THRILL HUNTERS

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER 27.

After a week, during which Clare saw her dashing mother hardly at all, she took counsel with Maggie.

"We ought to get her to rest more, Maggie. She cried for an hour the other day, because she found some gray hairs."

"An' is that disgraceful?" "Certainly not, you also thing. But she hates so to think she'll be old some day and she just burns herself up running away from it."

"Burns herself, is it? Then ye might try fightin' fire wit' fire. This known to succeed, me lamb of the world."

Clare went off to think it over. Supposing she pitted her youth and a great deal of mock-rock-lessness against Amy's red-headed and mock-youth? Would one tear down the other and free them both? Or would she only alienate her mother?

She'd always been rather gulleless; too much so Amy declared. Could she act a part convincingly?

"I've tried about everything else," she reasoned. "All I can do is my best. I'll bet I could be a wickedder vamp than Val at the worst. Who knows?"

The role didn't please her, however. It seemed cheap, so-called. She wondered if she might induce her mother to drop things for a visit at some quiet place.

But Amy wouldn't hear of it. "Something's got to happen before we leave here," she said. "I've already blown in too much of our capital."

"We're spending, though, all the time. What can happen, Mother?"

Amy was thoughtful. "Has Bob said anything yet? Anything about the future?"

So that was it! They were hanging on here, living beyond their means, in the hope that the elusive saturday would marry—well, whom? Clare?

"No, Amy. He hasn't proposed. Listen, we could get along all right on what we have with a little care. We don't need all this display."

"We could, but we won't! I've tried it, my dear, and it's no kind of a life. My Lord, with things almost in our hands! It seems when I might manage a little better. When I was your age—"

It was up to Clare, then. She'd have to go ahead with her plan, to rescue Amy from her silly, vacant life. She'd have to win her way by robbing her of it! Perhaps there'd be a bit of satisfaction in proving to her that she wasn't irresistible. "Oh, what am I thinking?" Clare asked herself. "I want to help my mother. But sometimes you have to hurt in order to help."

So she said, meekly enough, that she'd try to do better, and she'd begin by attending a party arranged for the Van Zee roof that very night!

"The crowd made up, but I guess you could slip in. Anyway, the lines were about Amy's mouth, 'perhaps you can drag out Bob. Ticky Swan is taking Val, but Bob—I don't know what's got into him lately. He's—oh, I don't know. Ring him up, will you?'"

Clare telephoned Saterly with such success that he was at the hotel a half hour early. She was ready for him in a frock she'd bought especially for the occasion; a thing whose arrogant orange made her hair running copper and contrasted strangely with the blue of her eyes.

He pretended to be stricken speechless, then he settled down to the absorbing business of making love. And she remembered her promise and did her part.

When Amy appeared, Clare arose and stood beside her, watching the man. It was a little heartless, perhaps. For she was aware that just as surely as the gold of her gown extinguished Amy's subdued gloom, her young freshness dimmed the older woman's charm. And she knew that Saterly knew.

None who attended that revel forgot the light on the Van Zee roof. To Clare, as long as she lived, the memory of it was to bring a thrill of triumph and of hot shame. Triumph because of a new and sure sense of her desirability, her power to command admiration, shame for what she felt herself forced to do to Amy.

Her mother's somewhat routine gaiety that fell that evening with her own building mirth; her mother's bids for attention that she caught and turned aside; her mother's smouldering rage!

The climax of their rivalry came about when Amy, with one of the roof's professional "hosts," drew a marmite of appreciation with a very creditable rendition of the Charleston—as Charleston's go.

Clare smiled at the glaze and he asked her for a number. She knew the steps only from having watched Amy practice. But she was a natural dancer and a good copyist and her fantastic gown furnished atmosphere.

Before the music stopped she and her partner had the floor to themselves; afterward there was applause. And they convulsed through an encore.

Amy kept up a pose of rather bored amusement until Saterly left them at their suite. Then, without a word, she went into her room and closed the door.

FIRE GREATER ENEMY OF NORTH WOODS ANIMALS

ST. PAUL, July 30.—Touched by the moaning of countless mother birds and the misery of the entire forest family following man-caused forest fires, Ranger C. S. Lind of the Minnesota forest service, urges suspension of fishing privileges which takes "respectable killers from the city and self-styled sports" into the woods during the dangerous spring fire season.

He estimated that 1926 spring conflagrations, eighty per cent of which were started by fishermen, destroyed more game in two days than all the game poachers have killed in the same territory since game protection became a law.

Ranger Lind, in a report to his chief, told of the misfortune overtaking innumerable fawn, calf, moose and the smaller species. Scores of burned and maimed young deer and moose were found after the fire. Most of them had to be destroyed for lack of facilities to care for them in the isolated woods.

AUTOS NOW MAY ENTER YOSEMITE IN FEW HOURS

Yosemite Valley, Cal., July 31.—Motorists from many parts of the United States joined with state and national officials today in celebration of the opening of a new highway into this mountain and playground.

The new route takes the "shut-out" of getting into the valley, shortens the trip through elimination of terrible grades, from nearly a day to three hours (from Merced), and will make possible keeping the Yosemite open the year around. The road was carved by convict labor through eighteen miles of solid granite that walls Merced River canyon.

The opening of the new way comes 25 years after the first automobile entered Yosemite Valley. It is 75 years since the first white man stood on the brink of the valley and gazed rapt and speechless at the magnificent artistry of nature spread out at his feet.

Tomorrow a striking outdoor pageant depicting the discovery of the valley in 1851 will be presented in Royal Arch Meadows under the direction of Garnet Holmes.

JERSEY ISLANDS ROCKED.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) ST. HELIER, JERSEY, Channel Islands, July 31.—Two further slight earth shocks were felt here this morning but no damage is reported. Large buildings were rocked several seconds by a quake yesterday and several chimneys collapsed.

Now is the time to repair or replace your roof. Shingles and roofing at Page's. Old shingles are right.

GOLF TOURNAMENT TO BE PLAYED TOMORROW

A fifteen-man golf team, representing the Roseburg County club, will go to Marshfield tomorrow to play the last tournament for the season with the Coos County club. Marshfield has won two matches and Roseburg one in the tournaments staged so far. Roseburg expects to make a determined struggle to even the score in tomorrow's match.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

PLEASING TO HEAD OF G. N. RAILROAD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SEATTLE, Wash., July 31.—Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern railroad, who is returning to St. Paul after an inspection trip of Pacific northwest lines of the system, said here today:

"On the whole our business promises to exceed considerably that of 1925.

"There is every reason to believe the coming fall and winter will bring a marked increase in the demand for North Pacific coast lumber.

"Grain production in our territory will be about as large as last year, which was a good crop year. With two good crops harvested, the purchasing power of the farmers should be increased to a point that will assure liberal lumber buying for farm improvements."

AUTOIST LEAPS, SAVING HIS LIFE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) MEDFORD, Ore., July 31.—George L. Myers of Central Point narrowly escaped death or injury this noon at the McAndrews railroad crossing. When he saw the car he was driving would hit a slow moving Southern Pacific freight train, he leaped out. The automobile was badly wrecked, impaired vision was given as the cause of the smash-up.

LUMBER PLANT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SPOKANE, Wash., July 31.—The Wendor-Rogers Lumber mill here was destroyed today by fire starting in a shavings bin, which also burned five cars of lumber on a nearby siding. Damage was estimated at upwards of $100,000. Piled lumber was saved by the direction of the wind.

GREEN DEMURS TO LIQUOR CHARGE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—Colonel Ned Green, suspended federal prohibition administrator for northern California and Nevada, entered a demurrer in the United States district court today to an indictment charging him with the illegal withdrawal of certain liquor stocks from government warehouses. The matter was continued for two weeks.

A squad of government checkers reported to their superiors that a careful check up of the warehouses

GOOD HEALTH NECESSARY

Many Busy Women Owe Their Health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are many occupations open to women. Today they work in great factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators.

But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 500 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.
