Members of the famous Battery C, Sixth United States Field Artillery, firing the welcoming salvo to the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition on the opening day, May 31, in Philadelphia. The exposition celebrates the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. This battery, a part of the "Sesqui Brigade," the crack troops of the army, fired the opening shot of the United States in the World War. On the opening day of the Sesqui Captain Ida McLendon, now retired, but who commanded the organization during the war, was present and gave the order for the welcoming salute. The artillery men also fired salutes of nineteen guns each for Secretary of State Kellogg and Secretary of Commerce Hoover who attended the ceremonies and made addresses. A corner of the Palace of Liberal Arts is seen in the background.

INDIANS ACT ON RESOLUTIONS FOR THEIR BETTERMENT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SPOKANE, Wash., July 24.—Impassively stalking, gray wrinkles of the past, old tribal chiefs have painted in war paint and breech-clout, a primal procession through the sessions of the second Indian congress, voicing adherence to the ways of their forefathers. Meanwhile, their college bred sons have acted, and today there will be presented to the gathering resolutions designed to redress grievances of the older generation for decades has suffered in silence.

The resolutions demand, among other things, restoration of a number of old timber and fishing tracts, establishment on the Pacific coast of a tubercular hospital for Indians; cooperation on forest fire control; application of tribal funds to university scholarships for young men; and the placing of western, instead of eastern teachers in Indian schools.

Dr. Sherman Coolidge, Arapahoe Indian, an Episcopal minister, declared: "We have tried extermination; we have tried segregation; now we must try assimilation."

Assimilation is the keynote of the congress, according to the young red men.

Besides the closing conference of the congress today, activities will include a baby clinic, a pow wow of warriors and their former soldier enemies, a trap shoot and a motion picture entertainment.

The new Indian at his newest, having a realm no usually associated with persons of his race, was revealed in the presentation here by students of the Chemawa Indian school at Salem, Oregon, of a comic opera, "Paul Bunyon."

In costumes made in the sewing and tailoring departments of the school, Indian maids and young men, with all the time-honored and safety of professional dancers and actors, took the parts of colonial characters, British soldiers, Irish and negroes.

MIAMI BEACH COURSE IS "FERTILIZED" WITH SUGAR

MIAMI BEACH, July 23.—Miami Beach soon will boast the "sweetest" golf course in the world with the use of 100,000 pounds of Cuban raw sugar for a vast fertilizer experiment.

A surplus in the market allowed the purchase of sugar at one and one-half cents a pound, a lower figure than the Everglades muck soil which the course builder had been using as a fertilizer. He plans to use the bulk of the shipment on greens and fairways over his four golf courses and possibly a small amount on trees and shrubbery.

Cajun Justices Not Ruled by Blackstone

The old Cajun justices of southwestern Louisiana were important personages. The trials, which were held at the justices' homes, were made all-day affairs, the neighbors driving in from miles around. Evidence was taken informally, although the verdict was usually based upon the justice's point of view rather than upon any mere point of law.

For example, I know of a planter who brought suit against one of his tenants for the recovery of a calf. His ownership being proved, he was awarded possession of the animal. Next he was ordered to pay the costs of the court.

"But," objected the planter, "I have won my case. The loser should pay."

"True," agreed the justice. "But then, m'sieu, you have the money, whereas the other has not."

However, it was in domestic matters that these "prairie judges" really shone. One of them declared proudly that he could marry and divorce quicker than any other man in the state.

"It is quite simple," said he. "Gobble wishes to be up with some girl. That is all right. He gives me $5 and I write down his marriage in my book."

"After a while he don't like it? He wants to be free? That is all right again. For $10 more I tear out the page."—Neville Henshaw in Adventure Magazine.

Kruger's Idea Was to Make Camp on Ocean

The sight of the trackless ocean and a ship punching the waves all day brings back to this writer the authentic story of Paul Kruger, the president of the Transvaal republic, and his attempt to teach a group of Hottentot children the story of America's discovery. Pierre Van Pussen writes, in the Atlanta Constitution, his representation of a ship conjured up a mental picture of a floating covered wagon. Oom Paul's imagination may have been magnificent, but it failed him miserably on the occasion when he was traveling from Cape Town to Southampton on the pathetic mission of seeking aid for his country at the chancelleries of Europe.

When night descended Oom Paul, in his youth had slain an African lion with his bare hands, became nervous and agitated. Finally he could hold out no longer. Briskly he climbed the ladder to the captain's bridge. The officer saluted. "Tell me," said the Boer president, "where do you plan to unload to-night. It's getting dark, you know, and I think we had better make camp."

When reassured by the skipper he went back to his cabin, read the story of St. Paul's shipwreck, drank a stein of beer and fell asleep.

The Dirty Work

The helplessness of man in the presence of ordinary domestic tasks was illustrated in the case of the old miner, who explained that he had once tried to improve his cooking by studying a book of recipes. "It was no use," he said sadly, "because every one of them receipts starts off with 'take a clean dish.'"

He was kin to one of the sons of Mrs. MacLeod. She was called away from home one day just after dinner. As she was leaving she said to one of the boys:

"One of you must wash the dishes and the other wipe them and put them away, so that everything will be tidy when I get back."

"All right, mother," said Jack. "but Wilf's got to wipe them. I'm willing to wash, but wiping is such greasy work."

Cosmopolitan South Africa

South Africa is among the most cosmopolitan places in the world, according to L. Kee, writing in the Sydney Bulletin. "I saw a suitcase in the window of a shop in Durban and decided to buy it," says Kee. "A pleasant Hindu took my order and requisitioned a news boy to get the article from the window. A girl (race unascertainable because only her eyes were visible; but they had a suspicious blue Chinese tint in their whites) typed the sale note, and an aged white man took my cash. Finally a Zulu, dressed like a Boer, 'repacked' me and the case to the hotel. Each addressed the other in a different lingo."

Land in Extreme North?

The theory that land exists between Alaska and the pole has been proved for hundreds of years, and Dr. R. A. Harris, an American geographer, won considerable notice a few years ago by offering Arctic tide tables as proof of the existence of a large land mass north of Alaska, says Ruri M. McConnell, in the Independent. There is also the fact that geese and ducks have been observed flying directly northward from Point Barrow during the early summer, and returning with their young a few months later from the same point of the compass. These are a few of the interesting theories in favor of the existence of land.

The Passing Show

"Give me a sentence with the word 'andante'."
"I love my uncle andante."
"Give me a sentence with the word 'ammonia'."
"Ammonia track," cried Sherlock Holmes exultantly.
"Give me a sentence with the word 'toothache'."
"Turn on the water, I want to toothache a bath."—The Passing Show.

Greens Are Good Eating
THE best of spring tonics are found in Mother Nature's own garden in the form of green vegetables, often weedy but are much more wholesome than any tonic taken from a bottle.

This craving for green foods is gratified by serving the crisp, raw leaves, which are rich in iron, sulphur, lime and phosphorus, and at the same time because of their laxative effect afford a most effective internal cleanser. If eaten with the sappy French dressing, this, too, is a stimulant, exciting the digestive organs, particularly the pancreas. The oil is a lubricant, so, with the acid and greens, it is easy to see how necessary green food is in the diet.

When planning a garden the wedding out for thinning should always be planned as a salad. Such small plants as turnips, cabbage, onions, beets, when very young, are delicious served raw, or later cooked in the form of cooked greens.

Wild mustard, sorrel, dock, crex and milkweed shoots are uncultivated greens which are rich in vitamins. The young shoots of milkweed, when cooked, taste much like asparagus.

Dandelion Hot Slaw—Take about three quarts of carefully picked and washed dandelion leaves. Fry out dried bacon in a hot skillet, then lay in the well-drained leaves, cover and simmer until the leaves are well wilted. Mix salt, pepper, a tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cream, adding enough vinegar to add zest to the dressing. Add two beaten eggs and stir until well blended—not directly over the heat; pour over the greens and serve hot.

Blanch dandelion leaves found under boards or in sheltered spots are delicious cut up and served with shredded green onion and a French dressing.

Black walnuts, a half cupful coarsely chopped, sprinkled over a custard pie makes a most delicious, rich pie, if one likes the black walnut flavor.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EZRA MEEKER, 95, MAKING FAST TIME ON JOURNEY WEST

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, July 24.—Ezra Meeker, 95-year-old white haired patriarch of the Old Oregon Trail, was here today in a modern motorized covered wagon on his way from New York to Eugene, Ore., in the interest of the Oregon Trail Memorial association of which he is president.

The last survivor of the famous group that slowly toiled across the western plains and over the mountains in 1852, Meeker presents a picturesque figure as he rushes over the Iowa plains, his eyes, shadowed by bushy eyebrows, peering into the west as they did 74 years ago. In contrast to the tedious journey at that time, Meeker and his driver, Daniel Maue, made 215 miles yesterday.

The trophy will be known as the California cup and bear the names of the members of the team donating it.

YOUNGER BOYS TO BE ORGANIZED INTO NEW UNIT

Organization of a unit of the Junior Citizens of America and a guiding council will be started in Roseburg at once, according to Hector C. Mackay, regional executive, who is in the city today. Mr. Mackay is making his headquarters in Portland, while engaged in organization work in Oregon, having been previously located in Seattle.

The Junior Citizens of America is an organization similar to that of the Boy Scouts, except that it takes in youngsters under scout age, its members being from 9 to 13 years of age.

The Roseburg unit will be the third in the state, but organizations are contemplated for Portland, Astoria and later units will be added in other cities interested. Members of the boys band, who are within the age limit, may be organized into a band which will be a part of the state band and will receive national publicity.

The aim of the organization is to lead small boys into useful lives and to develop good citizenship, the national program eliminating rowdism, and instilling a spirit of cheer, sociability, initiative and helpfulness under the influence of the church and adult supervision.

The work is handled on the same general plans as the scout movement, with a council composed of adults and a supervisor to exercise direct control.

Honor badges are given members after the achievement of three degrees for camping, woodcraft, first aid, hiking, pioneering, for entry, angling, archery, safety first.
