They landed laughing and joking, glad that their long inactivity, cramped aboard ship, was over.

The Japanese landing party also totals 1500, and the French, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese and Spanish likewise debarked strong detachments. The British already have numerous forces on duty ashore.

The native districts of Nantao and Chapel were the scene of trouble all day long. There was incessant rifle and machine gun fire and the occasional boom of artillery throughout the afternoon.

British Trooper Slain All the barriers between the native and foreign districts were closed and heavily guarded. The foreign defenders suffered their first casualties when a British Punjab trooper was killed and two were wounded by gunmen firing from an alleyway at the border of the international settlement. Two foreign policemen were injured by bricks thrown from the top of a building on the Nanking road.

The troubles in the native city were largely blamed upon Kuomintang (Cantonese) plain clothes men, who attacked the police stations, captured several and burned one. The shooting in the Chapel and Nantao districts was believed to be chiefly the work of fleeing northern troops and of looters and other lawless elements which have full sway owing to the entire absence of authority in those districts.

Several bullets and some shrapnel fell in the international settlements, and one Russian civilian and several Chinese were wounded by stray shots. Fifty Chinese police from the Chapel district, unable to cope with the lawless element, took refuge within the foreign lines after surrendering their weapons.

Two companies of British soldiers established positions in British-owned properties several miles beyond the settlement boundary to prevent the occupation and looting of these places by Chinese troops.

Business Paralyzed Beginning at noon, the Kuomintang flag—a red banner, with a white sun in a blue field in the upper left corner—began to appear throughout the foreign settlements and was even flown from atop the post office, which is again tied up by a strike.

The general strike is apparently thoroughly effective. All the cotton mills are closed down, and the transport services paralyzed.

Several times this afternoon the foreign police found it necessary to charge crowds and break up gatherings which threatened trouble.

The Cantonese troops reached the Shanghai native city only in small numbers. The main force occupied Lungwa and the Kiangnan arsenal, placing them in control of the city, although a few northerners were still reported in the northern districts.

Thus far (7:30 p. m.), no clashes between the Cantonese and foreigners have been reported.

U. S. Marines Landed WASHINGTON, Mar. 21.—Admiral Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet, reported to the navy department today that he had landed a force of about 1500 marines. He had the municipal council of Shanghai had declared a state of emergency, and the marines were landed at its request.

Landing of American marines in Shanghai is in accordance with the policy laid down by Secretary Kellogg at the time of the original disturbances in that city on the approach of nationalist forces. They are to be employed only for protection of American life and property within the international settlement boundaries.

Marines and bluejackets will be used to see that American rights are not violated although officials here believe that as soon as responsible leaders of the nationalist army establish headquarters, they will take precautions to suppress rioting or looting.

The Cantonese occupation of Shanghai undoubtedly will bring the question of relations between the nationalist government and the western powers up for reconsideration, but it appears unlikely that any step toward recognition of the Cantonese as the government of China is to be anticipated in the immediate future. All western governments have dealt with the Cantonese at Canton, Hankow and elsewhere as de facto authorities.

LONDON, Mar. 21.—The fall of Shanghai to the southern armies, which a month ago was viewed as an approaching calamity, now is taken as a matter of course by the newspapers and their correspondents. Most of them agree that there does not appear to be much real danger to foreign life and property in the international settlement, due to the presence of foreign troops.

If anything, it is pointed out, the fall of Shanghai clarifies the Chinese situation, but whether it will solve any of its fundamental problems any more than did numerous previous military campaigns in the past decade, remains problematical.

accusations later in the morning according to report from the hospital, and his conditions is reported as fair.

Partial Insurance Late reports indicate that there was no insurance on the service garage owned by Mr. Garrison, the building being new. Most of his equipment was saved, however. This was wrecked by the blast before the fire could destroy it completely.

The Churchill garage had insurance on the building, but none on the equipment, all of which was lost, and cars, including one fine new one, to the number of six, were destroyed.

Possibly half of the stock of the Price store was saved, and this loss is believed taken care of by insurance, the building also being covered by some insurance.

An additional damage was done by the blast, which wrecked a large number of windows in the town. The pieces of pipe which struck Billy Ester was carried a distance of 300 or 400 feet to where he stood.

BUICK SALES ARE HIGHER THAN EVER BEFORE FOR FEB.

With retail deliveries amounting to 14,338 cars, the month of February just past showed the largest sales volume ever reached by the Buick Motor Company during this month, according to the announcement of C. W. Churchill, general sales manager, received this morning by O. C. Baker the local dealer.

The best previous February record was reached in 1925, but was 1,750 cars less than the total this year.

Buick production for March has been re-scheduled at eleven hundred cars a day in order to keep pace with this unusually heavy demand of the retail market. The previous schedule called for the same production as March 1926, which was a thousand cars a day.

A revision was found necessary and the increase of a hundred cars a day was made during the first week of the month.

The total sale of 1927 models for the seven months up to March 1 exceeds the high record of 1926 by over 14,000 cars, Mr. Churchill says.

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 21.—Avard Fairbanks, professor of sculpture of the University of Oregon, has been awarded a fellowship by the John Simon Guggenheim memorial foundation. The fellowship, one of fifty announced today from New York, provides funds for a year's study abroad and was conferred in recognition of unusual creative ability in the fine arts.

The Trowel and Float

Suppose you read about that Kentucky woman who is being... getting his equipment moved back into his store on N. Jackson St. after being put out of business by a fire last January. He will have a mighty fine up to date store when organized again. Whitney and Williams had the reconstruction contract. Dunstheimer and Glavin are doing the paint work. Is there anybody at your house who always forgets to close the door? There's one at ours. Being a booster just to be boosting is all right, maybe, but there ought to be something back of the boost. We're fortunate here in Roseburg to have that kind of backing. We're a good town, a good community, good people, good schools, good churches. We've got substantial, progressive citizens and plenty of natural resources. If you can't boost with a background like that we don't know where you could go to find a better one.
