FLASHES OF LIFE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

LOCKHAVEN, Pa.—Happy Nate Hornbush, disciple of Frank Walton, wouldn't pay his taxes and they put him in the hoosegow. After he served eight months they let him out just as the fishing season opened.

WASHINGTON—Having borne the stars and stripes in foreign waters for a longer period than any of Uncle Sam's ships ever did before, the U. S. S. Scorpion, which has been in the Mediterranean 18 years, is starting home in June. Her reward will be sale to the highest bidder.

SOUTHAMPTON, England—After the mighty Leviathan has made 50 more trans-Atlantic voyages perhaps passengers will be able to see their friends 3,000 miles away.

ATLANTIC CITY—Folks here think that a lot of sour grapes are being manifested by other cities. As to protests against the annual bathing beauty parade, Armand T. Nicholas, director-general of the seaguest, suggests an investigation to determine who is keeping the agitation alive.

BRISTOL, England—Lady Astor seems to have been kidding the congress of university students. In a speech on "the art of leisure," she said she had no leisure herself, explaining: "I've got a husband and that's a full time job." And then she went on to reveal a "most disgraceful" thing she had done—danced in the morning on the Plymouth waterfront.

LONDON—There's quite a discussion as to whether men should tip their hats to women in these emancipated days. Some opponents favor a salute which both sexes could use.

JOLIET, Ill.—There were many little fellows at large here 10,000 years ago. Skeletons found in mounds show men had an average height then of five feet four.

MANHATTAN, Kan.—This town in a state dry long before Volstead was famous resembles a famous island in more ways than a name if Stanford Clinton of Northwestern University is right. He said in a college debate he could buy liquor here in less than five minutes. County Attorney Gage has decided not to inquire, since, he says, the statement has no foundation.

PORTLAND, Mar. 29.—Dr. A. E. Rockey, Portland physician and surgeon, prominent here for many years, died last night at his home at Rockholm. Death followed a stroke that occurred on Sunday, although Dr. Rockey had been in failing health for the past three years.

The reputation of Dr. Rockey in medical circles extended far beyond his city and state. He was the official surgeon for the Portland Railway, Light & Power company over a long period and was on the staff of the Good Samaritan hospital. He had done much to promote the cause of scientific medicine and had always been in the forefront in various progressive steps that made Portland recognized as the medical center of the Pacific northwest.

Dr. Rockey was 69 years old at the time of his death. He had been an active practitioner until failing health compelled him to turn his task over to his two sons, Drs. Paul and Eugene Rockey. At the time of the world war the father, as well as the sons, went into the official medical service.

Portland civil life knew Dr. Rockey as an active and valuable member. He belonged to the Arlington, Waverly and Multnomah clubs, and had a wide acquaintance both within and without his profession.
