MACHINE POLITICS.

People of the reformer type look with suspicion on various methods of organization that they call machine politics. They fear the power of these highly perfected systems that carry on political activities in many states. And yet, satisfactory political results are not obtained without some organization. If no one prepared any lists of candidates, and the voters just marched up to the polls and voted for anyone whose names occurred to them, conditions would be much worse than now. Many freak candidates would be elected, and selfish interests would quietly put over their programs. A vast amount of organization work has to be done to control the sweeping tides of public opinion, and direct them in some orderly and rational way.

CREPE HANGERS.

Every once in a while we hear some down-at-the-mouth crepe hanger moan that the opening of the Natron cut-off from Eugene via Klamath Falls would be a death blow to Ashland; that it would take a big payroll from this city and business as a consequent would go to the bow wows. This sort of talk is plain foolishness. The opening of the Natron cut-off will not be felt here. It may take a few railroad men away from Ashland, but just a few. The shops will remain here and business will continue as usual. Instead of seeking to hang crepe over the city's front door, it behooves each and every citizen to become a real Ashland booster. If you believe in your town and your people and your merchants, you are going to get other people to believing in them, and almost before you know it you are going to find that everybody is prosperous and happy. Every town has its crepe hanger and Ashland, apparently is no exception. But his feeble voice can be stifled if a little more of the live-and-let-live spirit prevails.—Ashland Tidings.

A new meat concern at Portland is dealing in horse flesh—using up a lot of eastern Oregon broncos—the outfit of the concern going to Europe for consumption. We have many things to be thankful for in America, one of which is the fact that we have not yet reached the point where our diet demands horse meat.

Dispatches are telling of poison rum killing some thirty or more persons. The stuff was drawn from wood alcohol and distributed to the trade under the guise of "imported liquor." The fellow whose thirst betrays his good judgment is taking all the chances in the world of getting thoroughly "pickled."

NEWLY RICH.

He was a good civilian, my friend, J. Smith DeJones, before he made a million, and gleamed with precious stones. To meet him was a pleasure, in those old happy times, before he heaped up treasure by speculative crimes. For he was unassuming and modest as becomes a man who long was cooing in shanties in the slums. Obscure, apologetic, he went his humble way; his shyness was pathetic, we often used to say. Then he acquired the plunder, the assets and the price, and he came out from under and started cutting ice. He brings of his condition, of everything he owns. "That painting there's by Titian—it cost ten thousand bones. My limousine's imported, it beats the home made trucks in which I once cavorted—it cost twelve thousand bucks. My chef once cooked for princes, for dukes and earls and queens; our native cooks are quinces whose scope is pork and beans. I pay my chef more money than senators have earned, but oh, he is a honey! His pies are never burned! My wife and seven daughters come home from foreign shores, across the briny waters, with silks in ample stores. They've done some foreign shopping, they've blown in stately wads, the bills are simply whopping, but, thunder, what's the odds?" His bragging should exhaust him, but naught his zeal can fade; he tells what all things cost him, the price tags are displayed. His boastings are the broadest that ever I have heard; and once he was so modest, a mild and shrinking bird! Since riches work such magic in changing simple folk to braggarts loud and tragic, I'm glad that I am broke.

DUMBBELL DORA THINKS

The American Legion fellows ought elect her as their bathin' beauty for the legion convention in Coos Bay because Phil Harth is on the committee and he oughta know 'cause he always was good at figures.

Rollie Rosenbaum, the Espee bell hop, was in the village yestiddy chuckin' up on the tone of the local engine whistles and promises much relief in the near future.

SERVED THE PURPOSE

The captain, taking inspection, noticed Private Brown had no tooth brush. "Where's your tooth brush?" he demanded. "Here, sir," said Private Brown, producing a large scrubbing brush. "You don't mean to tell me you can get that thing into your mouth?" shouted the captain, angrily. "No, sir," replied Brown, without changing his expression. "I take my teeth out."

NO OBSTRUCTION

He hadn't been out in the world much, and he was deeply impressed with the girls' clothes at that dance. "Some of the ladies' clothes I see here," he said, "plumb puts me in mind of a barb-wire fence." Somebody asked him why. "Well," said he, "it's this way—they appear to protect the property without obstructing the view."

STOP THE BOAT.

I WANT TO GET OFF Anxious Old Lady (on river steamer): "I say, my good man, is this boat going up or down?" Surly Deckhand: "Well, she's a leaky old tub, mate, so I would wonder if she's going down. Then again, her bilers ain't none too good, 'n she might go up."

The resolution our diet, atty. Guy Cordon was supposed to present to the Kiwanians yestiddy went the same route as a lotta the campaign promises the fellers made this Spring.

The gals with permanent waves are tryin' to keep 'em that way durin' the swimmin' season with a curlin' iron.

BEAUTY CHATS

A CUCUMBER BLEACH

If you want a cooling, soothing cream which will bleach the skin and do wonders in keeping it free from sunburn during the summer, make up this cucumber cream: Almond oil 4 ounces, Spermaceal 1 ounce, White wax 1 ounce, Cucumber juice 2 ounces.

Take ripe cucumbers, chop them fine, put them over slow heat so they soften and become watery, then squeeze them through a muslin bag until you have two ounces of juice. The white wax and spermaceal are melted in the almond oil (or olive oil if you wish to economize) until they are just blended, then the warm cucumber juice is added. A drop or two of violet extract may be added to perfume the cream, or a few drops of perfumed oil could be used. By the way, never add perfume to a cream until you have taken the ingredients from the heat. These perfumed oils are ethereal oils and lose their virtue with heat.

Here's another cucumber lotion. Two ounces of cucumber juice, two ounces of rosewater, two ounces of glycerine. This is a variation of the familiar glycerine and rose-water hand lotion, it is very bleaching and can be used as often as you like. I would recommend it particularly as a hand lotion to be used after exposure to the sun and left on as long as possible, and to be used at bedtime and left on all night. The lotion is a little sticky, therefore inconvenient to use during the day. If you find it too sticky add an ounce of toilet water and shake thoroughly until it becomes part of the lotion. You can use cucumber juice by itself as a skin bleach if you want.

Mrs. R. S.: After you are through with your work or before retiring give your hands special care to counteract the effects of the day's wear upon them. Massage any good oil into the skin and especially around the nails to get rid of the tendency to hang-nails. Do not allow the cuticle to grow over your nails, and manucure them, for this care of your hands and nails will repay you in extra comfort even though you are doing work every day that is hard upon them. The more work you do the more need for the care; and in this respect, would it not be possible to give your hands some special handling potatoes or the other products that make the skin so grimy?

Twenty-Five—At your age a tendency to sagging muscles merely shows that you are in need of being built up. When all the muscles are firm, as they will be when you are in full health, you will not even need to continue the chewing exercises to prevent flabbiness under your chin.

E. H.: "What is correct to hang on the wall over the buffet in the dining room?" Answer: One of the three-section buffet mirrors, a large picture, or a tapestry. I think the most effective dining room I ever saw was one in which the housekeeper had cleverly hung over her buffet a colored etching of Notre Dame and framed, close, in simple black wood. But, as I said above, mirrors or tapestries are equally appropriate—it is all a matter of personal choice.

Mother-of-Five: "I am just a simple home woman, and we are far from 'fashionable' people, but I do want to astonish my children by new things in their own home, so that when they go out to other homes, they will not be baffled by encountering silverware, etcetera, which they will not know how to use. I have lately bought inexpensive plated salad forks—the new shape without the double prong—

Diet and Health

REDUCING BREADS AND OPERATIONS

"Dear Doctor, I am a farmerette, 36 years old, and have raised five children, the youngest seven years old. Two years ago, I weighed 212 pounds. (Most of my weight accumulated after an operation four years ago.) I followed your directions persistently for eight months and lost 65 pounds. "Some say that they lose appetite for sweets, but I can't say I did, and I'm afraid I'll always have a sweet tooth. However, the dietion has done more for me than to do away with my sweet tooth, for it has taught me will power and self-control. And I know that the 11 pounds which I have gained since then, I shall get rid of right away, for I am going to begin it over again. But thank goodness, this time on a much smaller scale!"

"Will you please tell me something about reducing breads? Will they really reduce?"—Mrs. B. My secretary bursts out with "She ought to be ashamed to ask such a question after reading our column." She's young, however, and has the hardness of youth. No, Mrs. B., there is no bread or food of any kind that will give you a sweet tooth, but the bread which reduces you, but the regime you follow when you carry out the instructions which come with the bread. And those instructions invariably say: "Eat no other kind of bread; nothing sweet; no fruit or sugar; eat very little fat, etc." You get out from this how many calories you eat out. You can get just as fat on white bread, just exactly. It

My Dear Followers: When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing breads is the only one for which you must enclose ten cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, not over 200 words, and type or write them plain, with ink. Please give your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Do not expect the enclosed stamped envelopes if you expect me to send you the material I have offered.

PART TIME TRADES COURSE TO START IN HIGH SCHOOL

A cooperative part-time occupational education course will be added to the curriculum of the Roseburg high school in September. Cooperation of local employers with the school has made possible the starting of the course here and local shops will be used to give high school boys training in the trades. Boys registering for the course will spend part time in the school and part time in the shops or on construction jobs.

C. E. CONFERENCE WILL START AT TURNER AUG. 30

Advance registrations for the seventh Oregon Christian Endeavor Leadership Training Conference to be held at Turner August 30 to September 6, 1926, indicate a splendid attendance by young people from many parts of the state.

Preparations for the conference are in the hands of a committee, consisting of Miss Mary Guyley of Eugene, chairman; Rev. Mr. Walter L. Myers of Eugene, dean; Mr. Dallas C. Rice of Portland, business manager and treasurer; Miss Viola Osgen of Portland, secretary and registrar; and Mr. E. D. Gidger of Portland, publicity manager.

Morning classes will include: Bible study given by the Rev. James Alken Smith, well known Presbyterian minister; song leading by Rev. Mr. Ross Guiley, of Eugene; society publicly by Mrs. Ross Guiley, also work by Dallas C. Rice, "Expert window" by Miss Viola Osgen; society recreation by Rev. Mr. Myers; missions by Miss Hukka Anderson of La Grande; Intermediate leadership by Mrs. Dallas C. Rice; and general agency addresses by Rev. Mr. Paul C. Brown of Los Angeles, Pacific Coast Secretary of Christian Endeavor.

During the afternoon there will be informal fellowship and recreation including swimming, volleyball, basketball, and other games, under the direction of the Rev. Ross Guiley.

Each evening there will be an inspirational address and an outdoor bon fire meeting, the latter being led by Mr. Brown, and said to be the best feature of the conference by many of the delegates each year.

Reports of the recent World's Christian Endeavor convention in London will be given by Mr. Brown and by Miss Elaine Cooper of Portland, both of whom are expected to return by that time. Turner is on the main line of the Southern Pacific, ten miles south of Salem. Christian Endeavor members and leaders and friends are expected from many parts of the state. Registrations are being received at 303 Livingston Building, Portland, and information is being sent out from there to all who are interested.
