HARRY WILLS AND JACK SHARKEY TO BATTLE TONIGHT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Harry Wills, huge negro stevedore, tonight climbs into the ring at Ebbets Field to defend his ranking as foremost challenger for the heavyweight title, against youthful Jack Sharkey of Boston.

Almost a year has passed since the black panther, now 37 years old, fought his last match against Floyd Johnson of Des Moines, Iowa, and battered the westerner to a helpless figure in a single round. During this same period Sharkey has surged to the front rank with decisions over George Godfrey, giant negro, who Wills failed to meet; Eddie Hoffman, sailor scrapper of California; King Solomon of Panama, and Jim Maloney, Boston slugger.

Sharkey was the picture of confidence as he finished his training. "Tunney refused to meet me earlier in the year," he said, "and it was just as well for him that he didn't. I'd likely be champion of the world today. I'm going to knock Wills out and then Tunney will have to meet me."

Wills is certain tonight's skirmish will settle once and for all his position among the heavyweights. "I'll prove to the world," he said, "that I am the man who should be champion. I'll show them the speed and hitting power that was not displayed at Philadelphia. I'll prove that I am the man Dempsey should have fought and that I would have won by a knockout. I'll stop Sharkey quickly."
