BLACK DAYS FOR THE BLUES 'CAUSE NOW IT'S THE WEARIN' OF THE GREEN

Trees and Frocks Turn to Nature's Restful Shade

BY BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, May 25.—The blues-rage, that threatened to crowd all other colors off the fashion map early in the spring, seems about to succumb to the smart New Yorker's preference for green.

Everywhere I turned this past week I saw green! Not only in the budding trees and blossoming window boxes, but in pretty frocks, graceful evening gowns, suits and coats.

Perhaps the happiest use of green for costumes this season was the choice the former Jennet Remsen Lloyd made for her wedding to Halstead Hawley Myers.

Of apple-green chiffon and filmy lace of matchless color were fashioned, little boleros and the deep borders of the skirt were of the lace, worn with green horse-hair braid picture hats with smashing bows of soft velvet ribbon.

Dancing at the Ritz Carlton the other evening was another charming green creation—enhancing the beauty of Nancy Glave. It was a short, little frock, with its tiers shading from a bright green through three tones to a soft green.

I noticed, Miss Gorkau Sanford shopping on Park Avenue in a smart Nile green sweater suit with fox fur neckpiece.

Soft, pastel stripes on the green background ran around the jumper

Elizabeth Baasett wore a leaf green, crepe-backed and silk frock which had a tiered skirt of knife pleats and a Vionnet neckline with a half dozen or so pearl buttons running down the left side. She wore pearls and her corset silk turban of a lighter green had a little pearl ornament.

Green has its advocates among the smart debts, too. Meeting at the home of Mrs. Hulbert Baasett to plan for another of those benefit dinners that keep society on the wing, was one whole davenport of young beauty garbed in springlike green.

Dorothy Root preferred a deep tone of green that crept for her two-piece costume with its front skirt width accented in pleated. Rose faced the open-neck and the

Lighter than Nile

A green that was lighter than Nile, but not quite mint, was Geraldine Shepard's choice. Her one-piece frock with its kick pleats in front and plain back had an unusual trimming—inserts fashioned of narrow bits of the goods making an openwork design. The collar of this insertion was laced through with a wide black satin ribbon that formed the tie. Black faced her cuffs and fashioned her hat.

Green accessories often accompany a beige or gray costume. I noticed several smartly dressed women with a green umbrella, rain coat and purse combination. Mrs. Hunter Marsden was decidedly chic on the links in a white costume with green shoes and matching hat.

So popular, in fact, has green become that there are now said to be 25 different—and entirely new green tones in the color card for summer. Practically every costume will have its green touch—even if it is only in the leaves of the inevitable flowers that adorn practically every shoulder.

Cameron-Cobb Nuptials to Be On Wednesday Eve

Quite the largest and most eventful social affair of the coming week will be the marriage of Miss Lois Dillard Cobb, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. A number of out of town guests are to be present for the wedding. Following the ceremony a reception will be held for the members of the wedding party and guests at the William L. Cobb home at 355 South Main street.

The bride-elect is a member of a prominent family and has taken an active interest in social affairs of the younger set. She is a graduate of Roseburg high school and has attended Willamette University.

Seated about the table, beautiful in appointments, were the queen and the Misses Wave Reed, Ida Kinney, Verus Houser, Marion News and Mrs. G. V. Wimberly, chaperon.

Miss Cobb Honor Guest at Charming Dinner

One of the many lovely affairs planned by groups of her friends this week for the pleasure of Miss Lois Cobb, a charming bride-elect, was the 6-30 o'clock dinner on Monday evening at the McMillan home at 122 West First avenue, north, given by Mrs. Louisa McMillan, Miss Josephine McMillan and Miss Veretta Kohlhaugen.

The rooms were attractive with old fashioned garden flowers, sweet peas combined with snapdragons, pink poppies and roses being used in tall baskets and forming an effective pink and white color motif.

The table, with a centerpiece of sweet peas, Cecil Brunner roses and maiden-hair fern and tall pink candelabra on either side, was appointed with tiny bride and bridegroom placecards. A miniature bride marked the cover of the honoree and baskets of pink with Cecil Brunner rose sprays attached were used as favors. Clever verses of good wishes at each cover were read. Another feature of the dinner hour was the fortune punch board.

Following the dinner hour the guests sewed and chatted and were entertained by radio music.

Enjoying the affair were Miss Lois Cobb, Mrs. W. L. Cobb, Mrs. L. A. Dillard, Mrs. Harrie Booth, Mrs. Wm. Cox, Mrs. Geo. M. Bradburn, Miss Rosina Porter, Miss Elvan Strader and the hostesses.
