SPRAY RESIDUE PROBLEM CAUSING GROWERS WORRY

In the past few weeks considerable information has appeared in the press of the state dealing with the problem of marketing apples and pears showing spray residue. Some weeks ago a meeting was called to acquaint apple and pear growers with the facts in the case. L. Long, extension specialist in horticulture, at that time gave growers considerable information on the probable course the matter on the subject and outlined briefly what would take during the season.

Since that time there has been considerable development of this subject and many points have now become quite clear. New developments point clearly to the fact that apple and pear growers will of necessity be required to condition all apples and pears in such a manner that they do not show visible spray residue. This requirement will, of course, have no bearing on the fruit consigned to canneries or by-product plants, but deals only with export shipments made interstate or intrastate.

Apple and pear growers will be benefitted by giving this matter careful consideration as it unquestionably represents a new marketing problem that can not be set aside. The county agent and horticultural inspector will be glad to render every assistance to growers in meeting the situation.

MOTHERS FAILURE TO GET FLOWERS REVEALS MURDER

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—The flowers that failed to reach a gray haired mother on Mother's Day were responsible for the investigation which resulted in the arrest Monday night in New York of Rev. Philip Goodwin as a murder suspect.

Joseph J. Patterson, for whose death Goodwin is being held, fall-out for the first time last Mother's Day, May 9, to send a gift of flowers and a greeting to his mother at Miami, Ariz. This and the fact that his correspondence with his brother had stopped abruptly prompted the investigation which led to the discovery of the murder and Goodwin's subsequent arrest.

Patterson's body was found at Santa Ana on March 22, in a river bed whence it had been dragged and set afire.

WASHINGTON FIRE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
EATONVILLE, Wash., July 21.—A fire which last night crept toward the town of Elbe, ten miles southeast of Eatonville, today swirled a little west and headed for camp 17 of the Mineral Lake Lumber company and Rainier National forest, one of the largest single stands of timber in the United States. Although the fire was 20 miles from the great forest, officials declared that a brisk wind might drive the flames into the timber in a short time.

A fire near the Eatonville Lumber company, six miles east of here, was held in check last night. It worked its way across the Marshall River divide into what is known as the old heaven burn.

WITNESS OBJECTS TO BEING CLASSIFIED WITH THE "BADGER"

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PORTLAND, Ore., July 21.—A dash of comedy broke into the trial in federal court today of the damage suit by Japanese against six residents of Toledo, Ore. City Marshal George Schenck was being cross-examined as to his activities during the riot in which Japanese laborers were expelled from the Pacific Spruce Corporation's property in July, last year.

Attorney B. A. Green, of defense counsel, protested against a grilling to which Attorney John Collier subjected Schenck for half an hour.

"I don't think it's fair to allow counsel to badger my witness in this way," declared Green.

"I'm not badgering him," retorted Collier and the two attorneys launched into a heated discussion of the alleged badgering.

Suddenly Schenck broke into the worthy battle by exclaiming: "I wish you wouldn't call me names!"

"I never called you names," said Collier.

"Nobody called you any names," added Green.

"They called me a badger!" put in the city marshal, looking at the judge.

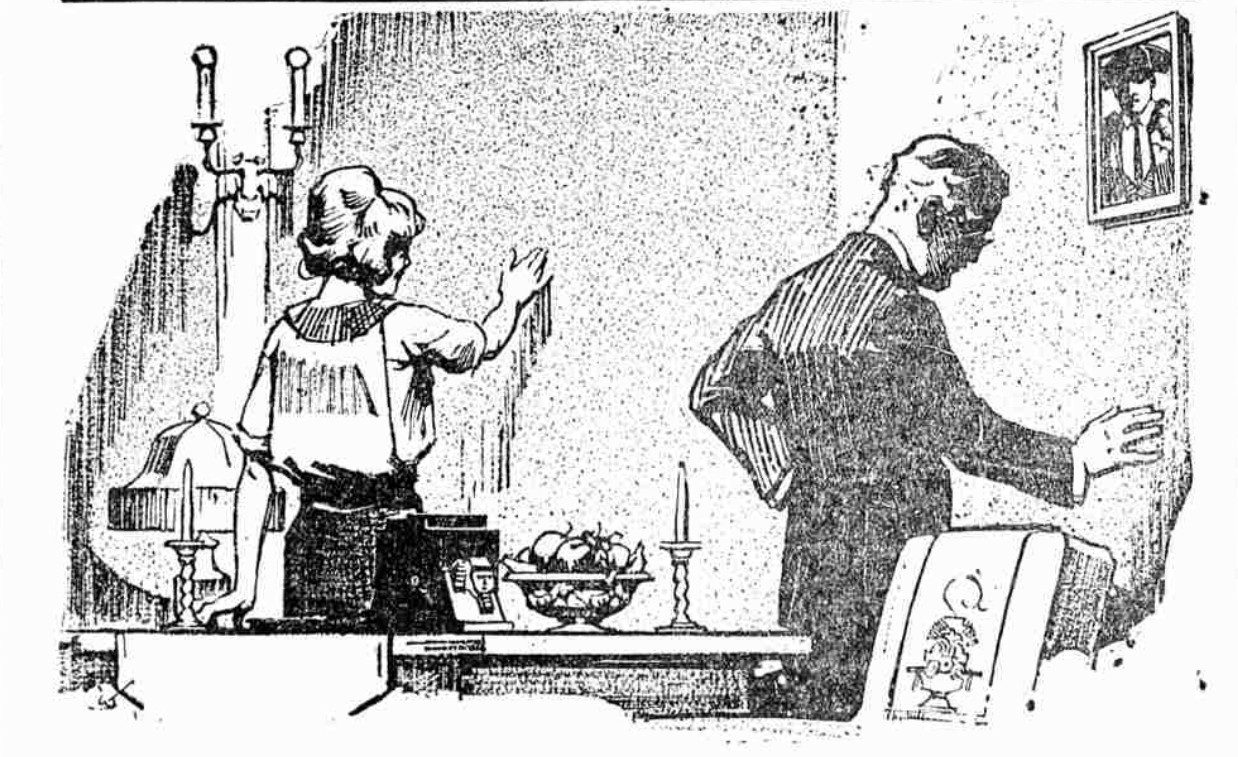

Judge Wolverton suddenly put his hand to his gray mustache and began tapping for order.
