SAPIRO LIBEL SUIT AGAINST FORD AT END

Heved to mistrial should be granted. "It is deeply regrettable and deplorable that a case which has cost so much money and labor should come to this conclusion. "But when that newspaper report became known it seemed, and seems now impossible to proceed. "This trial falls to a large extent because justice has been crucified upon the cross of unethical and depraved journalism," said the court.

Gallagher Protests—Gallagher in a formal statement last night disclaimed any intention to come into court today and argue against the part of the motion for a mistrial as based upon Mrs. Hoffman having granted the interview. However, promptly at the opening of court he launched into a 45-minute address so earmarked as an argument against the motion that when he stated in conclusion it was not such an appeal, Hanley was taken by surprise and had to leave the court reporter room to him Gallagher's final remarks.

Gallagher pleaded in an impassioned flight of oratory with the Ford counsel to proceed with the trial with "eleven or ten or four or three jurors." "Where could you get 12 men and women who would be unprejudiced after all this publicity?" he shouted at his opponents as he pounded the table under their noses.

They offered no reply, however, and as Gallagher sat down for the last time in the long trial Judge Raymond slowly, solemnly and apparently with deep emotion, began the remarks which ended the trial.

Views of the Court—"There are, I understand, 300 to 400 witnesses yet to be presented in this case," he said. "No plaintiff or defendant ought to be obliged to come into a federal court and twice present his evidence, but that seemingly is the case because of a desire of a newspaper for something startling. "There is a terribly unfortunate experience for the court."

Judge Raymond asserted that the information in the affidavits had been turned over to the federal department of justice but that he had not received a final report of the investigation and did not at the time know whether there would be criminal proceedings against any one.

Gallagher's Final Shot—At the outset of his address to the bench, the jurist having been sent from the court room, Gallagher termed the mistrial motion "so preposterous it ought not to require an answer."

He spoke of the difficulty of trying a suit against Ford in Detroit, home of 100,000 Ford Motor company employees, who, he said, with their families, made from 200,000 to 300,000 sympathizers spreading propaganda.

"Why, you can't get a better jury than this," he exclaimed with a wide sweep of his arms towards the jurist who had recently vacated his box. He assailed the Ford organization and its detectives for what he said he had learned were their methods in litigation, accusing them of tapping wires, even in the rooms of judges, and seeking to influence jurors.

"It is our frank belief that the entire situation is not brought about by a desire to insure a just verdict but to secure a postponement," he challenged. "All the facts indicate that."

"The affidavits do not justify the granting of such a motion," Gallagher charged towards the Ford attorneys and shouted an accusation at them that they had "so framed the motion as to go far beyond any supporting affidavits."

He asserted that under the lawyers' hands the affidavits had become so embellished and elaborated that they made a public corridor of the postoffice building become an obscure and secluded spot. He said that in their original form the affidavits included the sworn statement that Miller, the alleged go-between for Sapiro and Mrs. Hoffman, had handed Mrs. Hoffman a five pound box of candy and that the statement had been dropped when it was learned that the men jurors merely had paid a card game bet lost to the women as they lided away time in their retiring room during which their presence was not desired.

"If they can't tell Miller from a juror who has been in the court room for five weeks, how can we believe anything he says?" he demanded of Judge Raymond regarding the Ford detectives.

Hanley, the Ford counsel leader, made only a brief reply to Gallagher's address to the court. He insisted that two days ago Gallagher had agreed with the Ford counsel that if nothing else in the allegations was sufficient for demanding a mistrial, the fact that Mrs. Hoffman had conferred with a newspaper man was enough by itself.

The trial ended without Ford ever having been in the court room. Something more than three weeks ago he was injured in an automobile accident and since then, so far as is known, has been confined because of his injuries.

FLASHES OF LIFE

NEW YORK—Charles M. Schwab's ideal of American manhood is John Markle, veteran anarchist operator, whose motto is "I would rather fight than eat" and who proposes to devote millions to promote the welfare of mankind. At a dinner of the Pennsylvanians society, Mr. Schwab said of the great of honor: "You stand for the ideal of American manhood. You have always tried to appear as a rough-neck sort of fellow, but beneath your rugged exterior I know there is a heart of gold."

PHILADELPHIA—Mlle. Avenita Alexeyeva, Russian ballet dancer, thinks she knows why her art was not appreciated when "Carmen" was presented by the Philadelphia grand opera company. In an intermission she went before the curtain and denounced American jazz and other habits and even advised the audience to stop drinking and obey the law. Then out came the general manager with an apology and announcement that Mlle. had been discharged.

NEW YORK—Financial difficulties seem to arise when ex-royalists come visiting. Ernest Heinrich, former prince of Saxony, denied he was trying to sell a royal collection of tapestries. He listed his trip was to acquire information in order to tip the finances of his house on a sound basis along American lines. Prince and Princess Paul Chavayvada of Russia denied they were going into the movies.

NEW YORK—Dogs seemed to prefer brunettes. June Walker, star of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will be laid up two weeks as the result of a bite by a friend's chow. Her hair is dark naturally.

NEW YORK—There will be an enormous bar for the benefit of thirty Americans on the steamship Ile de France, which is to be built for a French line. The bar will be 29 feet long, a record for a ship. A two-story chapel and 60-car garage will be other features of the vessel.

WASHINGTON—Any other shipping board vessel who is directly or indirectly responsible for the transportation or concealment of liquor aboard will be fired. The warning comes from President Dalton of the Merchant Fleet corporation.

NEWARK, N. J.—Some $50,000 worth of liquor seized from J. Bayard Kirkpatrick of West Caldwell.

Your Boy and Your Girl

BY ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D. The Parent Counsellor

Dr. Dean will answer all letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamp, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Address Arthur Dean, in care of The News-Review.

This is America "My father does not believe that a girl needs an education." Just as soon as I see these words I turn to the end of the letter to see the signature of the one who writes it. In nine cases out of ten the name is not Brown, Smith, Jones, Lodge, Lowell, Lawrence, Franklin or Gray. Neither is it usually Scotch, Irish or English.

Now I don't want to offend my might good readers by referring to those parents who came, or their parents who came, from those foreign shores where it is not expected that the girls of the family are to have an education. And, alas, and in lots of instances the boys are not expected to go beyond the elementary school.

My devotion to the interest of boys and girls leads me to be pretty sharp today when I say, even if I do offend some parents who have been "foreigners," that we must not forget this in America. It is not only the country in the world that has a wonderful public school system; the only country in the world perhaps where the tower of opportunity is roofless; the only country in the world where education counts more than ruling families; the only country where women have equal chances with men vocationally, civically, religiously, and socially.

Today's mail has four letters from girls on this very important matter, and in each case the name shows a "foreign" parentage. I put quotation marks around "foreign" because I know we are all "foreign," except the American Indians. Many of my ancestors prayed for the Indians on Sunday and preyed on them the rest of the week. But here are quotations from the letters: "My stepfather does not believe schooling is necessary for girls."

Here's another: "Father and mother say that ability to read and write is sufficient for a girl."

And another: "My brothers can go to college but I can't because my folks think it is not necessary for girls to have education."

And finally: "I am to sit home and get married. Brother is going through high school."

Girls Have Two Jobs—What would you say if I said that school was more necessary for girls than for boys? Would I be right? Now let us see:

A girl has a double job. She has to work while she waits to get married. This means she must be trained to earn a living; she must also be trained to manage a home. For a few years, more or less, perhapse more, she has to work in the world of industry and commerce and then she switches over to the hardest and biggest vocation there is in God's Universe. I am not a bit mushy or sentimental when I say it is a tremendous job. I have never tackled the job of being a woman and I see no chance of ever having the opportunity. As a matter of fact I see no chance of ever well on a tip from a discharged butler is to be returned. Treasury officials have ruled that the warrant was defective.

BOSTON—Modest Clarence de Mar's afraid folks will get sick of seeing him with the marathon. Back on the job setting type next day after he won a 36 mile run, he revealed he had refused considerable jack to show himself in vaudeville. He will remain a printer and an amateur athlete.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—New York is safe from enemy planes, if theoretical destruction of a house this week means anything. Sound detectors theoretically gave the coast artillery of Fort Totten a warning, a 1,000,000 candlepower light theoretically spotted the foes, then Browning guns theoretically made them crash.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Track athletics at Vassar must cease smoking during the entire training season. Puffa stop for other teams a week before the first regular game of the season. Vassar is a girl's college.

NEW YORK—Hotel porters in Europe are following the example of American hoboes who chalk-mark gateposts to indicate whether or not the lady of the house is kind. The porters now mark guests' baggage to show what sort of tips they are to receive. The information was given by Miss Clara Laughlin, author, in an address on wheat was noticeable throughout the county, but some farmers feel that warm weather and rains may bring it back to normal. Federation, which had reached the jointing stage, was hardest hit, while hybrid varieties suffered less. Lee three quarters of an inch thick was reported in some sections.
