THRILL HUNTERS

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER 44.

"Ted's a man of one idea," Clare thought, as she shuffled copper plugs and said "Order?" in the professionally remote voice of telephone operators.

"I ought to be glad he wants me so—that someone wants me! It's sure Amy does not. He was dreadfully stern the night of the accident; ready to snatch me away. Kept saying I'd never understand things.

"He's right, I suppose. Why did Amy fib to me? Why did she say she was going with Val when she knew all the time she was going to be with Satterly? Why was she on the Post Road when Rosecliffe Manor is away over on the Hudson? Or didn't she intend to go there at all?"

She went on, trying to puzzle it out, as she'd been doing for days now. She knew Satterly was back in the city, nearly recovered, though his arm still hung in white linen.

The usual calls for the mother; the light flashing and Amy's low voice asking for Satterly's number. Well, there was one thing she could do; she'd done it before often enough.

"Your number does not answer—"

"Someone is there, operator! You say every day they don't answer and there's always someone there!"

"I am sorry, Madam. I will try your number." A pause. "They do not answer!"

"I'm going to find out about this!"

Fifteen minutes later Clare was summoned to the manager's room. He said, from behind his desk. "There's a complaint from Mrs. Dean. Do you know—" And his words trailed off as a woman smothered a shriek. Standing pale and still, Clare was looking into her mother's eyes.

Amy raved hysterically, "What does this mean? I asked for the telephone operator! Is this a joke?"

"I am the operator, Mother. I've been working noon hours. I'm sorry about your number."

"Oh, I see it all now!" The rest as a blur with points standing out. Amy's back going thru the door; the manager's crisp, not unkindly voice: "We can't have trouble, Miss Eddy." And Clare's answer, "I'll resign now. I'll have to resign now!"

Maggie's head poked into Clare's room and the woman croaked, "The ner-rve of her! She's after comin' till a bad end, darlin' Don't be takin' on now." And to Grubs, who slid under her elbow, "Outta me sight monkey!"

"Aw—"

"Let him come in, Maggie. He's a good friend."

"Y' tootin', Miss." His pocket gave up a square of shortcake, only slightly crushed, and a marvelously intact pitcher of cream. "Say, we're all wit' y', Miss. She's a snortin' laloo. Say the word an' she'll get service'll give her somethin' t' squawk for all right, all right!"

"No, Grubs! Don't you dare! Um—shortcake. You old dear!"

"Aw—well, so long, Miss!"

Clare ate her Thanksgiving dinner in Val's apartment. Time was heavy on her hands now, with nothing to do, and Amy had gone back to her disdainful manner. Val was holding a celebration in honor of the holiday, and Bob Satterly, rather pointedly, asked to escort her.

The lipes appeared fleetly around Amys lips but she said, "Yes, do take her, Bob. It'll be really kind."

He answered "Meow!" softly and Clare monopolized his attention through the noise and glitter of the long meal while cocktails gave place to wine that flowed like fountains in glasses quickly emptied. Clare found herself giggling a great deal.

"Happy, Princess?" Satterly's arm stole around her. "Lovely, lovely youngster! Eyes all bright—I've wanted to see you like that! Listen, let's grab a couple of quarts and get out of here. I want you to myself. Come on, baby!"

"Oh, you're drunk, Bob. You needn't fill my glass. I've had enough. You're a great one Satterly aren't you."

"Would you break my heart, precious? But you didn't mean it. Remember once you kissed me? One morning, long ago. How I loved you!"

"Yes you did! You went away without telling me goodbye!"

"Had to, else I couldn't have left! Come on, lets get out of here—"

It was then that Amy, dancing with Ticky Swan, went limp in his arms. They carried her to her own room to "sleep it off."

THE GIST OF THE BIBLE

ARTICLE NO. 29

JOEL, THE PROPHET OF PENTECOST

Joel was one of the earliest of the prophets of Judah, probably exercising his ministry near the times of Elijah and Elisha, about eight hundred years before Christ.

The burden of his message is a certain fearful time of judgment which he mentions five times as "the day of the Lord."

The key-note of his prophecy is struck in 1:15, in the words, "Alas for the day, for the day of the Lord is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come."

Joel made very vivid the desolation that God would send upon Judah and Jerusalem by likening God's destroying hosts to a scourge of locusts which probably at the very time was spreading desolation and famine through the land, cutting off the food supply of man and beast, and making it difficult to secure even the sacrifices necessary to maintain the temple services.

In the shadow of the judgment of this "day of the Lord" Joel pleaded with priests and the people alike to turn to the Lord in genuine repentance, saying, "Rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord your God for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness."

Joel prophesied not only things which were near at hand, but also things which were not fulfilled until eight hundred years after his time, as well as things which are not yet fulfilled and will not be fulfilled until the final judgment attending the second coming of Christ.

It was one of these prophesies of Joel which the Apostle Peter took as his text for that wonderful sermon on the Day of Pentecost, and which he said was fulfilled in the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on that day: "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel: And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit." (Compare Joel 2:28-32 with Acts 2:16-21.)

Three thousand souls found the way of salvation in that pentecostal sermon through repentance and faith in Jesus Christ and there is no other way of salvation for any of us.

Those who have not yet found it should earnestly heed the solemn words of Joel, where he says of them: "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."

MR. AND MRS. PARKS WILL MAKE HOME IN CALIFORNIA

Charles W. Parks, "Pete" to his scores of friends, terminates forty-five years' residence in Roseburg on September 1, next, when, with Mrs. Parks, he will move to San Bernardino, Cal., to make his future home. Today Mr. Parks completed a deal for the sale of his residence property at 415 South Jackson street to Mrs. Bertha Parrott.

For twenty-three years, beginning in 1881, Mr. Parks was associated with his father, the late Allen Parks, in the grocery business in Roseburg. Afterward he served nearly nine years as postmaster of the city, then after temporary retirement, was employed as a salesman at the Culver hardware store. During his early residence in the city, Mr. Parks served as a city councilman and was a member of the old volunteer fire department. "Pete" promises to return to Roseburg occasionally for a chat with old friends and acquaintances.

San Bernardino is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Parks' daughter, Mrs. G. G. Stewart, whose husband is a civil engineer, formerly located in Roseburg.

HEADLINERS ON EUGENE CARD PUT UP LIVELY DRAW

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 21—"Olympia Kid" Johnson of Olympia, Washington, and the dusky George Dixon of Portland, welterweights, went ten rounds to a draw here yesterday afternoon in the headliner of the open air boxing program. It was a busy ten rounds for both boxers. They mixed readily and made it a real scrap.

Young Tracy, substituting for Joe Marcus of Portland, lightweight, was put away for the final count in the third round by Ralph Moore. Tracy went down four times in the second round, and came out of his corner groggy in the third.

Phil Bayes of Salem won a six round decision over Johnny Kelly of Portland. Harold "Red" Davis of Eugene and Jimmy Demith of Corvallis went four rounds to a draw, while Billy "Kid" Wilburn of Eugene won a four-round decision over Joe McMasters of Notl.

MOVIE NOTES

LIBERTY THEATRE

"Wolf Hunters" Boasts Powerful Aggregation of Talent.

One of the strongest casts ever assembled in a single production will be seen in "The Wolf Hunters", which has been announced by Manager Gross of the Liberty theatre as the stellar attraction at his house for 3 days beginning tomorrow.

"The Wolf Hunters," adapted to the screen from a widely read novel by the ever popular James Oliver Curwood, is a story of life in the frozen north country and has to do with the activities of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

The principal male role is played by Alan Roscoe, well and favorably known through his many excellent characterizations in the past. Opposite him is found Virginia Brown Faire, a ravishingly lovely brunette of extra-ordinary capabilities. Robert McKim contributes an excellent —and sinister — characterization while David Torrence is seen in a sympathetic role.

ANTLERS THEATRE

Love and intrigue in the court of Mauranie forms the basis of the plot of "The Love Thief," the colorful mythical kingdom picture which brings Norman Kerry to the Antlers today.

It is heralded as one of the most unusual sets and bizarre lighting erica, combining the excellence of American acting and directing with unusual sets and bizarre lighting effects such as featured "The Cabinet of Doctor Caligari" and "Siegfried."

Romance and a strange mixup of hearts as well as a threatened war between the countries of the two lovers combine to make "The Love Thief' an exceedingly interesting story. Greta Nissen, noted Norwegian screen star, plays opposition.

What is Tom Meighan's secret? Whatever it is—he surely has the ability to pack a theatre when one of his pictures is announced.

But when one thinks it over, Meighan's popularity would seem to be due his likeable personality. Tom's being "six foot two; eyes of blue," helps of course. And then, let's not forget that he's an actor—a mighty fine one.

Now—glory be to heaven, Tom has a new role worthy of his talents. "The New Klondike", which comes to the Antlers tomorrow for a run of three days, finds him enacting the part of Tom Kelly, a crack pitcher of the New York Baseball Club. Lila Lee plays opposite the star. His supporting cast includes Paul Kelly, Fritzi Brunette, Vera Sisson, Charles Winninger, and a host of others. Ring Lardner wrote the tale as an original story.
