A defunct used car can be cheaply doctored up so that it will just about carry the purchaser away. The trouble is, he stays away. You can't make customers by making enemies. We prefer to make and keep friends.

New Oregon Laws Not of Radical Character

Legislation Confined Chiefly to Actual Needs or Repeat of Dead Statutes.

(By Elbert Bede) Much derogatory has been said about the batch of new laws enacted by every legislative session, for which reason a study of legislation introduced at this session should be interesting.

Firstly, no legislation has been enacted designating any new crime, while several obnoxious laws have been enacted. Very few new laws would regulate anyone or anything, and those that would have been requested by those to be regulated.

New conditions under which we live are responsible for many new laws. For instance, the automobile is prevalent for many new laws at every session, and no one has found any fault with any regulatory law except the speed limit law, and this limit is practically certain to be boosted to 35 miles. This is one of the peculiarities about some crimes. Traveling on the highways at 35 miles an hour will be a crime on the day before the new law becomes effective, making 35 miles legal.

Several of the new laws are aimed to carry into effect the will of the people as expressed when the created a new tuberculosis hospital and new normal school. Many of the new laws are designed to bring about a more equitable assessment of property of the state. Surely no one will deny that this is desirable.

Despite all the need for new laws, only 212 have been introduced in the two houses this session, while there are 326 bills to amend present laws and 114 to repeal present laws. There are 116 appropriations bills, but these can not come under the head of new laws. A dozen laws make change in laws affecting fish, and more than a dozen have been designed to evolve new revenue producers for the state.

Most of the new laws are comparatively unimportant, having such titles as "A bill for an act to organize and provide for dissolution of cemetery associations," "A bill for an act to provide for the appropriations for beneficial use of the underground waters of the state," etc.
