BUTNER FIGHTS FOR DECREASED FREIGHT RATES

received more. Have our railroad the inducements with which they lured us into this western paradise? Do they not feel obligated to adjust their rates to meet our actual needs? Of, what value are broccoli fields or grape vineyards or apple and pear orchards if rates are so high that the producer cannot sell his crops at a profit? We do not advocate a rapidly fluctuating rate structure, but we do insist that the past few years have indicated clearly that Western agriculture cannot continue without immediate adjustment of freight rates.

"Freight rates, which are such a large factor in our business life, have been materially adjusted, but still remain at too high a level. Manifestly there can be no return to normal business conditions until the price of transportation bears a proper relation to commodity values.

"The business of our country has been developed on the wide distribution of commodities, encouraged by freight rates that bore a proper relation to the price of commodities and as the price of commodities fall, so should rates be adjusted.

"Has the price of commodities fallen? Go ask the onion growers at Brawley, the broccoli growers at Roseburg, the lettuce growers at Seattle, the pear growers at Medford or the apple growers at Hood River, Yakima and Wenatchee.

"Has the volume of freight increased over 1922? Take the carriers' own figures. 1925 shows the greatest tonnage on record—a record which probably will be broken in 1926. Have we heard a word about rate adjustment? Yes, a little adjustment upward. Never a word about 'a proper relation to commodity values.' Instead, we have observed propaganda along these lines: "We have had no car shortage', 'We have handled the business,' 'Freight rates to not affect the growers' returns'—and the growers have paid for the propaganda. How would you feel, Mr. Railroad Employee, if when you kicked to your grocery about his high prices and poor deliveries, he replied, 'but look at the great overhead and the small volume of my business; then suppose you and your neighbors cooperated to assist this grocer in the conduct of his business and when you again complained about his high prices he replied, 'but look at the volume of business I am doing'. 'Look at the economics I have affected'. 'Look at the promptness of my deliveries.' 'See how my profits have increased.' And then he undertook to show you that your entire trouble was caused by the manner in which you marketed your services to the railroad?

"These advisory boards offer a wonderful opportunity for the consideration and adjustment of our difficulties. It is my contention that the shippers of this country are the railroader's best friends. Of all the periodicals which have shown a strong leaning toward the present railroad policies, I believe Nations' Business is the outstanding one. In the November issue it published an excellent article on the work being done by these advisory boards—even relating Mr. Conn's 'asylum story,' illustrating cooperation. On the editorial page is found the following comment: 'Why not apply the same principle to the question of freight rates?' Ask Mr. Conn if it is not true that I have been asking him to do that ever since we became acquainted.' In fact, I've asked him so often that he begins to get his reply ready when he sees me coming.

"In conclusion I will tell you a story, the story of a man, his wife, a slippery step and a cream pitcher. It was the habit of the husband upon returning from the office to take the cream pitcher and go to a neighbor's for cream. In returning he had to climb the rear stairs. There was a slippery step and almost every time he came back he would slip on that step. He kept kicking about it, but the wife insisted that it didn't amount to anything so long as he didn't break the pitcher—one of her most treasured possessions. One night he was unable to get cream and came back with skimmed milk. Being a little sore, he forgot the step and got a real fall. With many a bump he rolled down into the basement. The wife heard the clatter and his groans. She opened the door and called 'George, Dear, did you break the pitcher?' to which George replied, 'No, but I'll be gosh darned if I don't.'

"That, Gentlemen, is a perfect illustration of the present situation existing between shippers and carriers. The shippers have encountered a step made slippery by the transportation act. The carriers have observed the producers' fall; they have heard his groans; and their only concern has been 'Did you break the pitcher?' representing railroad revenues. The cream represents what we all want—national prosperity; the skimmed milk indicates exactly what the producer is getting, and the husband's reply indicates the attitude of the average producer. Would it not be better for all concerned for the railroads to show a more material interest in our welfare? Would it not be even better to remove the grease from the step? We growers believe that it would and remember we are the railroads' best customers. Would it not be well for the carriers to adopt John Wanamaker's famous slogan, 'The customer is always right?' For in the great majority of cases the carriers will find that we are right.

WHERE SANTA GOES AFTER CHRISTMAS

Reporter Interviews Him to Discover Why He Shows Up Only on Christmas Eve.

CATCHES HIM AT WORK

Reindeer Stuff Found to Be Merely a Blind for His Real Job.

By DWIGHT S. ANDERSON

Where does Santa Claus hide after Christmas?

Unless this genial, bewhiskered old gentleman can show a good reason for appearing in public but once a year, and then retiring for twelve months into seclusion, he is a fake philanthropist.

In some quarters it is doubted whether he personally delivers all the packages that are found at the fireplace Christmas morning; in others it has even been whispered that he is so lazy he gets the inmates of a Home for Rich Old Uncles to lick the Christmas Seals he uses to decorate bundles. Reindeer driving once a year gives him quite a thrill, but as for hard work at times when newspapers consider him poor "copy" — Santa Claus simply doesn't deliver the goods.

So the reporter burst into Santa's office one day. "Here, Santa," he said, "is what people are saying about you. How come?"

The room was crowded with children, most of whom were naked to the waist. Two nurses were weighing a boy on a pair of scales in a corner, writing down his weight as well as height on a chart. Santa himself stood in the center of the room bossing the job.

Meets Santa Face to Face.

"Make it snappy," breezed Santa with one of those world-wide grins of his. "I've got twenty more kids to examine before five o'clock."

"Where do you go after Christmas?" the reporter asked.

"Everywhere. Just now I am examining these children for signs of undernourishment or incipient tuberculosis. That's part of what I do all the year round. On top of that, I conduct open-air schools in some places, support preventoria in others, where children can go and live in the open air and sunshine. I am busy almost everywhere with health education in the public schools. The best gift I give is health, and I give it, not only at Christmas time, but all the year round."

"Where do you get the money to do all this?" asked the reporter.

"The people give it to me when they buy Christmas Seals, my boy. A penny at a time the money rolls in. Last year I had the tidy sum of $4,750,000 to expend in the United States. I always see to it that practically all the money given me when people buy my seals stays in their state and is spent to fight tuberculosis in their own community."

"Santa!" cried the reporter, "you've been selling Christmas Seals for almost twenty years. Have you accomplished anything?"

"I've helped cut the death rate from tuberculosis in half during that time," answered Santa, "and besides that, there are more than 600 tuberculosis sanatoriums in the country now, and there were only two or three when I started. Confidentially"—and here he lowered his voice so the children could not hear him, "the big reason I call on all the boys and girls on Christmas Eve is to take a peek into their homes while they are asleep and see how my health work is coming along."

Where He Gets the Money.

"Do you collect all this money yourself?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, no, no, no, that would be impossible. I can't be everywhere. Plenty of men and women volunteer to collect this money for me—otherwise so huge a sum could never be raised a penny at a time. And almost everybody in the country knows by now that 'Christmas Seals Fight Tuberculosis.'"

HOME REMINDERS

Grease spots are sometimes removed from clothing by covering the spot thickly on both sides with starch, fhich is left on for several hours when it may be removed with a soft brush.

Good looking garments are made by using the less worn parts of two garments. Plaids or checks are pretty combined with plain material, and silks with wool.

Since leather burns at a very low temperature, wet shoes are safely dried only in a place not too near a register or a stove.

Silk garments look better when pressed while still damp but not wet.

Heat yellows silk, so a moderately farm iron is best for pressing it.

A simple trimming suitable for children's garments is made on the sewing machine. The bobbin is wound with heavy mercerized or silk thread. The stitch on the machine is lengthened and the stitching done in the usual way except on the wrong side.

Pressing a wrinkled pattern before placing it on the material saves time in cutting.

Checking the size of a pattern before a garment is cut saves much time. The pattern is placed on the figure and pinned together at the seams. The length of back and front, width of back and front, shoulder length and neck size are adjusted to the figure.

Pinning a seam instead of basting it often saves time. The pins are placed at right angles to the edge of the seam.

'MA' FERGUSON'S JIM SWINGS FISTS WITH LABOR HEAD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 18.—A fistic encounter between James E. Ferguson, husband of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, and E. J. Crocker, state labor commissioner, has ended in a victory for the Fergusons at a cost to the participants of $14.95 each.

Ferguson, for many years a storm center in Texas politics and who has acted as spokesman for his wife since her election two years ago to the chair he once held, yesterday entered the commissioner's office to demand his resignation. This was deemed necessary, Mrs. Ferguson said, partly because of recent complaints against Crocker by stenographers of his department.

On demanding the resignation Ferguson said Crocker struck him on the shoulder and attempted to hit him again when the governor's spokesman advised the commissioner to sit down. Ferguson said he then slapped Crocker with an open hand and the commissioner fell over a chair into a corner. Crocker then resigned, Ferguson said.

Charges of the affray were filed against both combatants and Crocker pleaded guilty to intoxication when arraigned before a justice of the peace. He was fined $14.95. Ferguson notified the justice he would plead guilty to the affray and sent the same amount as Crocker paid to the court today.

SCARLET FEVER TESTS TO BE GIVEN IN ROSE SCHOOL

The materials are expected to arrive the first of the week, and tests will be made then.

Briggs, who died in February of this year. Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. E. E. Stephens, Mrs. E. W. Chapman, Mrs. John Meyers and Mrs. Jean Simons; and seven grandchildren all of Portland. She also leaves two brothers and two sisters and is a sister-in-law of Mrs. M. E. James of Roseburg. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs both spent their early life in Canyonville. Funeral services were held Friday at 3 p. m. at the chapel of Miller & Tracy, interment in the Rose City cemetery.

NOTABLES JOIN IN WARBLING LAMENT OF BREWERY EXIT

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Charles Evans Hughes and Elihu Root differ in political creed with Governor Alfred E. Smith, but they are able to join him in enthusiastic musical lamentation in the passing of the bowery.

The trio led a chorus of 100 men last night in the wailing strains of that favorite ballad of a generation or more ago at a reunion in the Astor hotel of delegates to the 1915 state convention.

The democratic presidential aspirant sang the verse and two former republican secretaries of state, one of them a former justice of the supreme court who resigned to run for the presidency, joined vigorously in declaring musically "I'll Never Go Back Any More" to the Bowery.

Mr. Root chimed in vigorously with a baritone that brought every man to his feet roaring the half forgotten words, and Mr. Hughes' whiskers could be seen moving to the rhythm.

After the song Mr. Hughes chuckled at some funny stories related by Governor Smith.

HINDENBURG HURT BY CHARGES MADE IN THE REICHSTAG

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Indications are that the cabinet of Chancellor Marx, which resigned yesterday after a defeat in the reichstag, will continue to guide affairs of state until the holidays are over. After passing the social democrat motion of non-confidence 249 to 241 the reichstag adjourned until January 19.

The cabinet fell before an unnatural alliance between the left socialist and right nationalist factions, either of which group outnumbers any government party. The motion on which the vote was taken was introduced by Philip Scheidemann, social democratic leader, and was supported by the nationalists, communists and fascisti.

Scheidemann, in opening his attack on Thursday, charged that arms and airplanes were manufactured and hoarded in Russia for Germany through the functioning of a secret fund. This was denied by Chancellor Marx.

The cabinet presented its resignation to President Von Hindenburg last night but was requested to continue in office pending the formation of a new ministry. Customary procedure would be to ask the socialists to form a government, they being the party responsible for the cabinet's defeat, but nationalist leaders say the president was deeply hurt by socialist charges of irregularity in the administration of the defense forces and that he may attempt to produce a coalition of the parties of the right and middle.

Former Chancellor Hans Luther, who is now returning from a trip to Central and South America, is mentioned most frequently by the rightists as the successor to Dr. Marx.
