BAN JOHNSON'S RETURN TO JOB IRKS MAGNATES

Cobb-Simmons Suspension Adds to Unpopularity of League Head.

NEW PREXY WANTED

General Disappointment Is Prevailing Because His 'Leave of Absence' Not Permanent.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, May 11.—Storm signals, baseball men think, are about to be hoisted again in the American league, now that Ban Johnson has suddenly terminated his "leave of absence" and returned to exercise the functions of president once more.

These observers profess to see the hornet's nest stirred up by Ban's suspension of Ty Cobb and Al Simmons, of the Athletics, thereby removing most of the sting from the attack of Mack's machine. Lifting of this suspension yesterday may smooth matters over temporarily, but there are unmistakable signs of unrest, nevertheless.

The venerable and usually mild-mannered Connie Mack, for instance, bitterly resents the action against his two stars, during whose absence the Athletics dropped three games in a row to Cleveland. Mack shattered a few precedents when he demanded a hearing, took a fling at the umpires as having "too much power" and criticized the steps taken by Johnson.

Johnson last wanted to have another of his periodic show-downs remains to be seen. The last one on the schedule, involving Johnson and Commissioner Landis, was side-stepped by putting Johnson "on leave" and appointing Frank Navin of Detroit to handle the league's affairs.

Baseball men understood that Johnson was to be regarded as a "president emeritus" until his contract ran out in 1935. They started talking about candidates for the active presidency, among them George Wharton Pepper and Mayor Walker of New York. Consequently there has been no little surprise, even among the magnates, at the return of Johnson to active duty.

It has been the understanding of Jacob Ruppert, as an example, that Johnson "was out of office," so far as control of league affairs was concerned. "It surprised me as much as it did everybody else," said the Yankee owner. "It was my belief that Johnson was to remain 'on leave' for the period of the present season. So far as I know he has taken it upon himself to resume his old place."

Maloney Is Favorite—It's the punch, as a rule, that determines the betting odds. Belief that Jack Dempsey still packed the old wallop influenced the odds in his favor over Gene Tunney. For the same reason Jack Delaney was a heavy favorite over Jimmy Maloney in their expensive indoor bout last February.

Maloney, admittedly the harder puncher of the two, has been installed a favorite over Jack Sharkey for their heavyweight "semi-final" on May 19.

"But what if it?" asks Sharkey. "The other favorites got their licking. Why not this one?"

INCREASE IN VOLUME WHEAT CROP FORECAST

Moisture and Soil Conditions Right for Good Grain Crop May Report Indicates.

An Oregon winter wheat crop for 1927 somewhat larger than the 1926 crop now appears probable, says F. L. Kent, statistician, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The most favorable soil moisture condition in several years, indicates the probability of less decrease in condition of the wheat crop with progress of the growing season, than was the case last year, or for the past three years in fact. But due to the late cold spring, with some damage from worms and freezing, the condition of the growing crop as of May 1, is estimated as being about 5.9 per cent lower than a year ago. With normal weather conditions from now on the present condition of the crop should improve rather than fall off.

Opinions differ regarding the wheat damage from the severe frost in the eastern part of the state on April 29th. Due to the early development of the Federation variety which was largely seeded in Umatilla county last fall, there had been sufficient growth to form heads within the plant, and some of these embryonic heads appear to have been injured by the freeze. Some wheat men hold that the damage has been negligible, while others say that the real damage will not be apparent until harvest, or at least, until the kernels are fully formed in the heads.

Winter abandonment appears to have been slightly greater than last year. There was a little more than the usual "drowning out" in the western part of the state as a result of the excessive winter rainfall, and there was a little loss in the eastern part of the state from the activities of wire worms, and also from "heaving" due to alternate daily thawing and refreezing. There were only a very few re-seeded fields however. It is estimated that these winter losses amount to about 3.0 per cent of the acreage seeded last fall, thus leaving approximately 900,000 acres for the 1927 harvest, barring any summer acreage losses. With a condition estimate of 92.0 per cent, a total production of 18,900,000 bushels is indicated. A year ago indications were for a crop of about 19,500,000 bushels, but there was an abnormal drop in condition during the growing season, which appears improbable for the present season.

For the United States the winter abandonment is estimated at 8.4 per cent of the acreage seeded last fall, leaving about 38,701,000 acres on May 1, for the 1927 harvest. With a condition of 85.5 per cent of normal, a production of 593,940,000 bushels is indicated. A year ago indications were for a winter wheat crop of 548,908,000 bushels, and the final estimate in December last was 626,929,000 bushels, which compares with the ten-year average of 572,887,000 bushels.

In the principal producing section, the North Central states, the abandonment is estimated at 8.9 per cent, and the acreage remaining for harvest at 22,362,000 acres; the condition on May 1 was 86.9 per cent compared with 80.2 per cent a year ago, and the indicated production was 345,238,000 bushels compared with 351,922,000 bushels last year, and the ten-year average of 341,141,000 bushels.

Oregon rye acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 12,000 acres (for grain). Condition is placed at 94 per cent of normal, indicating a probable production of about 150,000 bushels. Some of this acreage may be cut for hay.

United States rye acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 3,592,000 acres, with a condition of 88.0 per cent, indicating a probable production of 47,773,000 bushels, which compares with last year's area of 3,513,000 acres, and a production of 40,024,000 bushels. Present indications are that the Oregon fruit crop will be materially less than last year. With a very heavy crop of apples and cherries last year, this will be a "light" year for these fruits. Eastern Oregon cherries were severely damaged by the freeze of April 20th, and peach and apricot fruit buds were mostly killed by the severe cold in January. Loganberries and raspberries were "hard hit" in some localities by winter injury.

April temperatures were below normal, with a severe freeze in some parts of the state the morning of April 20th. Early fruits were severely damaged throughout the eastern part of the state, where sufficiently advanced. At Hermiston, Umatilla county, a minimum of 14 degrees was recorded. Over much of the wheat belt, temperatures of close to 20 degrees were recorded, but not much damage is believed to have resulted.

She said he left Aberdeen April 20, with his ticket and $50. No money was found on his body and his shoes and stockings were missing. Mrs. Zumbach believes he was killed in a stranger who took him to the secluded spot, beat him and searched his body for money.

His feet were bruised and scratched and she thinks he may have recovered consciousness and wandered about afterwards. The coroner found death was due to exposure and pneumonia.

He is survived by nine other children, residents of Ontario, Bend and McCoy, Oregon, and Seattle.

NAMES INSTEAD OF NUMBERS FOR RADIOS FAVORED

NEW YORK, May 11.—On the ground that it would be difficult to feel any real affection for even the most lovable child if that child should be known only by a number or an unpronounceable row of letters, the National Association of Broadcasters today sent out invitations for a giant christening party in the infant industry of radio.

Letters went to the owners of all the 752 broadcasting stations in the country suggesting the advisability of scrapping the station call letters for announcement purposes and substituting for them names which would have a more friendly appeal to the listening public.

"Imagine telling your friends that you are going to Europe this summer on the 216,801 or whatever the numerical designation of one of the floating hotels may be," said L. S. Baker, secretary of the association. "It doesn't sound human. Boats have their license numbers but they also have names and people know them and like them by their names. Even Pullman cars have been given names to humanize them."

THEATRES

ANTHONY'S THEATRE
The action at the beginning and end of the picture, "Just Suppose," now showing at the Anthony's theatre, takes place "somewhere in Central Europe," in the Kingdom of Koronia.

Where is Koronia? If any student of geography can tell he is entitled to a high mark, for Koronia exists only as a myth. It was invented for the purposes of this picture alone. Not only was the Kingdom invented, but it was given a national flag, which appears in many scenes.

The striking feature of this flag is a rampant winged horse. Some one has pointed out that this horse bears a striking resemblance to the Pegasus of the Muses, a very poetic symbol.

And the uniforms? Did ever a country have its soldiery costumed in such gala and picturesque attire? The answer is "No." Because the art designers for the picture were instructed to produce uniforms that would outshine those of any known court or army.

LIBERTY THEATRE
Marie Prevost has added stimulus to the beauty spot fad. In just may have rested unused a few days, before, the symbol of "man bait" now shrieks for attention.

Supporting Miss Prevost in "Man Bait," which comes to the Liberty theatre today, are Kenneth Thomson, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Eddie Gribbon, Adela Glesson, Louis Naudaux, Betty Francisco, Sally Rath and Fritz Ridgeway.

"Man Bait," her current Metropolitan star production, the scintillating comedy-drama, a heart-shaping piece of court plaster on her cheek which she classifies as her "man bait." It succeeds the diaphanous gown and the rolled hose as an allurement for enmeshing the unwary male.

Since Miss Prevost has thus popularized the tiny dab of plaster there has been a rush in the ranks of the "pretty" "vixens" to follow the star's lead. Where a speck of coast conference games, suddenly came to life, and yesterday walloped the University of Washington's nine by a 13 to 3 count. Joe Johnson, star shortstop and field captain of the Huskies, broke a bone in his ankle in the second inning, sliding to third base, and will probably be out of the game for the rest of the season.

Three home runs, four doubles and a triple, enlivened the afternoon's performance. Oregon men accounted for two of the homers, the one triple and one of the doubles Oregon gathered in 13 hits, while the Huskies tallied 10. The Huskies erred five times, while Oregon was credited with two errors.
