You need only ask for the product by name. Fastened securely to that name are quality, service, satisfaction.

Read the advertisements. They familiarize you with established reputations
