Camouflaged Barn Conceals Still

This shows how moonshine makers in Sonoma county, Cal., camouflaged one side and an end of an old barn in sight of a traveled road as a farm cottage with sleeping porch. Inset is a view of the still worth $75,000 and capable of producing 250 gallons of 170 proof alcohol a day for San Francisco wholesale gin dispensers. Below is the other end of the barn, uncamouflaged. The operators slept in tents some distance away.

MRS. LUCY ANN WATSON BURIED SATURDAY

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy Ann Watson, who died last week, was held Saturday afternoon in the chapel of the Douglas Funeral Home. The room was filled by the many friends of the deceased and there were numbers of beautiful floral pieces. Dr. Frank B. Matthews officiated and interment took place in the Masonic cemetery. H. C. Stearns was in charge of arrangements.

FARM POINTERS

For too little pasture grass seed is grown in the Pacific northwest, according to G. R. Hyslop, professor of farm crops at the Oregon experiment station. Growers have sent perfectly good money year after year to the east or abroad for pasture seed when it might well have been grown here. They could produce enough white clover, an expensive item of mixture, to supply all local needs and to ship out a surplus.

In so far as sugar content and yield of Oregon sugar beets is concerned numerous places in the state from the coast to Snake river will grow sugar beets of yield and quality good enough for the factory, reports the experiment station after nearly 40 years of trial. But more than soil and climate are necessary to agricultural production of sugar beets. For successful manufacture there must be an assured volume of raw materials every season.

Crude powdered sulphur 99 per cent plus pure is the most concentrated form to use as Oregon soil fertilizer, says the experiment station, saving freight and cartage. Availability for plant food is in proportion to the fineness or surface area, so to be properly effective it is so ground as to pass through a sieve with a 30-inch mesh. On sandy lands 60 to 75 pounds every two or three years now seems the better practice.

PATRIARCHS AATENTION

Election and installation of officers at regular meeting of Union Encampment Wednesday evening, July 13. Three candidates will be given the Royal Purple degree. Refreshments.

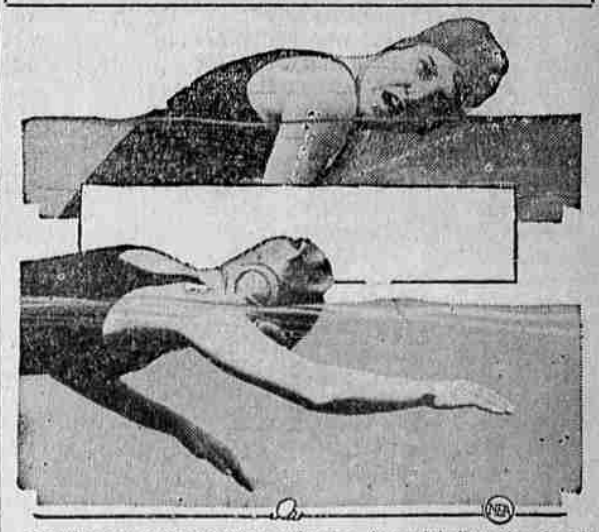
SWIMMING SIMPLIFIED

Breathing and Confidence Vital Assets to Swimmers

BY JAMES A. LEE

Athletic Director, Cleveland (Ohio) Athletic Club



Showing how to breathe when swimming. At top inhaling when face is above water, and below, exhaling through nose when face is below water.

I believe every person should know how to swim, because ability to swim provides a safeguard against drowning and affords enjoyment of a healthful recreation.

Self-confidence is one of the greatest assets to the beginner. If you are shy of water, you can overcome this timidity by submerging the face several times before attempting to learn to swim.

Another asset to good swimming is ability to breathe properly. All modern strokes are hinged with this method of breathing—in by the mouth above the water and out through the nose under the water.

You can master this by the following breathing exercise: Enter the water about waist-deep, bend forward with face near the surface of the water, take a deep breath through the mouth, close the mouth, then duck the head and exhale slowly through the nose under water.

Keep the eyes open.

Repeat the exercise until free bubbling at the nostrils assures you that the air is being exhaled without trouble.

Tomorrow — How to Begin.
