THRILL HUNTERS

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER 47.

Maggie winked and wagged her head until the twist of hair almost flew off. She managed, altogether, such an air of mystery one December afternoon that Clare howled with enjoyment.

"Go, Maggie, you're funny! What's the dark plot?"

"Funny, ye say! An I'll have ye know 'tis not me as riles ye, me gird!"

"Why you're not angry with me, dear? I thought you were only fooling. What is it?"

"Ye ask? Well, then, I'm just learnin' that me boud Mr. Satterly will open his country house for a party, come night. His country house—"

"Oh! Clare's mirth was it gone now. 'Now I understand. That's where they were when the car turned over!'"

"This a shame forever!"

"Tonight! How do you know?"

"Herself was gigglin' wit' me boud Miz Hanlon an me boud Mr. Swan an the Satterly may be fall on his foot, danced like Indians. Thinks I, 'The colleen shall hear of it!'"

"Amy is mad! It's their fault though. You're going home, Maggie? Oh, see Amy, I'll talk to her now—"

Mrs. Dean kicked a week-end bag out of sight and smiled like a schoolgirl at her daughter's flushed and determined face.

"Well, infant?"

"Mother, you shan't go! Oh, I know all about it! I know every thing! It's worse than all the other things you've done. They'll drink and wreck the car. Besides—"

"—no, you must listen to me, Amy! People don't understand that you're just careless; they say frightful things about you and Val going up there. And Bob will think you don't care—can't you see? You shan't. Mother! I won't let you!"

"She stopped, out of breath. Amy continued to smile, though her fingers tightened on the buffer flashing across her nails. 'You're all stirred up about nothing, my dear.'"

"You mean it's all right, Amy? You mean you want to go?"

"Certainly I'll go. You've said enough, Clare. This stern parent act of yours is ridiculous. I've said all I'll stand. If you're through now I'll finish dressing."

Clare waited in a sort of daze while her mother put on her hat and carefully tied a veil over the points of bronze on her cheeks. Amy's milk coat was beginning to show signs of wear, but it was the color of her eyes and she wore it regally. She rescued the bag and started jauntily toward the door, but the girl darted ahead.

"You shan't!" she cried. "You shan't! And the door slammed as she stepped into the little room outside and turned the key."

She sat beside the ringing telephone while her mother stormed. The stern parent act and the wayward child! Only it was upside down. The whole world was upside down. People talked of the "young generation." What did they know about it? The older generation was the violent one!

They were calling Amy, Satterly probably, while Val and Ticky Swan waited impatiently. Let them call! This was high-handed, but Amy was mad. Things crashed in the bedroom; she was running wild in there. The bell shrilled at ten minute intervals and she could hear her mother's angry sobbing.

This would finish Clare; Amy's resentment more than when she'd stopped Ted giving up the laboratory. But tomorrow she'd go to Satterly and say some things...

There must have been silence for a long time without her being aware of it. At least an hour passed before the ringing stopped; then gusts of December cold slid under the bedroom door.

A little cry she sprang up and turned the key, only to see a disordered, empty room with an open window. Flakes of snow were damp on her head, as she leaned over the fire-escape. A tuft of milk was caught in the iron and narrow tracks packed the white.

Amy had climbed from a ninth-story window; scrambled down a fire-escape with French heels!

That was why the telephone and all. Amy had fainted last night. She said she'd gone and she had gone, like the heroine of a movie thriller!

U. OF O. TEACHER STRUCK BY AUTO

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 25.—If E. Hewitt, said to be connected with the University of Oregon faculty, was knocked to the pavement as he attempted to cross Thirteenth Avenue East, near University street, just before the Kiwanis convention came to a close last night, he sustained a fractured skull and is in a critical condition at a local hospital. His address was given as 726 Stony street, McMinnville.

Hewitt was struck by the car when he attempted to dodge another machine coming from the opposite direction.

DIET AND HEALTH

reaches the home. For instance, if the bottle of milk is left on the doorstep, dogs and cats may lap it up—this frequently happens—and flies, perhaps carrying disease germs, may light on it. (Therefore the necessity of carefully washing the top, so that when the milk is poured over the lip of the bottle it will not be contaminated.) Milk may also become contaminated by diseased persons who handle it in the home, unless they are very careful.

All foods must be protected from dust and insects and this is especially true of milk. Unless it is kept in the original bottle, it should be kept in a seamless, non-rusting dish and it should be placed in the refrigerator on or touching the ice. In summer, if milk is to be kept over a day and there is no ice chest, it is best to boil it and cool it as rapidly as possible under running water.

Pasteurized Milk.

Pasteurized milk is milk that has been heated to a temperature of 140 to 145 degrees F., and kept at that temperature for 30 minutes. (212 degrees is the boiling temperature.) Sometimes it is heated higher than that, and not held so long as the higher temperature. The lower temperature for a longer period is most used now, for it alters the flavor of the milk less.

Pasteurized milk loses practically none of its food value, with the exception of part of the vitamins which protect against scurvy. This is of importance when it is given to babies who are on an exclusive milk diet. Then the full quota of orange juice—or, failing this, tomato, fresh cabbage or turnip juice—must be given to make up the lack of vitamins. Pasteurization kills the dangerous forms of bacteria and is much safer to use, unless you can get certified milk.

A point to remember: Milk that is pasteurized or boiled does not sour so readily as raw milk. So these milks, if kept too long, may be stale and unwholesome even though they do not taste sour.

Milk is such an important food, that I will continue the subject tomorrow.

MOVIE NOTES

LIBERTY THEATRE

Theda Bara Now a Comedy Star.

When a man bites a dog, that is news, and when Theda Bara, the greatest vampire the screen has ever known, turns comedienne, that is also news. The "Siren of the Silverheel," as she has been called by some romantic critic, was recently persuaded by Hal Roach, producer of short feature comedies, to play in a fun picture which would be a satire and travesty on the eternal "vampire."

The very word that Miss Bara put into the lexicon of screendom with her impersonations of "Carmen" and "Cleopatra." The result was "Madame Mystery," which will be one of the attractions today and Thursday at the Liberty theatre.

Jane Novak, one of screendom's most beautiful blondes and an actress whose box office has steadily increased since the days of her early screen work opposite William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Tom Mix and others, is featured in the part of Antonia Lee in Banner Productions' new picture, "Whispering Canyon," made from John G. Saxe's novel, which will be the feature attraction at the Liberty theatre for two days, beginning today. Her role is that of a plucky young girl whose father, upon his death, left her a tract of valuable California timber land known as Whispering Canyon.

Other players who help to make this film an ace among melodramas are Robert Ellis, Lee Shumway, James Swickard, Eugene Pallette, Joseph Mason and Edward Brady.

ANTLERS THEATRE

Wives Are Rented in Antlers Picture

A social service bureau with a section devoted to supplying unattached men with a female escort of companion, and at the same time a time bar, such is the unique idea behind "Watch Your Wife," Universal Jewel costarring Virginia Hall and Pat O'Malley, and now being screened at the Antlers theatre "Watch Your Wife" places romance on a business basis and is a most appealing domestic comedy drama. It is featured by many striking sets and handsome gowns. Among the players are Helen Lee Worthing, Nat Carr, Albert Conti, Aggie Herring and Norm Hayden. "Watch Your Wife" was directed by Svend Gade.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

How much personal liberty should young people be allowed? Where is the dividing line between liberty and license? Can good morals be legislated into a community?

These are some of the questions asked and answered by the gripping photodrama entitled, "Enemies of Youth," which began an engagement at the Majestic theatre Tuesday. The locale of the story is a typical American small town, and its characters are the prototypes of people whom you and I know. It graphically and vividly tells the story of a clean-cut young district attorney who has to choose between the girl he loves and duty as it appears to him.

MORE TEETH WANTED IN ANTI-NARCOTIC LAWS

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 24.—More stringent anti-narcotic laws as a means of protecting children were recommended in a resolution adopted today by the American Humane association meeting in its semi-centennial convention in Portland.

Not only more stringent national, but also more stringent state and municipal legislation was indicated as desirable in this connection.

The convention also adopted resolutions asking the president to call a conference of children welfare organizations of all sorts, with a view to working out a uniform code of general principles to govern child problems.

W. P. Weitzel of Pittsburgh, who is to speak at the juvenile detention home Wednesday night and at the state training school in Salem Thursday night at Governor Pierce's invitation, discussed general problems of child delinquency, declaring that the major sins of parents in relation to their children are often sins of omission rather than commission.

SMOLDERING FIRES BURNING AGAIN AS RESULT OF HOT DAYS

The hot weather of the past few days has caused the old forest fires, smoldering since they were brought under control, to start smoldering again, but none are burning outside the fire lines and are doing no damage, according to Supervising Warden H. Q. Brown, of the Douglas Fire Patrol. The hot days have had a correspondingly low humidity which has resulted in smoldering fires breaking out into flames. This condition has necessitated the placing of patrols on some of the larger fires, such as the St. Johns fire, South Myrtle Creek fire, Days Creek fire, etc., but in no instance has a spread been reported.

Several large slashings are now burning and are kicking up much of the smoke that is now blanketing the country.

MONTANA FOREST FIRES CONTROLLED

MISSOULA, Mont., Aug. 25.—With virtually all fires in the forests of Washington, Idaho and Montana on patrol basis, United States forest district number one officials here today declared the 1926 fire season almost ended.

While no accurate estimate of the fire loss this year has been made, the season is known to have been the most disastrous since 1910 and possibly since any record has been kept. Foresters say they now can control the situation from now on this year unless exceptionally hot, dry, windy weather recurs, which is not expected.

SHOULD HUSBANDS DO HOUSE WORK?

How Mrs. Dyer Solved the Problem.

Mrs. Mildred Dyer was lucky. She had a good-natured husband who helped her with much of her housework. Because she was in ill health for five years, it was often necessary for him to do his share. But it bothered Mrs. Dyer. She felt that he had to work hard enough anyway.

The time he spent in doing her work was needed for his own. She determined to find the road to better health.

She writes: "I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply wonderful. My health is better than it has ever been. I am getting stronger and gaining in weight."

The Dyer lives at Redlands, Calif., Route 4, Box 183.

How often does your husband have to do your housework? No matter how willing he is, no woman feels comfortable about it. Perhaps you, too, will find better health through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
