

SKAGGS

DISTRIBUTION WITHOUT WASTE

The Power of PURPOSE

The fixed determination of the leaders of Skaggs chain. Stores and Safeway Stores—while operating separately—to ultimately find the most effective method for getting goods from producer to consumer with the least possible waste, naturally and inevitably led to the consolidation of the resources, operations and ideals of these two great food distributing concerns.

Their union is the most constructive move—in the interest of the consumer—ever attempted in the West. With the purchasing power of more than 900 retail units, annual sales of approximately $60,000,000, operating costs lower than any other similar retail food concern in the United States and an organization of nearly 3500 earnest, sincere and highly trained people behind them, Skaggs-Safeway Stores are rendering consumers a service of saving incomparably greater than would be possible were they operating as individual stores or a smaller

Here after people have a right to expect that Skaggs-Safeway Stores will lead in the march of progress; that they shall offer only merchandise of definitely known high quality; that they shall carry the most complete stocks and the widest varieties; that their stores shall represent the utmost in cleanliness and convenience and that Skaggs-Safeway men shall render the most efficient courteous and helpful service it is humanly possible to render. To all of these things Skaggs-Safeway Stores unhesitatingly publicly pledge themselves—realizing that our success depends upon your confidence in us and your confidence depends upon our ability to make good. We offer the following items as instances of the super-values you will regularly find at all of our stores.

JOHN A. STEWART, NOTED FINANCIER. PASSES, AGED 104

Adviser of Cleveland and Lincoln and Oldest of Active Bankers in Wall Street.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—John Alkman Stewart, 104, Wall street financier and once assistant secretary of the United States treasury, died at his home here today of pneumonia.

Mr. Stewart was the oldest active financier in Wall street, and perhaps in the country. He contended there was no secret about the good health he had enjoyed so many years and attributed it to abstemious habits since his youth. He had not used tobacco in any form since he was 20. "I believe that is one of the reasons I have kept my health," he declared. "The only rule I have is moderation in everything. Eating too much is just as bad as drinking too much. I do not live differently from other people, but I eat and drink carefully."

Career in Finance
He was one of Lincoln's close advisers during the Civil war, and entered the service of his country in 1861 as assistant treasurer of the United States. Afterward he took part in the councils of leading financiers and participated in plans to fund the national debt. He came to the government's aid again in 1894 during the second administration of Grover Cleveland, at a time when the country's gold reserve was dangerously near depletion. He was influential in obtaining the resumption of special payments, and took a leading part in financing the needs of the government. President Cleveland in his book "Presidential Problems," said of him: "He rendered most useful and patriotic service in making this and the previous offer of bonds successful."

Princeton Supporter
Mr. Stewart took great interest in Princeton university. He had been a trustee and counselor of Princeton since 1888 and was largely instrumental in having the call sent to President McCooch, whose administration marked the beginning of the modern Princeton. He served as president pro tem of Princeton during the period between the resignation of Woodrow Wilson to become governor of New Jersey and the installation of John Grier Hibben as head of the university.

THEATRES

ANTLERS THEATRE

Rinty At His Best.
Out of the dark, sinister shadows of Limehouse comes a horrible, leering face of a man, half beast, half human, with a lovely girl in his arms. And out of the dark Antlers theatre, where "White London Sleeps," opened today, come the sharp convulsions of indrawn breath and suspense; for Rinty-Tin's latest picture for Warner Bros., is a thrilling, melodramatic romance of London's underworld, where daring crime is planned and executed behind the battered doors of dens and alleys. Rinty-Tin, the fighting king, battling for his lovely mistress; Rinty-Tin, torn between love for his old and dishonest master and devotion to his new mistress; Rinty-Tin evading the hands of justice at one time and then leading them on to capture the criminal gang whose cruelty has baffled Scotland Yard—Rinty, the ever-amazing dog of the screen, in his most perfect performance.

Then there is pretty Helene Costello in her first really dramatic leading role; proving she need not depend upon her illustrations. There is Walter Merrill, a good-looking hero who is new to screen audiences and should be instantaneously popular; and Otto Mattiesen in the role of the sinister gang leader.

There is excellent acting, the perfect direction of Walter Morosco who also wrote the story; and all the thrills of crookdom and young romance in "White London Sleeps," so don't pass it up!

LIBERTY THEATRE

Oliver Borden, noted Virginia beauty and star in Fox Films productions, is announced as the stellar attraction at the Liberty theatre today and tomorrow when Irving Cummings' powerful and dramatic photoplay, "The Country Beyond," will be given its premiere presentation in this city.

Miss Borden, who is a versatile actress, appears in an exotic and colorful role. In the early sequences she wears nondescript garments—a fiery, yet pathetic figure of a girl, born in the Canadian Rockies and taken care of, after a fashion, by her guardians, who are shiftless French Canadians.

She attracts the attention of a New York theatrical producer, on a tour of the primitive forests of the Northland. He takes her to Broadway and in the course of time she becomes the vogue as a musical comedy dancer. In this sequence, Miss Borden wears strikingly original creations, which, in themselves are visual delights. "The Country Beyond" is Fox films screen version of one of the most appealing of James Oliver
