PORTLAND CARD ROOM LATEST ON THE HOLDUP LIST

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PORTLAND, Ore., April 18.—Three young men burst into Mabel Lum's card room at 41 North Second street last midnight, threw guns on the proprietress and hangers-on, robbed the till and escaped with from $1500 to $1500 in cash, according to police reports this morning.

A description of the bandits was obtained by Mickey Dolan, attendant, who took a few shots at the fleeing bandits as they drove up the street in a light car after the robbery, but who failed to hit any of them, so far as is known.

JOHN GILBERT, SCREEN
IDOL, GETS 10 DAYS, JAIL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., April 19.—John Gilbert, film idol, today had started fulfilling a ten-day "personal appearance" here, but no headlines heralded the fact nor does his name appear in blazing lights across the front of the "theatre" where he is booked.

From a spic and span cell in the city's new jail, Gilbert was contemplating the words of a police judge who yesterday sentenced him to ten days when the actor pleaded guilty to a disturbance of the peace charge. "Amazing" was the first word

DAUGHTERS of MIDAS

by Anne Austin

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Billy Wells, head of the glove department of the Curtis Store, Nyda Lomax, of the cosmetic counter, Winnie Shelton, and a score of other girls, amongst all pretty, with prizes in an intriguing contest staged by T. Q. Curtis, the millionaire owner.

Billy participates in the contest in spite of the protests of Clay Curtis, son of old T. Q., who suspects his father of some scheme. Clay has voluntarily disinherited himself and is living in the Wells home in the poor section of the city, working in a factory by day and writing music at night. Billy is suspicious of Clay's father, too, and her doubts are heightened when the old man announces a second contest. This time each girl is to write an essay telling what she would do if she had one hundred thousand dollars.

Jealousies and misunderstandings spring up among the girls who are participating in the second contest and the store morale slumps alarmingly. On Tuesday, the day of the award, "old T. Q." sends each participant a packed envelope. Just as Billy is about to open hers, a customer calls her attention. She forgets everything when she meets the strange, dark eyes of the man before her. It is some time after his departure that she remembers to open the envelope. She is a winner. She has a million dollars!

"Well, it ought to be a nice vacation," he concluded with a shrug of his shoulders.

FLOOD CAUSES VOTERS TO TRAVEL IN BOATS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
BEARDSLEY, Ill., April 19.—Many Beardsley voters paddled to the polls for today's municipal election.

Voting places in some precincts were isolated by the high waters of the Illinois river and the wagon bridge across the stream, on which many depended to reach the polls, was closed to traffic yesterday.

Seed potatoes, Burbanks, Netted Gems, Pride of Multnomah, Irish Cobbler, American Wonder, Early Rose, Earliest of All and Early Ohio are sold at Wharton Bros.

A chorus of "Yes, sir" answered him.

"Now, ladies, this has been a peculiar contest from first to last. There was no effort on my part to award first, second or third prizes. Miss Shelton, whose name I happened to find first, is not winner of the first prize, since there is no first prize," he glanced fleetingly at the disappointed face of Winnie Shelton, "and Miss Saumate need not feel that all her efforts got ahead of her, for she did not win, tenth place. All awards will be equal—or, he grinned at their astonished expressions, "as nearly equal as possible under the unusual circumstances. As I said, it is a peculiar contest. The ten of you submitted essays which have given me a lot of food for thought. All of those ten essays were good. And I hope you will not be disappointed with your reward."

He paused again, and Billy, nails digging into her palms, felt that she would scream if he kept them in suspense much longer. Again she had that queer impression that all this was of vital importance to her, that she stood on the brink of some great and possibly terrifying adventure.

"I presume most of you know that my secret family is all the family I have now," he went on in a quiet voice, faintly edged with bitterness. "I am a lonely man, not so young as I was, and my home is often dull and lonely for the lack of young life in it."

Billy raised a trembling hand to her lips, as if she were afraid the cry in her heart would force its way out betrayingly. Girls standing about all her drew in their breath sharply, looked at each other in blank astonishment.

"For a long time I've wanted to be a closer friend to the young people in my store—our store," he amended, with grave courtesy. "It may have been a foolish way, but I hit on these two contests, as a way to find among you the girls and women whose ambitions and interests and ideas would most interest me. I thought to find among you those who could, in a real sense, be my friends. I trust that you will not leave this room with false impressions and carry them to the other members of my store family. I do not wish to cause heartaches or jealousies among them. I shall undoubtedly find other ways in which to get better acquainted with all my men and women, boys and girls. I simply used these two contests as a starting point."

He paused and his eyes roved searchingly from face to face, as if he doubted the wisdom of what he had done and said. Billy, watching him with astonishment and pity in her clear blue eyes, fought back an impulse to cry out at him, warningly. "Oh, you're wrong, wrong! You're laying up a trouble for yourself and heartaches for all of us! Stop! Stop! Don't be so infinitely foolish!"

"I hope you ladies will not be disappointed at the odd reward I have planned for you, as a token of my appreciation of your work in this second contest. I want you all to be my guests in my home, for a dinner and dance on next Saturday evening."

He paused and looked down upon their astonished, disappointed, bewildered faces, with that quick, wry grin of his.

"I shall try to see that you have a very good time," he resumed, a little stiffly, and Billy sensed that their unspoken resentment pained him. "It will be a formal dinner party, and your ten dinner partners will of course wear correct evening clothes. I am inviting the men myself, from among my young business associates of Colfax. You will meet them at my house, of course. I shall provide suitable transportation for you to and from my home. Now, if I know anything about the female mind, every mother's daughter of you is saying to herself, 'I haven't got a thing to wear! I've thought of that. I'm going to try, between now and Monday evening, to think of everything that will insure a good time for all. As you all know, Mrs. Lester, the buyer for misses' and ladies' dresses, is just back from New York. While she was there she bought in a fine stock of evening dresses, to retail at around fifty dollars. I've seen them, and I doth if Colfax ever saw a handsomer lot of party dresses at the price. Brenner will say a lot of fancy things about them in his ads, but I think you'll find they're just the kind of dresses you'd like to own."

Pretty, drooping faces had lifted and reviled like flowers in a June shower. Two or three girls cried out involuntarily with pleasure and excitement.

"Now, ladies, before those dresses are placed on sale, you can have your pick of them, as a present from old T. Q." He grinned at his use of the nickname for him.

"I'm also instructing the shoe department and the hatery department to let each one of you pick out a pair of evening slippers and a pair of silk stockings—your choice of anything the store has to sell—and charge them to my account. Now I hope you ain't too much disappointed in your prizes," he added whimsically.

"I declare, I don't know what's got into old T. Q.," Mrs. Corwin, a stout, pleasant-faced widow, whispered to Billy. "You mark my words, he'll be sorry he ever started this foolish business, before he hears the last of it."

"I'm afraid so," Billy answered almost gloomily, though her heart beat fast and racing. The thought of owning—all new at the same time—an evening dress, a pair of evening pumps and exquisite silk hose.

"There's just one thing before I say good night," T. Q. stepped behind his desk, putting the clanking girls at a discreet distance. "I've arranged for Mrs. Lester herself to show you the dresses between now and six thirty, and tomorrow morning between nine past eight and nine, before the store opens. There are a hundred dresses in use, of all sizes, and I'm sure you can all find something you like that will fit you. Any alterations will of course be charged to me. Now, ladies, Mrs. Lester is waiting for you in the French room on the third floor, and if any of you carry spare time this evening, you'll be glad to see you in the morning."

The girls hardly paused to reiterate their thanks, crowding in a laughing excited group to the door. Billy was borne along with the crowd, Lella Sampson's hot, perspiring hand tugging at hers, but over her shoulder she saw Mrs. Corwin hesitate, flushing, painfully, the advance slowly to T. Q.'s desk.

"I'm just praying that there'll be a black lace over silver cloth, and if there is," Nyda Lomax's throaty contralto turned menacing. "I'll have it or scratch out the eyes of any Jane that thinks she can take it away from me."

"I want white, or a silvery blue," Winnie Shelton's high, metallic voice clanged for attention.

"A fifty dollar dress and a fifteen dollar pair of pumps—on, boy!"

Mrs. Lester, imposing in black satin, received them in the French room on the third floor, and with the air of a duchess, waved them to the racks on which the dresses had been hung.

"Please don't grab," she told them sarcastically, as the girls fell upon the dresses with cries of delight. "Here are the fourteen, here, the sixteen, and here are the eighteen. You will kindly confine yourselves to the racks which hold your own sizes. Mrs. Worth, you take a forty, don't you? There are no forties in this lot, but I have found several dresses for you to choose from, in the stock we already had," she added in a more friendly tone.

BEN HUR COMING ANTLERS THEATRE WED., APRIL 27

The announcement that "Ben Hur" the magnificent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cinema spectacle, will be presented at the Antlers theatre on Wednesday, April 27 has aroused wide interest among book lovers, play-goers and moving picture patrons of this city. The pictorialization of General Lew Wallace's immortal story will be presented here by a touring organization consisting of orchestra, projectionists and stage mechanics, in precisely the same manner as it is now being shown in New York, where it has entered upon the second year of its run.

The story "Ben Hur" in the form of novel and play, has fascinated readers and theatre-goers in America for almost half a century. To the majority of people the story in its present form is far more attractive than it was when set forth on the printed page or in the spoken drama. The cinema has the power of presenting the exciting scenes of the chariot race, the sea battle, and the gathering of the followers of Ben Hur, the soldier, in a manner that was impossible through the other mediums of art. At the same time the beauty of the love story and the depth of feeling of the spiritual scenes are retained and perfectly set forth by means of the camera. A very important factor in the success of the presentation is the musical score arranged by David Mendoza and William Axt and performed by a large orchestra.

The making of "Ben Hur" was directed in Italy and in California by Fred Niblo and among the important players were Ramon Novarro, Francis X. Bushman, May McAvoy, Claire McDowell, Kathleen Key, Carmel Myers, Nigel de Brulier, Mitchell Lewis, Leo White, Frank Currier, Charles Boucher, Betty Bronson, Dale Fuller and Winter Hall.

PRESBYTERIANS TO HOLD MEETING AND BANQUET MAY 2

MEDFORD, Ore., April 19.—To raise $5,000,000 in less than two months is the task which Presbyterians of the West have set themselves, under the leadership of Will H. Hays, Andrew Mellon and other leading financiers of the church. The record-breaking total for these Presbyterians is the final third of a $15,000,000 fund, intended to put the ministerial pensions upon an actual basis.

The Laymen's Committee of the Church assumed the task at the last General Assembly after it was shown that the present 210 year old system was not sound.

The new pension plan, endorsed by heads of big corporations, prominent bankers, leading companies and other authorities as "good business," will provide a minimum pension of $600 per year for each aged minister, besides competences for widows and minor children. Under the existing scheme the average pension paid is only $376. The new plan will gradually become a contributory self-perpetuating one, each minister contributing 25 per cent of his salary and each church 75 per cent of the salary.

Leading laymen throughout the United States are finding the expenses of the campaign so that every dollar contributed, or pledged over five years, can go into the pension fund. No part of the cost of the effort the biggest of the kind ever attempted within the denomination, is being charged to the General Assembly, or any branch or fund of the church as a whole or to any individual congregation.

Eastern Presbyterians have raised about two-thirds of the $15,000,000. The fourteen states west of Chicago are being looked to for the balance of $5,000,000 in time for opening of the General Assembly at San Francisco on May 28.

Preliminary campaign meetings have been held in the Presbyteries of California, Oregon and Washington and the campaign will extend from April 21 to May 10.

Opening dinners are planned for the campaign teams in these groups:

April 25 at Eugene, with Fairmount, Cottage Grove, Blachly, and Fremont.

April 21 at Corvallis with Albany, Brownsville, Lebanon, Waldport and Newport.

April 22 at Salem with Dallas, Independence, McMinnville, Gervais, Woodburn, Aurora, Seio, Mill City and Marion.

April 26 at Medford with Ashland, Grants Pass, Jacksonville, Rogue River, Butte Falls, Klamath Falls, Lakeview, Merrill and Phoenix.

April 27 at Marshfield with North Bend, Reedsport, Bandon, Myrtle Point, Langlois, Port Orford and Gold Beach.

SENIOR HIGH MUSICAL

The Glee club and orchestra of the Senior High school will present their annual program in the Senior High auditorium Friday, April 22nd.

One hour of solid entertainment including a chorus of eighty voices, a chorus of twenty pieces and several fine instrumental and vocal solos. The public cordially invited. Admission FREE.

People from every point of the campus began to arrive early Saturday morning at Riddle, to attend the pageant, "The Winning of Oregon." By 10 o'clock there were several hundred people on the grounds, many localities being represented. Roseburg, Myrtle Creek, Riddle, Days Creek, Canyonville, Glendale and smaller rural districts, Winston, Winchester and Millwood, and many other districts were represented by the teacher from each district being present.

At 10:20 the pageant was opened by a beautiful flower drill, given by Mrs. Vanetta Cosgrove of District No. 40. Mrs. Ackert responded to this by a song "Oregon, My Oregon," in which the crowd joined. Other stunts followed, in well prepared order, Miss Lucille Aldridge's school and the Jones school brought out the old settlers in quaint attire. Prominent among whom was "Father John McLaughlin," with white flowing locks, men and women and children in pioneer attire, some wearing the real clothing of their ancestors.

The parade of the Indians was an event worthy of comment. Bands of warriors with paint and feathers, squaws carrying the poles for wigwams and hastily constructing the same, Indian dances, songs, and pow wows and so forth, afforded much amusement. Many other numbers on the program, interspersed with music by the Riddle high school helped to fill out an hour and a half program, which was concluded by the winding of the May-pole by a number of tiny, fairy-like girls from Miss Orilla Peters' room in Myrtle Creek school. Miss Peters has given this same number for fifteen years in the Myrtle Creek district, so it is useless to add that the rendering of it was perfect. At the noon-hour the crowds gathered in the school house with well-filled baskets and a good old-fashioned time was had as the descendants of the pioneers feasted on the fat of the land, possibly never thinking of when their forebears "sat down to mouse and soup" as Whittier tells us about. In the afternoon, some roughing it up games were played between the Myrtle Creek and Riddle teams. A program also was conducted in the afternoon at which Mrs. Ackert presided. The principal speaker was Prof. Henry M. English, of Myrtle Creek, who path of the whole community in this sudden affliction. His son, Gaylord, who was badly burned last week, when his motorcycle caught fire, is said to be recovering from his burns in a San Francisco hospital.

208 Miles An Hour

ON DUNLOP TIRES

Major H. O. Seagrave flashed his 1000 horsepower "Mystery S" speed car across the smooth sands of Daytona beach, Florida, at the rate of 208 miles an hour, shattering the world's record.

Major Seagrave staked his life and car on Dunlop tires. The tires did not heat in any way above normal.

Tire heating is a problem to race drivers as well as every day car owners. Dunlop tires are especially built to reduce friction and heat, the enemies of rubber life, thereby adding more miles and removing tire trouble.
