LEGION TO STAND BEHIND BOY SCOUT PROGRAM IN STATE

Organization on Record at Coos Bay as Cooperating in Work of Training Future Citizens.

That the American Legion in the state of Oregon should take an active place in Boy Scout activities, is the report made by the committee on scout work at the convention being held at Coos Bay. This report was submitted to the entire convention, and will govern that department of American Legion activity during the future. The committee in its report says:

Because of the length of time that elapsed, following the seventh annual convention at Omaha last October, before plans for Boy Scout work were forwarded to the various departments, this committee was not appointed in time to make a real showing. This, however, being due to no fault of the department commander.

In order to determine just what work along this line the posts were already doing, questionnaires were mailed out to approximately 100 posts in the state. Fifty-one replies were received. Out of the fifty-one, forty-two were doing something in scouting. The other nine were interested and willing. We take it then, that those posts that did not reply to the questionnaire, though not opposed to scouting, are not greatly interested as others.

The national headquarters, the state department and this committee hope to see this department 100 per cent behind scouting.

Reasons For Cooperation.

The reasons for this cooperation are contained in a report given by a special boy scout committee as adopted at the convention in Nebraska, October 1925:

(a) Both organizations are national in character and both operate under charters granted by the Congress of the U. S.

(b) The preamble to the American Legion Constitution specifies ten purposes, eight of which relate to the welfare of our country. The Boy Scouts program is in harmony with these eight purposes.

(c) One fundamental purpose of Scouting is character building. Scouting accomplishes results in developing the physical, mental, moral and spiritual qualities of boys.

(d) Another basic purpose of Scouting is citizenship training. Scouting is an effective means of training the boy of today to assume the duties and responsibilities of creditable citizenship in the years ahead. Well over a half million boys are now receiving that training.

(e) The primary need of Scouting is additional qualified leadership. The extension of Scouting is limited by the number of available volunteer adult leaders. Many Legionnaires are especially qualified for Scout leadership.

(f) The Legion is pledged to the service of the community, state and nation. The development and training of our boys towards higher character and citizenship standards represent an opportunity for the Legion to render important service to the community, state and nation.

Present Cooperation.

A survey of Legion cooperation with Scouting based on data from both organizations, indicates a large increase in the amount and character of such activities. It shows that over 1000 scout troops have been formed and sponsored by Posts.

Posts have also assisted in financial campaigns, provided for camp sites, awarded flags and service stars, arranged for meeting places for troops and in the case of the Eugene Post, organized the entire Lane County Council of Boy Scouts.

Recommendations Given.

Your Department committee regards the present record of Legion cooperation as worthy of highest commendation. This record is interpreted, however, as proving very clearly that, to make such cooperation more effective in the future, the Legion should reduce the wide spread dispersion of its cooperative activities and concentrate its efforts upon more limited major objectives.

Since the basis of character building and citizenship training of the Boy Scout movement depends primarily upon the success of its outdoor program, and since Legionnaires are, by experience and training, especially qualified for leadership in all forms of camping and related outdoor activities, your committee recommends the following:

First: Place definite emphasis on the camping and Outdoor activities.

(a) Promoting, providing and conducting permanent and temporary Boy Scout camps in every community, according to established standards.

(b) Assist in organizing and conducting outdoor activities such as week-end hikes, rallies and athletic exhibitions.

(c) Assist in specific outdoor training activities and movements, such as: Pioneering and Woodcraft, swimming and life-saving, conservation of wild life, birds and nature studies, out-door cooking, compass work, camping, map-making and forest protection.

Second: Your committee also recommends the Legion continue to cooperate in meeting the special problems of scouting as they arise in respective communities, and in this connection suggest the following as guiding policies:

(a) That every Post be encouraged to organize a Boy Scout Troop, making special effort to reach under-privileged boys, or those who ordinarily have no opportunity to join troops affiliated with churches, schools or other established organizations.

(b) That Posts occupying permanent quarters extend the privileges of such quarters to troops having no permanent meeting place.

(c) That the above Scouting activities be placed on a permanent basis and not allowed to die out with the yearly change of Post officers.

(d) That so far as practicable, Legionnaires attend Scout training courses before assuming positions of Active Scout leadership. (These courses to be held in your own community).

KING COLLECTS WEAPONS INTENDED TO KILL HIM

LONDON, Aug. 6.—One of the hobbies of the King of Spain is collecting weapons, bombs and other relics of the many attempts which have been made to assassinate him.

King Alfonso, accompanied by the Queen, arrived in London from Paris almost simultaneously with discovery by the French police of a plot to take his life. He became much interested in the reports that his enemies had a new kind of revolver and the Monarch immediately started inquiries to ascertain just what kind of a gun it was. The King himself is somewhat of a shot and is keen on keeping pace with the times in this respect.

The courage and calmness of the King has long attracted attention. When a bomb was thrown at his carriage during his first visit to Paris, the King remarked: "I have received a baptism of fire without going to war."

The King has a jagged part of this shell which missed him only a few inches. Another relic in his collection is a feeding bottle which was used in an attempt to poison him as a baby. Another is the skeleton of a horse killed by a bomb thrown the day he married Princess Ena, grand-daughter of Queen Victoria.

EIGHT CONFISCATED STILLS DESTROYED AT REEDSPORT

Confiscated stills, the accumulation in the deputy sheriff's office in Reedsport during the past year were destroyed Saturday afternoon on court order by Deputy Sheriff Wm. C. Grubb. Eight stills in number were put to the hammer and mauled into a mangled form of copper. Coils which weighed approximately forty pounds were included in the destruction, according to the Port Umpqua Courier.

The copper which is found to the stills is saved until a quantity is secured and then sold by the county for the highest price.

It is stated that stills found today by officers are different from the ones first secured in this vicinity. Practically all stills now are made from copper, while early models were made from diverse containers. It is stated that one still discovered in this community several months ago was made from an abandoned milk can, and the product of that still was mostly poison.

ROSEBURG, OREGON

DIAMOND LAKE NOT TO BE INCLUDED IN CRATER LAKE PARK

briefly as spokesman for the delegation from the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce.

A. C. Marstera called attention to the fact that the national parks could give nothing for the benefit of the visitors at Diamond Lake that is not already being offered by the forest service, and that any change could only benefit the Crater Lake concessions.

O. S. Blanchard of the Grants Pass Chamber of Commerce showed in a brief talk that Diamond Lake is open to the public for a much longer period of time than Crater Lake, which is accessible only a comparatively few months, and that because of this geographical difference there should be no inclusion.

Harold Clifford, of the state game commission, made a most excellent showing, recounting the history of the stocking of Diamond Lake with fish. He called attention to the fact that Diamond Lake is noted for its wonderful fishing, a condition directly attributable to the efforts of the state of Oregon, for fish were carried in on backs to stock the lake, which is now the foremost egg taking station of the world. Because of the state's investment and its development work it rightfully resented any further federal encroachment, Mr. Clifford said. The lake was developed with money paid by Oregon sportsmen and they had a right to fish the lake according to their own regulations and not according to the regulations imposed by a parks bureau which had nothing whatever to do with making the lake the popular resort it has become.

Upton Speaker

Jay Upton of Bend declared that Diamond Lake should be given to the state of Oregon. He spoke on behalf of eastern Oregon stock interests, and the sporting organizations, who favor state ownership of the lake and surrounding territory.

Mr. Upton further called attention to the fact that the Crater Lake park interests cited their good roads as a reason for wanting Diamond Lake, promising that it would likewise be improved. Mr. Upton declared that the state of Oregon has done far more than the parks bureau in this connection, for while the national park has been wonderfully improved, the state has built the road which makes the park accessible.

The Lord built the lakes, the state built the roads, and the park bureau took the glory, was the substance of Mr. Upton's declaration.

R. J. Kirkwood, editor of the Oregon Sportsman and Fancier, read a letter from Secretary of the Interior Work in which the national parks bureau was criticized for attempting to go into recreational development, which, the letter stated, should be controlled by states and municipalities.

G. G. Warner of Pilot Rock, president of the Oregon Wool Growers association and of the Eastern Oregon Cattle and Horse Breeders' association, declared that stock interests believe the present arrangement should not be disturbed. The sheepmen of eastern Oregon have invested heavily, he stated. They are beginning to recover from exceptionally heavy losses, and the elimination of the grazing lands in the Diamond Lake district would work a great financial hardship and spell disaster for many.

W. R. Sprout of Pendleton, secretary of the Wool Growers association, kept his hearers in a gale of laughter, while he outlined the troubles between stockmen and the forest service, which he says for once are allied in a common cause.

"Obak" Wallace of Eugene, representing the Lane County Sportsmen's association, spoke on behalf of the sportsmen of his county.

A. C. Hough of Grants Pass spoke on behalf of the owners of home sites at the lake.

D. A. C. Seely, of Roseburg, called attention to the fact that Diamond Lake offers an ideal spot for Boy Scout headquarters for all of southern and central Oregon, and that plans have already been advanced to make the lake a yearly rendezvous for Boy Scouts when they may be outfitted and developed.

H. M. Covey, Portland Chamber of Commerce; I. A. Fitzgerald, a former resident of Roseburg, now president of the Sportsmen's association of Lakeview, J. A. Kelly of the Diamond Lake Improvement company, Paul McKee of the California Oregon Power company, and Dr. J. C. Van Dyke of Reedsport, president of the state sportsmen's association, were among other speakers.

State Given Advice

Every angle bearing upon the proposed inclusion of Diamond Lake was discussed after which Stephen J. Mather, of the National Parks Service, concluded the meeting with a statement of the aims and purposes of the park bureau.

He gave his hearers much food for thought by his well chosen words in behalf of national parks, impressing them with the diversity of purpose and the high motives which actuate him in the important work in which he is engaged.

He called attention to the great throngs of people who are being called out of doors by the national parks and the great benefit they receive thereby. He called attention to the fact that the national parks organization is engaged in turning out naturalists, who through studies in the restricted districts where nature may be studied undisturbed are able to write books or go into schools to teach children of the many wonders to be found.

He advised the influential men present to use their influence to bring Oregon up to date in the matter of parks. He stated that Oregon is one of the few states of the union far behind the times in this regard. The state should immediately take steps to develop public parks and recreational spots. Oregon, he said, is favored by God and nature above all other states in the matter of lakes and mountains which may be converted into playgrounds, and the state is neglecting a golden opportunity in not giving more attention to its recreational resources.

DELEGATION PAYS VISIT TO LEEPER DOME PROSPECT

A large delegation of Roseburg, Sutherlin and Oakland men yesterday visited the Leeper Dome oil well operations, west of Sutherlin. A heavy flow of gas has been tapped, the well having been capped until casing can be secured and put in place in order to permit further exploration. At the present time the flow of gas is very heavy, despite the fact that the gas must force its way up through hundreds of feet of water. This fact is believed to be evidence of a considerable quantity of natural gas at the present level of the hole.

Those in charge of the operations are very optimistic over the present outlook, for there is every indication that oil exists where such a gas flow is obtained. As the formations are as yet unproven, explorations are being conducted with care in order that no false step may endanger prospects.

All visiting the well yesterday were impressed by conditions as shown and are confident that future developments will be encouraging.

TRIO OF ROBBERS BIND HOTEL CLERK AND GET $100 CASH

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 7.—Having bound the night clerk of the Goodwin Hotel hand and foot, and gagged him with a handkerchief, three youthful bandits early today pounded open the locked cash drawer, and finally left with $100 in cash.

The night clerk, J. W. Lambert, was overpowered by the trio as he entered the lobby of the hotel from the wash room, and dragged back into it. They bound his legs together with lengths of wire and tied his hands behind him with twine.

They took their masks from their faces as they left. Lambert rolled from the lobby after they left and succeeded in attracting the attention of a man who was passing.

Signs on Broadway's White Way Would Illuminate City of 10,000

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Broadway's Great White Way uses enough electric power in its signs to provide for all needs of a town of 10,000 population.

These signs, flashing intermittently or standing in great banks of light, throw 25,000,000 candle power into the street, with a nightly current consumption of 17,800 kilowatt hours, it has been determined by the New York Edison company.

This display, dedicated to advertising, has grown from a little sign with 200 lamps placed where the Flatiron building now stands, which, in 1895, heralded: "Manhattan Beach Swept by Ocean Breezes."

Electricity Conserved

However, economy is exercised even in this prodigality of light. The theatre signs are lit at dusk, but often turned off before the performances are over. Many of the large signs shine only at specified hours when the large crowds are on the street. Supper clubs often do not light their signs until late when they wish to attract after-theatre groups.

Theatres Rank Seventh

There are 15,000 signs now on Broadway, with a present increase of about 5,000 annually, until space in which to hang or set them is at a premium.

Theatres, which originally made the otherwise drab street what it is, have dropped to seventh in the classification of users of signs, with about 7cu displays. Restaurants lead the procession with 2,885. Tobacco companies are near the top with 1,100.

In the most desirable spaces, the roofs of the buildings often bring a higher rental than offices. One four story building, only eight feet deep, erected solely for sign displays, brings an annual rental of $90,000.

Largest Sign Demolished

The largest sign in the world recently was demolished when the building holding it was wrecked. It contained twenty-one miles of wire, was 26 feet long and was as high as a five-story building.

Since its destruction, a sign atop the United States Rubber company building, advertising the company and its tires, is numbered among the largest. Facing north and south, the double display is set in a frame eighty-eight feet wide and fifty-three feet high. Its illumination is estimated at 250,000 candle power.

A sign advertising "The Big Parade" upholds the theatre's visual passage with 200,000 candle power of illumination, while the Chevrolet automobile sign, covered entirely with bulbs over an area of fifty by sixty-four feet, casts 175,000 candle power.

Challenges Stars

Two other signs, both of great size, stand high in the sky, one of them being that of the Fisk Tire company, a double display 354 feet above the street. Nearby is the Gotham bank sign, an eighty ton structure resting on the steel columns of the building 347 feet above the street.

A "color animation" sign, considered a radical innovation in display, made its appearance in advertising the motion picture "Don Juan." This new sign, employing the colors red and blue, makes it possible to create the illusion of fourteen different motions by figures on it.

The Great White Way is not only for the benefit of visitors to New York, but has a peculiar place in the heart of the city. When the signs were dimmed during the war in the interest of conservation, such a protest was raised that they were turned on again within a few days.
