Made Your Will Yet? A Chicago painting contractor died recently and left this masterpiece:

"To my widow I bequeath the knowledge that I wasn't the fool she thought I was, as my bank book will show.

"To my son I bequeath the pleasure of making a living swinging a paint brush; for thirty years he thought the pleasure was all mine. He is going to be sadly mistaken.

"To my daughter I bequeath the sum of $50,000.00. She will need it. The only good piece of business ever did was to marry her.

"To the repairman at the garage I bequeath my truck. He almost ruined it and I want him to have the pleasure of finishing the job.

"To my partner I bequeath the suggestion that he take some other clever man in with him if he expects to prosper.

Conditions probably could be improved in some respects here in this section of the country, but have you ever seen a time when conditions were absolutely perfect? We're having good times—good substantial American prosperity. There is no reason why anyone should hesitate to invest in needed equipment of any kind.

MANY VISITORS AT BOY SCOUT CAMP SUNDAY

A great many visitors were at the Wolf Creek scout camp yesterday, spending Sunday with the boys who are on the second week of their outing and are nearing the close of the camp. The Scouts were given a big feed yesterday, numerous gifts in the way of eatables being presented to the camp. The ideal bakery sent out a huge cake, 3 by 2 feet in size, lettered "Boy Scouts of America" on the smooth surface. The Kiwanis club presented five gallons of ice cream. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald took out a quantity of gum and sandy bars, May Baldwin a quantity of crushed berries, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Finlay and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Russell gave the boys cakes, Mr. and Mrs. Rappin presented four dozen bananas, while numerous other gifts were taken out by others for the youngsters.

The morning was given over to Sunday school, starting at 10 o'clock. Short talks were made by H. C. Darby and O. L. Johnson, and the boys and visitors joined in the singing of four songs. The rest of the morning was free time until noon.

Then in the afternoon there was a championship baseball game between the Doodle Bugs and the Coolies, the Doodle Bugs coming off victorious. Tests in lifesaving were then presented, showing the advancement of the scouts in that phase of their activities. The fire brigade work was also demonstrated.

The scouts this year have the finest camp since the organization first obtained the Wolf Creek site. This wonderful camping spot has been presented to the scouts by the government and is to be made a permanent site for the summer outings. This year the boys have some fine auto tents for quarters. These tents are the gift of Umpqua Post of the American Legion. Per-

Plain Comfort

No frills about this house, "The Kingston." It's plain and thoroughgoing American type affords all the attractiveness and comfort of more pretentious homes. FIRE WEATHER WARNING SERVICE IS ESTABLISHED

The Department of Agriculture and other agencies concerned with the protection of federal, state and private forests from fire are keeping as watchful an eye on the weather these days as the navigators of ships at sea.

Increasing realization of the important role the weather plays in the forest fire hazard has led the weather bureau of the United States department of agriculture to establish a systematic forest fire-weather warning service in several sections of the country, and regular forecasts are being sent out to apprise foresters and forest owners of dangerous fire weather so that they may shut down logging operations and slash burning, and mobilize fire-fighting units with the least possible delay.

In the Pacific coast region, where some of the most valuable forests in the United States are situated, the fire-weather warning work has been under way for some time. Fire-weather forecasts are issued twice daily by the weather bureau and are disseminated by telegraph to important key points, by radio and by newspapers. The radio broadcasting of these forecasts is one of the most recent developments, and fire-weather bulletins now are being sent out from 15 Pacific coast and northwestern stations.

The worst fires in Washington and Oregon occur in connection with the dreaded east wind. When these winds are preceded by a period of warm dry weather fires start easily.

The fire-weather warning service now is in operation in seven districts: California, with headquarters at San Francisco; Oregon, with headquarters at Portland; Washington, with headquarters at Seattle; Montana and northern Idaho, with headquarters at Spokane; southern Idaho, with headquarters at Boise; Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, with headquarters at Duluth; New York and New England, with headquarters at Boston. Within the districts, subcenters are maintained, such as Albany for the Adirondack region of New York, New Haven for Connecticut, etc. A partial service also is in operation for the protection of the Appalachian forest region in the South Atlantic states.

At the various substations weather bureau and forest officers are cooperating in studying and observing fire-weather conditions. Several of the substations are making studies of conditions in the upper air. Relative humidity, a term used to represent the relative amount of moisture in the atmosphere, also is closely watched. When the relative humidity is high, materials absorb moisture from the air, and when it is low the air absorbs moisture from all materials. Extreme forest fire hazards are always the result of low humidity. The importance of this factor is indicated by the fact that some insurance companies are now granting reduced rates on timberland in the Pacific northwest when the owner agrees to suspend all logging operations for any period during which the relative humidity is below 30 per cent.
