QUEBEC WELCOMES PRINCE OF WALES

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
QUEBEC, July 30.—The Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier Baldwin, visiting Canada to take part in the diamond jubilee celebration, were officially welcomed to Canada this morning, given an enthusiastic reception.

In English and in French, the mayor of Quebec welcomed first the prince and then Mr. Baldwin. In part the mayor said:

"We greet your royal highness the ambassador of peace whose long and indefatigable journeys through the different dominions of the commonwealth have so much contributed to strengthen the bonds which link together the nations of the British empire."

"We also extend to his royal highness Prince George, the best wishes of our hearts in this extensive voyage which will mark an eventful period of his life. We shall keep a fond remembrance of this charming prince."

AUTO GUEST DAMAGE LAW GOES TO SUPREME COURT

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
PORTLAND, Ore., July 30.—The state supreme court will pass on the constitutionality of that feature of the state traffic law, enacted by the last Oregon legislature, which prohibits guest passengers in automobiles from suing the operator of the car for damages in case of accident.

Presiding Circuit Judge Morrow yesterday upheld this feature of the law in sustaining a demurrer in the damage suit brought by Mrs. Virginia M. Stewart of Portland, against the Redmond Garage, of Redmond, Oregon, in which Mrs. Stewart seeks damages of $30,000 against the automobile operators.

MINERAL CLAIMANT HALTS PACIFIC HIGHWAY WORK

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
REDDING, Calif., July 30.—In an effort to enjoin him from interfering with construction work in the rerouting of the Pacific highway at his station, the state department of public works, has filed injunctive proceedings against George H. Bonville, owner of a service station near La Moine, Bonville, it is alleged, has threatened and driven off at the point of a gun contractors working on a piece of land which he declares he holds as a mineral claim. The department of public works is questioning the validity of his claim.

FARM SITUATION UNCERTAIN DUE TO LATE CORN CROP

The backward and unpromising condition of corn is the feature of the crop situation, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, in its August 1 report on the agricultural situation.

While early planted corn is well out in harvest, late plantings have made poor growth. The net result is a very spotted corn prospect, with the possibility that a considerable part of the crop will ear late, on short stalks and the frost hazard will loom large.

The other principal crops made up some time during the past month and are now nearer normal. Haying is well along, a large crop secured in generally good condition, according to the report. Potatoes are doing very well and appear likely to make an ample though not excessive crop. Cotton has made good progress, on the whole, though there is a widespread weevil menace throughout the eastern belt.

Wheat harvest is now moving up into the north, with threshing returns becoming more satisfactory. Winter wheat yields were disappointing in the southern belt but Nebraska is threshing out the greatest crop in its history. Spring wheat in the north shows the best prospect in five years except in some local areas bordering the Rocky mountain territory. The world wheat crop appears about the same as last year, more wheat in Europe being offset by probable shorter supply in Canada.

"Our wheat belt," says the report, "reverses the conditions of last year, when the southern area had an excellent crop and northern spring wheat was a near failure." Another reversal of conditions is noted in the corn belt where the present high-priced corn and low hogs represent the opposite of last year's situation.

The curtailment in corn belt feeding operations appears likely to extend to lambs. This will act presumably in the direction of higher lamb prices next winter. The bureau says that the very poor lamb crop in the west this season has temporarily averted a market excess which the sheep industry is due to face eventually if conditions increase by a million head a year as it has done since 1922.

General conditions are reported good on the Pacific coast and similarly in the Rocky mountain states except for drought in Utah and Nevada. A big wheat crop is being harvested in the Pacific northwest.

The general effect of price movements during the last two months, according to the bureau, has been to improve the exchange position of the important cash crops but to cause some recession among the livestock products. Cotton, corn, wheat, and potatoes are noted as being relatively higher priced while hogs and eggs are now selling at serious disadvantage to producers.

The bureau's index of purchasing power of farm products in terms of nonagricultural commodities stands at 85, compared with 87 one year ago, 91 two years ago, 82 three years ago, the five year average being considered as 100.

ASK GOVERNMENT TO MAKE STUDY OF WOOL AGENCIES

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Representatives of the cooperative wool marketing associations who have taken steps for the development of a national organization of wool growers, are requesting that the federal government, through the Division of Cooperative Marketing, make a study of existing federal agencies covering marketing of wool.

Additional members of the organization committee include: R. A. Ward, general manager, Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers, Portland, Ore.; C. J. Fawcett, sales manager, National Wool Exchange, Boston, Mass.; M. C. Walsh, Boston representative, Ohio Wool Growers' association, Boston, Mass.; T. I. Ferris, president, Indiana Wool Growers' association; H. J. Hooper, secretary-treasurer, Utah Wool Growers' association; Prof. H. E. Erdman, University of California, Berkeley, Calif.

Messrs. Ward, Fawcett and Walsh were among the speakers at the wool marketing conference of the American Institute of Cooperation at Northwestern University here.

Selling wool at the ranch is at best a plan with disadvantages, and selling of wool at auctions once a week when direct trade is slack or at other times, is a method that might well be considered by a strong cooperative marketing organization of private consignment house in the United States. Such a plan would have enabled the holders of wool to get a considerably better price than they received in 1921 when the bottom fell out.

This was among the suggestions voiced at the wool marketing conference of the American Institute of Cooperation at Northwestern University Saturday by R. A. Ward, general manager of the Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers.

Another suggestion was the formation of strong regional organizations brought about by consolidation of state wool marketing associations. Each regional group would comprise 15 districts, each choosing a director, and from those regional groups would be chosen 15 directors of the main organization which would have headquarters at Boston and would do the selling for the usual cost of 1 or 1 1/2 cents a pound. This would be controlled by the wool associations, Mr. Ward pointed out.

Such an organization, among other things, could find a way to set up weekly wool auctions, said Mr. Ward. The wool auctions tried in New York in 1894 failed, he said, but the plan is feasible. He pointed to the success of the Australian wool auctions, and quoted Dalgety's, of Australia, as writing him that with proper attention to grading and packing, there is no reason why the plan should not work out in the United States.

A great service would be rendered the wool growers, said Mr. Ward, if the Department of Agriculture would compile figures showing the rise and fall of wool prices over a period of years, which would contain prices at shearing time and in season, and at the ranch as well as in the wool markets. The incomplete information possessed by wool cooperatives at present, he said, shows that wools are higher at shearing time than in season, two or three years in every cycle of seven to 11 years.

The proper time to sell wool, he added, is not when all growers compete in dumping their offerings on the market and when mills are idle, but from the middle of August to January or February when mills are most active. It was also noted that cooperative organizations usually get most wool when large amounts have accumulated. Consequently, they then cannot but secure a relatively low price for the grower. He pointed out, however, that a very large proportion of those who joined their group in 1921 are still members, because cooperative marketing has benefited them ever a period of years.

Mr. Ward also asserted that the desire of wool growers to sell before shearing is contrary to all good business practice.

Nation's Fans Hail Johnson

WALTER JOHNSON

Sport fans of the nation are honoring this veteran of the national game. He is Walter Johnson, who, on Aug. 2, 1907, pitched his first game of big league baseball. Next Tuesday, marks the twentieth anniversary of his debut, and on that day he will twirl the game for the Washington club against Detroit, the same team he pitched against in that first contest.

Johnson has pitched more years, has taken part in more games, won more victories, scored more shutouts, struck out more batsmen, worked more consecutive scoreless innings than any other pitcher in the history of the American league. And he is still going.

Billy Evans, for 23 years an American league umpire, will make a special trip to Washington to umpire the anniversary game Tuesday. For it was Evans who called "em in that first game in 1907.

PLANE TESTING PLAN TO REDUCE OCEANIC MAILS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
U. S. S. DESTROYER, LAWRENCE, (off Pelee Island), Aug. 1.—Clarence Chamberlin hopped off from the deck of the liner Leviathan in his Fokker biplane at 8:15, daylight saving time, to fly to Pelee Island, N. J. The hop was made from a specially constructed runway on the Leviathan and was the first flight take off ever to be made from a passenger liner.

Chamberlin's feat was an experiment to prove the practicability of combining steamship and airplane routes to expedite mail service and to some extent passenger travel. Although the auxiliary airplane service to be inaugurated by the United States lines will eventually accommodate passengers who are in particular haste, it is intended primarily to expedite the mails. It is estimated reducing the trans-Atlantic passage to three days instead of five. Chamberlin carried no passengers in his test flight today.

TRAVIS, FORMER GOLF KING, DEAD

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
DENVER, Colo., Aug. 1.—Walter J. Travis, who 20 years ago, occupied much the same position in American golf as Bobby Jones does today, has sunk his last putt. The veteran New Yorker died here yesterday after a long illness and his body will be taken east today for burial at Manchester, Vermont.

From 1898, when he made his first bid for golfing greatness, until the war Travis was a mighty figure in the amateur ranks. He was the first American player to win the British amateur championship. He won at Sandwich against a field of 194 competitors in 1904 while he was still amateur champion of the United States. Travis was 42 at that time.

His achievement abroad, strangely enough, marked the high water mark of his golfing career, and never again did he figure as a contender for a national championship. In all, Travis held the American amateur title three times, the metropolitan championship four times and countless other titles.

MURDER CASE DEFENDANT. AT VANCOUVER IS ILL

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
VANCOUVER, Wash., July 30.—The trial of Luther, Ellis and Ted Baker has been recessed until next Monday, on account of the illness of Luther Baker. The Bakers are accused of the murder of Sheriff Lester M. Wood.

Luther Baker's condition is not considered serious by Dr. H. C. Tolson, who examined him today. It was reported caused by indigestion and nervousness.

Mrs. Annet Wood, widow of the slain sheriff, took the stand yesterday for the state. She was composed and testified as to her husband's movements of the day he was slain.

Deputy Sheriff J. B. Miller testified that he was with Wood when he was killed and identified Luther Baker as the man who had fired the fatal shot.

CAROL SAYS HIS RENUNCIATION WAS FORCED FROM HIM

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
PARIS, Aug. 1.—Former Crown Prince Carol's declaration that his renunciation of his rights to the Rumanian throne was under duress and therefore not binding, is causing but slight disturbance in Rumanian quarters in Paris.

"His action may create a real Carol party in Rumania, his partisans say, or it may, according to his opponents, prove to the world, if not to him, that he is definitely out of the running. Carol's statement, made to the Associated Press Saturday evening, gave no inkling of any determination to try to mount the throne immediately; he merely announced his candidacy and said he was waiting to be urged.
