FLASHES OF LIFE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
SOMERVILLE, N. J.—The $53,000,000 estate inherited by fifteen-year-old Doris Duke includes 1082 quarts and 1606 pints of choice champagne valued at $3 to $9 per unit. The wine and other liquors are appraised in an accounting at $17,421, but the lot would bring much more than that if it could be sold to Broadway night clubs. County authorities expect taxes on the estate to defray the expenses of the Hall-Mills case.

NEW YORK—A. Barton Hepburn, banker's grandson, a tall handsome youth, is going on the stage in juvenile roles. He has just become of age and come into possession of half a million of the million that eventually will be his.
LIVERPOOL—Miss Edith Gertrude Knight has not worn skirts for eleven years because they interfere with her work. When receiving the degree of bachelor of veterinary science from Liverpool University she wore knickers beneath her academic gown.

Then a $5 gold piece, then a silver medallion blessed by the pope. And more is to come, for Mrs. Morgan took the names of his children.

NEW YORK—"Beauticians"—that's what they call themselves—are somewhat perturbed. They have been informed in convention that 4,000,000 women in this country never use cosmetics. And some critics denounced the 4,000,000 as the type that still clings to corsets, frowns on short skirts and believes in witches.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—If Mrs. James Rose holds a winning hand in bridge, she intends to get the contract. Holds 13 clubs, she bid six. Her husband overcalled with six diamonds. "Nice clubs!" she cried. Rules or no rules, the other players let her make a grand slam.

ANTLERS

Belle Bennett's Film Fame Grows

"The Reckless Lady," the current feature attraction at the Antlers theatre, introduces an actress who seems destined to become one of the outstanding stars of the screen. She is Belle Bennett, who plays the title role in this Robert Kane production.

Miss Bennett's first bid for screen fame was made in "Stella Dallas," though she has appeared in other less important pictures. "Stella Dallas," however, gave her her first big opportunity.

In "The Reckless Lady" Miss Bennett plays the part of a mother whose one mistake hangs over her in after years and who must make a constant series of sacrifices in her daughter's behalf. She receives support from a group of stars that include Lola Moran, Ben Lyon, James Kirkwood, Lowell Sherman, Marcia Harris and Charle Murray.

LIBERTY

Girl Demands Love Insurance

The story of "Hell's Highway," the Cecil B. DeMille supervised production starring Leatrice Joy and directed by Rupert Julian, which is showing at the Liberty Theatre, is an old theme of proven popularity—romance—with a decidedly new and novel twist.

The picture opens with Miss Joy in the role of a girl much in love with a boy, but steadfastly refusing to marry him and risk love and happiness amid poverty. Money she demands to insure their affection and when the opportunity arises she conspires with a wealthy acquaintance to make her fiancé rich, for a consideration of an implied reward.

In creating this situation, the girl plays right into the hands of the financier, taking upon herself the double responsibility of being true to one she loves and fulfilling her obligations to the man who has aided her plans. The manner in which the director has handled the characters in this novel situation, coming early in the story prepares the climaxes which arise as the plot gets under way.

The cast includes Edmund Burns who plays the role of Miss Joy's lover and husband, Robert Edison, as the villain and in the end a good loser, and Julia Faye as Anne Broderick.
