The SECRET STUDIO

CHAPTER 55.
The Story So Far.
Rosemary Merton, determined to win independence of her family, quits college, following a romance with Philip Barron, a neighborhood sweetheart. Clinging in a San Francisco bookstore she meets Larry, an artist, and Sloan Whitney, a man of the world, by whom she is fascinated. She breaks with Larry, Nina, employed in the same store, goes to Spain to join Stanley Cuyler, an old friend of her dead father, and married. Rosemary is given the use of her luxurious apartment. At the store a mysterious masculine stranger interviews Rosemary concerning Nina Clarke and then shows Rosemary, Mrs. Merton dies. Rosemary encounters Whitney, after an estrangement, and he tells her he cannot marry her, but asks her to go abroad with him. She asks time to think it over. She discovers Whitney is drinking habitually and breaks with him. He disappears. Cuyler's wife, mistaking Rosemary for Nina, menaces her with a revolver and drops dead of apoplexy. In Rosemary's apartment, Rosemary is held two days in prison. In a letter Phil says he is coming to make her his bride.
She is discharged from her pos-sion and seeks another.

Now Go On With the Story.
After all, it wasn't from Sloan.
It was from Nina, a cable.
A long happy cable, telling her not to worry. That everything would come out all right, and if she didn't want the apartment any longer, to rent it furnished, or sell the stuff, they'd never want it again.
"Shocked, but oh, so relieved," Nina concluded without regard for expense, "I will never be able to express my joy or express regret you should be dragged into our trouble. Stop. Cable if you need money or friends. Nina Cuyler." Nina Cuyler. So they were married. Already!
"Things happen so fast," she said, unsteadily, trying to smile at old Mr. Partridge, and having to stop and reach for her over-worked handkerchief instead.
"Was it something I should know?" he asked, a little self-consciously, having read most of it over Rosemary's shoulder.
"Yes, about the apartment. Mr.
Cuyler says I'm to do as I like about it."
"You wouldn't want to go living there? Rather gruesome for a young girl I should think."
"Oh, no," Rosemary cried. "I wouldn't live there—I couldn't."
"I doubt if it will rent for a time. People are peculiar about things like that," he said deprecatingly, dusting his hands with a big white handkerchief. "The Van Burens move out right away, though, as I told everyone, it really was part of the apartment house—and so isolated, up there on the roof."
"I think it would be best to lock it up."
"Oh, no, Miss Merton—a locked apartment—really, the effect—"
"But I can't go on living there."
"Well, no—one could hardly expect that."
There was a long pause. Rosemary just sat there on the bench in the hall, holding the cable in her hands, and Mr. Partridge walked up and down, dusting his fingers, and coughing little, polite, nervous coughs from time to time.
"It is all very unfortunate. Anything like that—in a first class house, you know—"
"It wasn't my fault," Rosemary cut in. "I didn't even know her."

He was gone, but Rosemary didn't turn to see him go. She knelt by the chair, pressing her cheek against it.
After a while she got up and walked into the bedroom. With swift, deft fingers, she crowded her things in the trunk. She even went back into the closet to see that she had no forgotten nothing.
All the while she had gone, all the fright, and superstitious fear.
"I mustn't forget my old blue tricotone," she thought. "I'll be good to look for work in. Most of my things are too elaborate." She pressed the old dress in, and closed the lid. "Funny to be going to look for work again—and not having anything commensu-rable to wear." Last year I didn't have anything good enough, I thought.
She snapped the clasps, turned the key.
The light was fading. How long had she been! She went over to the chair—a last goodbye.
"It isn't the things you did," she whispered. "No matter what you did, I'd always love you. I got it."

Mothers, Do This—
When the children cough, rub Musterole on their throats and chests. No telling how soon the symptoms may develop into croup, or worse. And then when you're glad you have a jar of Musterole at hand to give prompt relief.
As first aid, Musterole is excellent.
Keep it ready for instant use.
It is the remedy for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet and colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children.
Ask for Children's Musterole.

Men Who Made the World

FOR SEVERAL DAYS THE FIGHTING CONTINUED FURIOUS-LY WITH THE SPANIARDS GAINING FEW, IF ANY, ADVAN-TAGES. CUITLHUATZIN, THE AZTEC LEADER, WAS EVERY-WHERE DIRECTING HIS SOLDIERS WITH GREAT SKILL. IN THE MIDDLE OF THESE EVER INCREASING DANGERS CORTEZ SENT FRIAR BARTOLOME AND CAPTAIN DE OLID TO MONTE-ZUMA TO HAVE HIM PERSUADE HIS PEOPLE TO STOP FIGHT-ING. THE UNHAPPY PRISONER REPLIED THAT THEY HAD CHOSEN A NEW LEADER AND HE ADDED THE PREDICTION THAT NOT A SPANIARD WOULD LEAVE THE CITY ALIVE.

Watch Elimination!

Good Health Depends Upon Good Elimination.

RETENTION of bodily waste in the blood is called a "toxic condition." This often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. Thousands have learned to assist their kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water and the occasional use of a stimulant diuretic. 50,000 users give Doan's signed endorsement.

started—and I can't stop." A passion of tears took her, she clung to the chair, shaking pitifully, a thin, colorless, shadow of the Rosemary of a week ago. "It's what you didn't do, Sloan. It's not coming to me when I needed you so. That's what hurts. It's sort of—sort of the unforeseen sin, falling someone who loves you, isn't it?"
The light grew dimmer, and still she knelt there, saying goodbye.

And suddenly the room seemed alive. The chairs creaked, the windows rattled. In the corners shadows crept ghostlike into the retreating light. Gray, moving shadows, the shades of half-forgotten people, half forgotten things.

"I'm afraid!" she cried. "I'm afraid—it's full of ghosts!
Sloan!—where are you?"
Her pattering feet echoed in the hall—"If you didn't fall me, where are you? Where are you?
Why don't you come?"
A shadow gained the elevator a tall, bronzed figure, graying her hair. "Rosemary, darling, what idiot let you come here? Poor little sweetheart!"

Her dilated eyes, dark with terror, stared stupidly upon him.
Then, in a weak little voice, she gasped, "Phil—oh, Phil." His arms closed about her.
"Honey, I just got here—just heard. Oh, my poor, sweet little girl! You know—all about it—and you still like me?"

"Like you? Why, you're mine, girl! Didn't I tell you? Say—did you get my letter? Well, for the love of God, don't you!"
"Yes, I got it. Oh, Phil—you didn't fall me, did you?" He looked at her blankly.
"You know—all about it—and you still like me?"
"Like you? Why, you're mine, girl! Didn't I tell you? Say—did you get my letter? Well, for the love of God, don't you?"

FERNANDO CORTEZ

By Dr. Elliott Shoring, the Noted Historian

NO SOONER HAD MONTEZUMA CEASED THAN QUAUITEMOTZIN, ONE OF THE YOUNG LEADERS OF THE MEXICANS, STEPPED FORWARD. HE REVEILED MONTEZUMA AS A COWARD, A LIAR, AN EFFEMINATE TOOL OF THE SPANIARDS AND HE DECLARED THAT THE AZTECS RENOUNCED OBEDIENCE TO THIS VACILLATING RULER WHO HAD SO DEGRADED AND ABASED HIS ROYAL RANK AND DIGNITY. THE SPEECH DELIVERED, QUAUITEMOTZIN, CONTEMPTUOUSLY CURSING THE DEPOSED RULER, NOW HURLED A STONE AT MONTEZUMA WHILE A SHOWER OF ARROWS WERE FIRED AT HIM. HE WAS SEVERELY, BUT NOT FATAALLY, WOUNDED. MONTEZUMA HAD FALLEN FROM HIS ROYALTY AND HIS PRIESTHOOD TO BE A THING OF SCORN AND LOATHING TO HIS PEOPLE. THE ATTACK ON THE SPANISH QUARTERS WAS AT ONCE RE-SUMED.
