

Endanger Glory of Early Career When Englishmen Accept Peerage

LONDON, July 27.—British public men need some sort of Lacy Stone League to protect them against losing the glory of their early careers when they are converted into peers and assume a lordly title.

Lord Oxford and Asquith is an example. As plain "Mr. Asquith" he was known to everyone in the empire. As premier he had the greatest glory which can come to a British subject. All other Asquiths and Asquiths took a back seat for the premier.

Even after he left office at the beginning of the war he remained a great leader in the liberal party and ran neck and neck with Lloyd George as a prominent figure in British politics.

"Lord Oxford" Small Identity. But when plain Mr. Asquith was no longer able to withstand the banishments of a peerage and became Lord Oxford and Asquith, he began to slip. By degrees the Asquith was lost in the newspapers and he became merely Lord Oxford.

The name suggests the university, or the dictionary.

That put him into the class with hundreds of lords who are merely lords by virtue of birth, because they have given liberality to charities or distinguished themselves by public service. Also it robbed him of the right to sit in the house of commons, and sitting in the house of lords is a thankless task.

Lloyd George Avoids Peerage. Lloyd George has avoided a peerage. He realizes that the house of commons is the forum which is really important. Consequently he held an advantage over Lord Oxford and Asquith in the struggle they were having for supremacy in the liberal party.

Lord Birkenhead is another who took a chance when he accepted a peerage. He had been Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, which is a sort of combination of the posts of president of the senate and chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, and was ranked as one of Great Britain's ablest legal lights.

Staggering under the plebeian name of F. E. Smith, he managed to lend brilliancy even to that name but when a peerage was tendered, he assumed the more high-sounding title of Lord Birkenhead. By attacks on what he described as the stupidity and inactivity of the house of lords membership, however, he has kept himself in the limelight through suggestions for its reform.

William E. Gladstone did not accept a peerage. He saw danger to a liberal politician in the assumption of the nobles which membership in the house of lords carries with it. Arthur Balfour declined to become a peer for many years and as plain Mr. Balfour became one of Britain's greatest diplomats.

Must Have Publicity.

The great majority of old peerages are held by men known only to the owners of baronetcy and of the social and sporting columns of prominent British newspapers. A lord is on the defensive, and must show great anxiety to attract attention from the general public, and gain space in the press. Stanley Macdonald and Lloyd George had universal fame but their light might be put under a bushel were they to become peers and assume some insignificant name which would really associated itself with their activities as premiers and party leaders.

152 GOLF COURSES NEAR CHICAGO; THOUSANDS PLAY

CHICAGO, July 26.—(A. P.)—Golf courses around Chicago grow up faster than statistics can be compiled, but there are now 152 more or in the making, according to the last two years' work on the fast growing industry in the Cook county forest preserves.

Four such forest links are now open and one of them accommodated 741 players one fine Sunday in June. The two new ones will make thirty-five public fee courses around the city. The county board's plan for building them in the fee class is to remove the cost from the taxpayer, while the players pay very little. When the fees have repaid the builders for their expenditure, the forest courses are turned over to the county board.

Golf enthusiasts boast that Chicago has five per cent. of all the links in the country, and ten per cent. of the players, largely because of the great number open to the public at nominal charge.

WOMEN'S VOICES TOO WEAK TO ANNOUNCE

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

NEW YORK, July 28.—The female of the species is more territorial than the male as a radio announcer, ten thousand fans have accused.

The Radio Corporation of America today announced that replies to 10,000 questionnaires sent to radio fans in all parts of the country had brought a 92.3 per cent. rejection of women as radio announcers.

The feminine voice, the fans voted, is not suited to announcing. As singers, as executives on instruments, and for special "spoken pieces," they expressed a high regard for women, but chose men as announcers.

and still have congested on all of them," said Prof. Leon G. Krantz of Northwestern University, who developed last year's Big Ten Champion golf team.

"The public courses take care of an estimated 100,000 persons in Chicago. From a practical standpoint, it is money well spent for a club to develop an excellent links and make it attractive, because realtors will swarm down on them and make tempting offers for it as a subdivision."

CULT LEADER MOVES ON DONATED HOLLAND LAND

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 28.—Krishnamurti, young Hindu whom the Theosophists look to as the coming "world teacher," has announced his intention to make Castle Eerde, in north Holland, the headquarters of the "Theosophical" movement. The castle is situated on a magnificent estate of 5,000 acres, which was given to the order of Star of the East two years ago by Baron Van Pallandt.

Krishnamurti declared he would reside at the castle three months each year. Emphasizing the international aspect of the order, he pointed out that the movement was being organized with four world centers, at Adyar, India; Ommen, Holland; Sydney, N. S. W., and Ojai, Calif. There four centers will provide places where the members may reside, and be trained in spiritual work.

NEW HOUSEKEEPER FOR CAL VERSATILE

IPSWICH, Mass., July 24.—(A.P.)—"Fried clams like mother made" may be part of the menu of President Coolidge's family with the advent of Miss Ellen Riley as housekeeper.

While her duties are not directly with the preparation of food, Miss Riley, in twenty years residence in Ipswich, has acquired an expert knowledge of the preparation of clams, for Ipswich is noted for its clams and its clams. She has a preference for the clams as prepared by her mother.

Lover Of Outdoors. Although her father, William J. Riley, is secretary of the Ipswich chamber of commerce, Miss Riley is so averse to publicity that as soon as she learned that she was likely to receive the appointment as housekeeper for the Coolidge family, she carefully hid her only photograph and declined to tell reporters anything about herself.

Among her friends this unassuming woman, who is tall, sturdily built and has black hair and grey eyes, is known as quiet, genial and efficient, a lover of the outdoors and of animals and an accomplished pianist and singer. Waiving is her principal recreation.

Trained As Dietitian

Miss Riley was trained for the work of a dietitian at the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston. At different times during the world war she was in charge of government canteens and cafeterias at Princeton and Hampton Roads. For the last seven years she has managed the employees' restaurant of R. H. Stearns and Company, the Boston department store with which Frank W. Stearns, close friend of President Coolidge, is connected.

She has always assisted in the house work, but has left most of the cooking to her mother. She has not had her hair bobbed. She does not dance.

Keeps Old Hat.

For years her favorite companion on her hikes was an Irish terrier which she had raised from a puppy.

"She was broken up when that terrier died," said her father. "That is, he didn't up and die. He was too old and one day I took him along with me and never brought him back."

After her appointment was made public one of her neighbors suggested to her that probably she would be getting a new hat. "No, indeed," was the prompt and laughing reply.

POWER COMPANY PREFERRED STOCK ADVANCES IN PRICE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—

The price of Great Western Power Company of California six per cent preferred stock has advanced from $29 to $29.50 a share. The new price is now effective, according to an announcement from the company. This is another reflection of the demand for investment securities.

The Great Western's 6 per cent preferred stock was placed on the market last year at an initial offering price of $27.14 per share, following discontinuance of the sale of the 7 per cent preferred. The active demand for public utility securities has caused the rise in price to the present level of $29.50 a share during the past few months. The number of shares which can be purchased by any one subscriber has also been set at a limited number, even at the new price of $29.50 a share.

The preferred stock of the California Oregon Power Company, another investment opportunity of strong merit with good yield, sells rapidly in investment circles at the price announced during the latter part of May. More than a thousand shares of this new power preferred stock issue have been sold during the last few weeks by the California Oregon Power Company in its field of service throughout Southern Oregon and Northern California.

Throughout the entire field, careful investors are quickly taking advantage of the opportunity to secure some shares of this attractive public utility security while available at its present selling price.

MOVIE STARS TAKE NAMES SUITABLE TO PERSONALITY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 27.—

(A. P.)—Names of movie stars suit their personalities and if those possessed are not satisfactory more suitable ones should be provided.

So believe the players in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in advancing reasons why many of the film actors assume other than their own surnames.

Ramon Novarro's name, for example, was intended to inspire romantic thoughts of Spanish dons, while this effect would perhaps be nullified, it was thought, by the actual prefix of Sainanlego, his birthname. None would associate the name of Olga Crone with the film, English type of beauty which characterizes Claire Windsor, and so Olga Crone is a name long forgotten.

Sally O'Neill—"sure an' she's Irish"—was a name transformed from Chetey Noonan into one that sounded even more Irish than her own.

Carmel Myers and Mae Busch, on the other hand, consider their own names sufficiently well chosen for the type of roles they are called upon to play—sinnos, exotic vampires.

Charles Ray's appellation remains his own, because it conjured up thoughts of a clean-cut American boy.

Foreign players seldom are called upon to portray native American roles and, therefore, they can retain their own names, as in the cases of Roy D'Arcy, Lars Hanson, Greta Garbo and Karl Dane.

These same essentials in perfect co-ordination—quick start, the full stride of power, and force sustained to the very end [finish]—are necessary to good gasoline. Associated through its distinctive range of boiling points insures this kind of a performance: no sputter when you step on the starter, no miss when you give her the gas, and always a smooth supply of adequate power from start to finish. That's why Associated is Champion. Associated is always associated with "more miles to the gallon."
