NEW WITNESSES ADD LINKS TO THE HOAX CHAIN

Stories of Fiction Writer and Diver Strengthen State's Case.

KEYES OUT OF FUNDS Unable to Bring Operator From Arizona, But the Evangelist Offers to Pay Expense.

(Associated Press Local Wire.) LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—Comes now the recital of more tragic lines in the Albee Seiple McPherson kidnaping drama while farce retires for a time in the wings. Ered Harrison, deep sea diver, who lost his life in a search of the cold waters of Santa Monica bay for the body of the then supposedly drowned evangelist last May, takes the stage through a friend and fellow diver, Robert D. Hunt, of Venice. Harrison died of pneumonia contracted during an extended diving expedition directed by the evangelist's mother, Mrs. Mianie Kennedy. With resumption after a day's adjournment of the preliminary hearing in municipal court today of the pastor and her mother on criminal conspiracy charges, Hunt was instructed to give his version of the search for the body. He also was engaged by Mrs. Kennedy to carry on the search and to continue his thrilling diving expeditions after he had told her he was convinced there was no body in the surf. He says he was told his exploits would help convince the public that Mrs. McPherson was drowned.

Fiction Writer Talks Oliver Allstrom, fiction writer, who had been subpoenaed, says that Mrs. McPherson was aware of Harrison's death. During her examination by the grand jury last July the evangelist denied knowledge of her death. The transcript of her testimony shows Allstrom has stated to investigators for the district attorney's office that he had been employed by Mrs. McPherson to write a book, titled "The Kidnapers," intended to be a recital by the evangelist of her experiences from the time she was spirited away from the strand at Ocean Park until her triumphant return to Angelus Temple. Mrs. McPherson is said to have dictated the work. A chapter, entitled "Glad News and Sad News," revealed that Mrs. McPherson was advised of Harrison's death on the day of her arrival from Douglas, Ariz. Allstrom declared. The evangelist proposed a monument to the dead hero, but the suggestion was promptly opposed by her mother, the writer said. The work was dropped when authorities began investigating the strange actions of Kenneth G. Ormiston, missing radio man, and a woman companion at Carmel-by-the-Sea and the book never was finished, he explained.

Keys Out of Funds Lack of funds with which to defray the expense of bringing out of town witnesses to testify at the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and her mother on criminal conspiracy charges has threatened to hinder the progress of the trial. District Attorney Keyes admitted he was handicapped by inadequate finances yesterday when he issued a summons for Bill Bliven, telegraph operator and Frank Daly, freight agent, at Gila Bend, Ariz. Prosecutor will make formal request of the board of supervisors today for the necessary funds to carry on the case. Mrs. McPherson last night volunteered to pay the expenses of Bliven's trip here.

The prosecution has announced that it expects to prove by Bliven's testimony that Mrs. McPherson was in Gila Bend on June 15, eight days before she appeared at Douglas with her story of having escaped from a kidnapers' shack. Investigators for the district attorney were dispatched to Gila Bend yesterday. They reported back that Bliven identified the evangelist from photographs as the woman who sent a telegram from his station. The message, announcing that her car had broken down and "that she would take the next train," was dispatched to Douglas, they learned. They also reported that the original telegram was in the same handwriting as that of the famous grocery silps found in the Carmel cottage occupied by Ormiston and his companion. The hearing for the evangelist and her mother was scheduled to be at 10 o'clock with Loren Murchison, Douglas police surgeon, as the first witness. He was still in the box when the trial was adjourned last Tuesday.

PATTERSON GIVES BUSINESS PLEDGE TO STATE VOTERS

Favors Budget on Basis of Four Years, Farm Roads and Shakeup at the Penitentiary.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 7.—What Oregon needs is a business administration, L. L. Patterson, republican candidate for governor, told the people of the state in a radio address, the first such talk he has made in the campaign, here last night. He pledged himself to a careful, economic, businesslike management of state affairs. "The more nearly we regard the business of the state as business, the better public officials will serve the taxpayers," he said. "That business principles may replace political ideas in conducting state affairs, Patterson proposes, as governor, to follow a strict budget system and desires that the governor be made the budget-making official. In that way, he believes, responsibility will be placed where it belongs and the governor will be held to strict account in expending state funds.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creosote, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creosote is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. A well known drug, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agents for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creosote emulsion, in addition to creosote, other ingredients which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creosote emulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory disease, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

In that way, he believes, responsibility will be placed where it belongs and the governor will be held to strict account in expending state funds.

Favors 4-Year Basis

"If the governor has the power to make the state budget" and to offer to the legislature the suggestion of proper appropriations, he can, with the power which is given him to veto appropriation bills, control the amount required for state expenses," he said. "No business could long prosper if expenditures for departments of the business were not well supervised. Budgets for all tax-paying bodies should be made with reference to a four-year program and not as though all of the improvements required in the state should be provided in a single year.

Assails Prison System

Political control of the penitentiary, Patterson said, has been the cause of great inefficiency and money waste. "We have the example of the appointment of six wardens at the penitentiary in a period of six years," he said. "No private business could prosper with annual changes of manager, no matter how able the managers. I favor placing the penitentiary under the board of control, as it is the only state institution not now under the board, so that the tenure of office at the penitentiary may depend solely upon merit, as it does at other state institutions. This is the only way to remove it from politics. We can then reduce the cost and hope, in time, to make it self-sustaining.

Roads For Farmers

Completion of the Sevell highway so soon as funds are available was favored and Patterson spoke for immediate attention to improvement of remote county roads, so that farmers who have helped pay for state highways may reach them and use them. He spoke for sympathetic treatment of the farmers' problems, for reforestation and other sound policies.

As governor," he said, "I will devote my full time to the duties of the office and will require the same service of all those who are serving the state under my direction. Employees of the state should

OUT OF THE EVERYWHERE

Where do they come from . . . gloves with a fawn-soft texture, exotic perfumes, fine spun silks, combs of amber, cool stretched linens, lamp-shades of parchment, slippers with buckles ready to blaze? How are they brought into one shop—how gathered into one home—how enjoyed by one person? A simple turning through the advertising pages of magazine or newspaper is the answer. Advertisements summon them into the here.

Advertisements give you intimate stories of new things. That's news. They tell all the amazing truths of a good thing. That's honesty. They arouse the desire that brings it closer, inform you where you can find it, advise how much it's worth to you. That's service. And when you enter the shop to choose, and choose the value you are sure of because it's advertised, the value that means the most to you because you compare the advertised truths . . . that's economy.

Fair Taxation Will Preserve U. S. Forests

Just taxation is one of the means of preserving our present supply of forest products. Five states, Washington, California, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Louisiana, will vote in November on constitutional amendments to permit taxing forests equitably and scientifically. This usually takes the form of a "yield tax."

The general property tax provided for in most state constitutions is levied each year. When this is applied to forests, it places up a burden, year by year, draining the owners' resources during the process of forest renewal, the risks and discouragements of this long-time investment must be minimized. The public which insists that it must have an ample supply of wood products must also insist that those engaged in producing them are not discriminated against. A few states, notably New York and Michigan, have blazed the trail in the matter of fair taxation, and it is hoped that others will follow their lead.

Our forests can be renewed, thereby differing from other natural resources such as coal, iron, oil, etc., but before we can have an extensive industry engaged in the process of forest renewal, the risks and discouragements of this long-time investment must be minimized.
