LEGAL MINDS ON PARADE.

Smart lawyers in this country have become the great friends and boon companions to all people and corporations whose actions have come under suspicion.

All this is preface to comment on Justice William Hitz's sane finding that Albert Fall and the two Dohenys must stand trial on bribery charges in connection with the famous $100,000 brown satchel naval reserve oil scandal of 1921.

1. President Harding had no power to transfer jurisdiction of naval oil reserves to the secretary of the interior.

2. Since Harding's order was invalid, Fall had no authority to lease the reserve.

3. If Fall had no authority to lease the reserve, he could not be bribed into doing it.

4. If he couldn't be bribed into doing it, the charge of bribery should be dismissed.

Any collection of average high school freshmen, presented with this classic bit of legal "reasoning," would laugh; but our curiously, comically serious lawyers must argue the thing forever and a day.

Justice Hitz, after five weeks' deliberation—a reasonable time for him to look up precedents—handed down the opinion that Fall and the Dohenys evidently acted on the assumption that the order was valid, and that a crime therefore could be charged.

The whole thing would be funny if it were not so deadly serious. Judges and barristers of real ability recognize that legal procedure is almost hopelessly involved in settling just such points at law as this, and they are pleading incessantly for simplification of codes and precedents.

These balanced jurists pride themselves that their briefs and decisions are prepared in simple English, and not in the ridiculous dialect of legal pomposity which masquerades as legal learning.

When the whole profession becomes of this mind, the lawyers of the land will no longer cut the comic figure they do now in the eyes of rational individuals whose dream of Utopia is a world filled with people of horse sense.

He, of course, deprecates greatly that any facts that were published in a periodical so closely associated with his name in the minds of the public should be untrue.

The articles in question dealt with cooperative marketing. The Dearborn Independent has published repeatedly articles dealing with various phases of this subject and of other subjects of interest to the farmer. If the advancement and development of cooperative marketing has suffered by reason of the publication of these articles then we sincerely regret it. We recognize cooperative marketing holds promise of substantial relief to the farmer and the grower."

Discovering Future Leaders

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 17: Discovering Future Leaders—1 Samuel 16:4-13.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.

Out of the failure of Saul and the tragic suicide of a man who came to the kingly leadership in Israel under most favorable circumstances, but who went down to defeat through lack of moral discipline and through the insidious power of jealousy, comes another kingly figure whose career also was to be characterized by deep and tragic sins, but in whom, in contrast with Saul, the finer elements ultimately triumphed.

David, whom in our lesson Samuel is represented as anointing king of Israel, has become, through the Hebrew scriptures, a world figure of traditional greatness and interest.

Sweet Singer of Israel.

The Psalms, the beautiful and in some respect terrible poetry of Israel, are associated with his name, though probably only a limited number of these were actually psalms of David. He is known as the "sweet singer of Israel" though there are psalms that are terrible in their wrath and grandeur and that reflect the awful, rather than the sweet and tender and beautiful.

This varied character of the Psalms is representative of the strong contrasts in David himself. The "sweet singer of Israel" was a man of war, so bloody in his career and achievements that, according to the records of the Old Testament, he was not permitted to fulfill the aspirations that he had for the building of the temple, and passed on that great achievement to his son Solomon.

David stands as a great representative figure in human life, and in the records of that life we can discern a great deal that is necessary for a well balanced judgment concerning humanity. David represents the way in which the highest and best aspirations of men did not explode, police said, because the fuse burned out within a few inches of the charge.

The Storck's Nest and Gift Shop, at 564 N. Jackson, will be closed for the next three weeks. FREDRA BRAUNINGER.

Text: 1 Samuel 16:4-13.

And Samuel did that which the Lord spoke, and came to Bethlehem; and the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and said, Comest thou peaceably?

And he said, Peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord; sanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

And it came to pass, when they were come, and he looked on Eliab, and said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him.

But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.

Then Jesse called Elnadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

Then Jesse made Shammah to pass by. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

Again, Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and behold, he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him: for we will not sit down till he come thither.

And he sent, and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he.

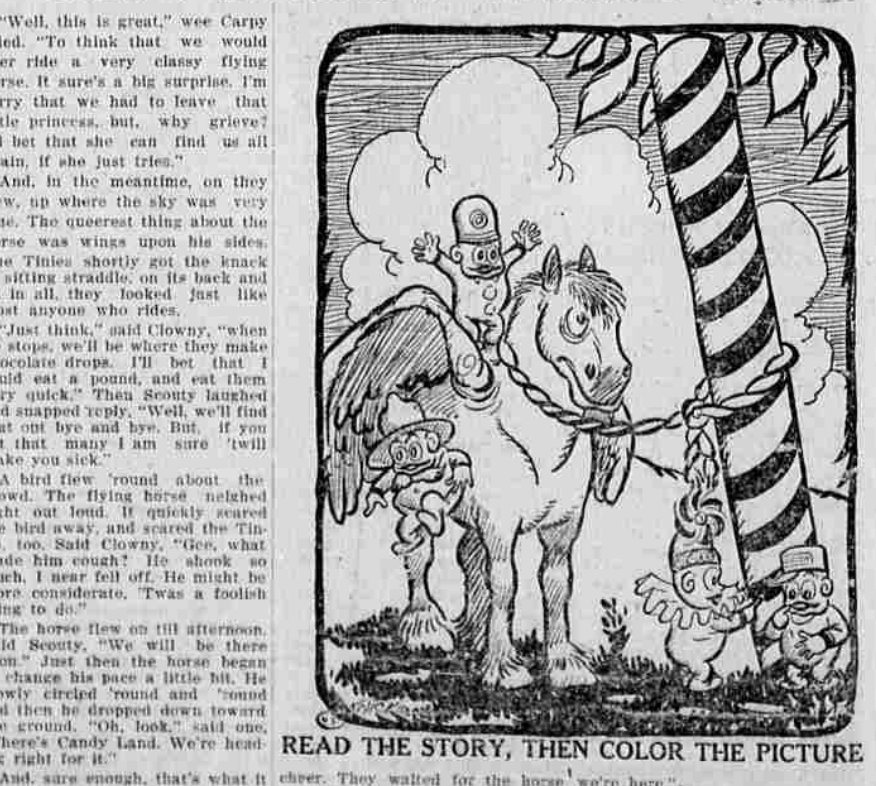

Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren; and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.

One woman, writing, recalled a statement that she heard her father make when she was a child, that it was quite a common thing for him to get up in the night and hand out at least twenty "drinks" of water. The parent must be alert at every sound and call. A sudden change of weather may demand more cover; a matter of thirty minutes or more might prove disastrous to the baby if delayed that long; and a thousand and one things demand attention day and night. The baby's food must be just right and it must be given at the exact time schedule for the baby's best interest; the clothing must be constantly adjusted; it must be protected from flies and other pests and dangers; it must be constantly watched for symptoms of illness, and immediate action taken when such occurs. In fact, if there is any job in the world requiring all the time of at least one individual, it is the job of properly looking after a baby. For the good of the world and of the race, very near a hundred per cent of mothers find this job attractive and appealing, and find it a joy and pleasure instead of drudgery. It is well that such is the case, but it is none the less hard on the mother.

Yes, indeed, raising a baby, as the English woman novelist puts it, is a full-time job.

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

have been oftentimes associated with the most tremendous temptations and with serious moral lapses. David, it should be remembered, besides being a man of blood and an adulterer and a murderer, in fact his adultery led to murder, for having wronged Uriah he sent that valiant man to his death under the most atrocious circumstances.

Show Honesty of Scriptures.

We must not, in justice to the Old Testament narrative and the proper study of the Bible, neglect these terrible facts and indictments that are recorded against David. It is not a profound tribute to the high integrity of the Scriptures that they should record with such impartiality the evil deeds of David as well as the good things that were in him?

On the other hand, we should not allow even the foul sins of David to blind our eyes to the good that was in him. If there is one thing that stands out very strongly and clearly from the record of his life, it is this—that even an adulterer and a murderer may still have a strongly marked upon his soul the image of his Creator and may have deep down in his heart, beneath his temptations and his falls, the appreciation of good and the aspiration for the higher life.

Lesson in David's Life.

The study of the life of David is calculated to produce in men a rare spirit of discernment in their quest of good, and it is in the power to see the good, even in the hearts of men who seem wicked, that we attain most nearly to the vision of Christ. Even concerning those who crucified Him Jesus said, "Father forgive them; they know not what they do."

Our lesson brings David before us in the attractive quality of his youth, ruddy, and physically very beautiful. It is well that we grasp this picture as the necessary starting point in the study of a varied life strangely full of intense contrasts.

Future lessons tell the story of David's development, both in good and in evil ways.

NEW DRY CHIEF TO MAKE NO RADICAL CHANGES

(Associated Press Local Wire) SALEM, Ore., July 16.—George Alexander, of Hillsboro, today took active charge of the state prohibition department as the successor of William S. Levons. Alexander was recently appointed by Governor Patterson.

Alexander said upon taking office that he will construe the prohibition laws literally, that he will cooperate with sheriffs and other local officers, and that he does not expect to make any radical changes of personnel in the department.

LOS ANGELES BOY GIVEN FREEDOM

After making several desperate efforts to escape from the city jail, Glenn Yan, 16-year-old Los Angeles youth is free today having been released from custody by Chief of Police Vanchn.

The boy confessed to having stolen a motorcycle belonging to a California man. The motorcycle was taken at Winnemucca, Nevada, and was driven to Roseburg where the boy was placed under arrest. He later made two breaks from the city jail, being recaptured each time. The first time he broke from the cell when Joe Frederickson entered the jail to fix a light. He was recaptured and handcuffed and while on the way back to jail broke away from Officer Dietrich but was unable to get away. Then he tore a piece of wood out of the wall and tried to hammer a hole through the ceiling, and in addition, tried to set the jail on fire. Finally after all of these attempts had failed he was turned loose and allowed to go his way to ponder upon the wasted efforts which he put forth.

Following the boy's arrest the California and Nevada officers were notified but the authorities in each state seemed reluctant to go to the expense of dragging the youngster back for trial and while each tried to foist jurisdiction upon the other the Chief of Police decided that if he wanted to retain the city jail as free sleeping quarters for hoboes during the coming winter that he had better not let Yan hang around any longer and so yesterday he escorted the boy to the city limits and told him to start home.

NEWLAND'S JUNE BUSINESS SHOWS ALL 'ROUND GAINS

Increased business brings the standing of June to the highest level of any month of 1927, reports J. O. Newland & Son, local Dodge Brothers dealers. In fact, the volume of business for the June last past exceeds the business of any June in the past three years.

"Our prospects for the future are exceedingly bright," said J. O. Newland. "We have a new line of high grade six cylinder cars, we are expecting the announcement of a new line of lower priced four cylinder cars, and we have a line of high grade trucks that average 91 per cent of all truck requirements.

In addition to our automobile business our accessories sales have shown substantial gains this year, the month of June being practically equal to the greatest June we ever had. Other departments have likewise shown gains, with the exception of parts sales.

"The fact that parts sales have fallen off almost to the lowest month is a tribute to the Dodge car. The fall-off in the face of increasing numbers of Dodge shows the greatly improved quality of the later cars."
