ELECTRIC STORMS INFLICT HAVOC IN COLUMBIA FOREST

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 3.—Electric storms unaccompanied by rain three days in succession have created a dangerous situation in the Columbia National Forest in Washington. Reports to district forest headquarters here, today told of an unknown number of lightning fires started yesterday afternoon. Those were added to the forty or more started Sunday and Monday.

A new Rock Creek fire in the middle of the great Yacont burn developed yesterday in addition to the three large fires already burning there. An emergency crew of fighters was dispatched today from Portland to make the 15 mile hike into the territory.

The forest has another new blaze on Little White Salmon. Most of the lightning fires are small, but the country is so difficult of access that forest officials fear that some of them grow large before they can be attended to.

PACKERS BLAMED FOR PLIGHT OF PRUNE GROWERS

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 3.—That little or no hope of effective organization to handle this year's prune crop remains, but that action must be taken at once to insure organization in the future, was the unanimous opinion reached here yesterday at a meeting held in the office of Seymour Jones, state market agent, and called by Paul V. Maris, director of the O. A. C. extension service.

Leaders among public and semi-public agencies concerned with organization of the northwest dried prune industry, the Portland Chamber of Commerce marketing department, the committee of nine named at the Corvallis convention and the growers themselves, were present.

Blame for the present condition, from the growers' standpoint was laid at the feet of the packers through their failure to complete their part of the outlined grower-packer plan presented at the Corvallis convention by the committee of five and adopted with some modification. How their disagreement was itself brought about through premature action in price quoting by one California packer, was reviewed.

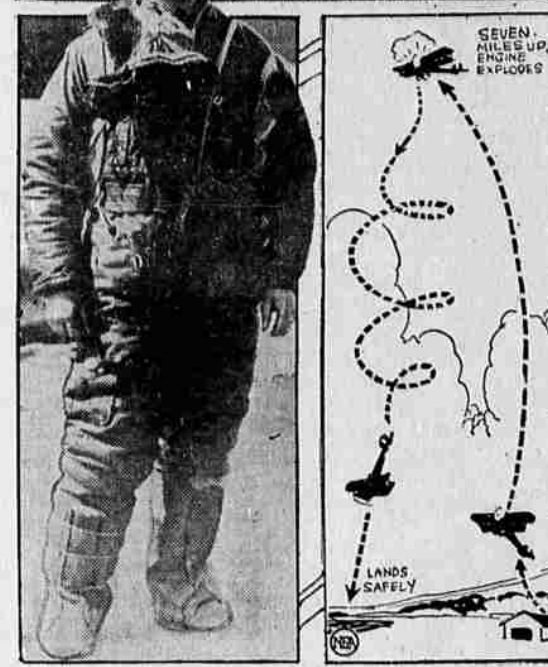

"Smoke out the packers," was the nubbin of the plan for the future advocated by those in conference and with this in mind it was unanimously agreed to ask the committee of nine to proceed at once to formulate contracts needed to put the convention plan into effect for next year and submit the packer contracts to the growers operating in Oregon for their signatures, such contracts to be placed in escrow after being signed and to become effective only after a successful campaign to sign up 90 per cent of the prune acreage has been carried out.

Unless the packers agree and actually sign the contracts on or before October 1, leaving plenty of time to stage the grower campaign by January 1, it was agreed that the only thing left for all elements concerned to throw themselves into a campaign to organize the growers into a complete organization to control cooperatively the entire industry without regard to the present private packers.

No cure for bacillary white diarrhea, which commonly locates in the ovaries of laying fowls, has been found, says the O. A. C. experiment station. The only satisfactory control is application of the agglutination tests to the mature stock and elimination of all fowls that test.

This disease decreases the loss of chicks and certainly builds up a flock free of the infection.

Navy Airman Wins Death Gamble

STATE SENATOR STAPLES CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

VANCOUVER MURDER CASE

DEFENDANT TESTIFIES

(Associated Press League Wire)

VANCOUVER, Wash., Aug. 3.—Testifying that he did not know that the men he drove back from the still at the point of a rifle were officers, Ellis Baker took the stand today in the trial of himself, father and Lewis Baker on charges of murdering Sheriff Lester M. Wood on May 22. His testimony was practically unshaken by Assistant Prosecutor Hall's cross-examination.

Luther Baker testified as to his actions in the vicinity of the still and said that he had no connection with it. He had a herd of cattle in the vicinity, he stated. He also testified that although the moon-shine apparatus had been hauled into the Dole valley on his wagon, he was unaware of the nature of the load he was hauling. His testimony was in corroboration of testimony offered by Lewis Baker yesterday afternoon.

Visitor Today—

Mrs. M. Weber and son of South Deer Creek spent the day in this city visiting with friends and shopping.

Glendale Locals

A wedding which came as a surprise to Glendale friends was that of Miss Maxine Wilson and Alvin Henninger both of that place, who were married Monday at Grants Pass, sending word back to relatives after the ceremony.

Miss Wilson is a Glendale girl, having finished high school and last year attended O. A. C. as a freshman. Her husband is part owner in Henninger's grocery store with his brother. His parents are well-known residents of Oakland.

The young people plan to continue their trip to San Francisco and upon returning will make their home in Glendale.

Funeral services for S. S. Morey were held at Glendale Monday afternoon. Mr. Morey, who was 58 years old, had been ill for a couple of years suffering from paralysis. He leaves a widow and seven children.

Rev. J. K. Howard and wife, of Globe, Arizona, are spending the summer vacation at Glendale. Mr. Howard formerly held pastorates at Glendale, Oakland and Jacksonville. He now has a church at Globe.

Mr. A. Mosler, manager of the Eldon Hotel, Glendale, for some time, was taken to Boswell Mineral Springs resort near Yoncalla Sunday in the hopes that the mineral baths would benefit her condition. She has been suffering with rheumatism and neuritis and has been unable to walk for some months. Mr. McVey is well known in Oregon churches having served as minister at Bandon, Coquille, Rogue River and Roseburg at times.

The city council at Glendale met in regular monthly session Monday night Mayor Joe Brown presiding. Matters regarding the new piping top of the reservoir and general routine matters occupied their attention. The city has recently passed a law making the dog license $3 and $8 and City Marshal George Olinghouse is rigidly enforcing the law as a result the number of vagrant dogs has greatly decreased.

Keith Gaines, editor of the Glendale Log was a business visitor in Roseburg this week. Mr. Gaines started his paper a year ago when the Glendale News, owned by Mr. Griffin sang its swan song and suspended. Mr. Gaines publishes his paper at the News office in Gold Hill, deriving the major portion of his support from Glendale and Roseburg advertisers.

L. L. Hurd, postmaster for many years at Glendale left yesterday on a business trip to Salem, expecting to be gone till the latter part of the week.

Glendale is quite interested in baseball, and in developing several good teams. Last night the Yankigans played the Hinksydinks, the former winning by a score of 12 to 11, when darkness overtook them. Games are played three times a week. The city has a very good ball field at the end of Main street.

"DON'T BE SATISFIED WITH THE GAMES; DON'T LET YOUR BAT GO TO SLEEP on your shoulder," says "Muggsy" McGraw, who turns sage in the "jubilee year" of his long career on the diamond.

JOHN J. MCGRAW

MCGRAW AND CHRISTY MATHEWSON

PRIZES HIGHEST HIS WORLD SERIES VICTORIES

going after a tough one than holding a synthetic lead playing back—you're found out in the end."

His Biggest Thrill

These are some of the pearls of wisdom the 54-year-old veteran spilled on his 25th anniversary as manager of the New York Giants. In a quarter century he has won 10 league pennants, finished second nine times, and won three world championships—a record unparalleled. More than 20,000,000 fans the country over have seen him in daily action. His personal acquaintance list is more extensive than Babe Ruth's and Ty Cobb's combined.

"The biggest thrill I ever got out of it all? There were three of them—each time my boys stood around the flagpole and we raised a hard-won and well-earned world's championship pennant," McGraw reminisced.

"My second choice of professions? Well, I always hankered after law. Yes, I guess I'd like to be a lawyer."

The greatest of all ball players? Old Heinie Wagner, I think, had them all licked. Hans as a man and Hans as a player was a genius. Mathewson.

"The best pitcher?—Christy Mathewson, far and away."

Asked for a word for the thousands of sandlot kid players throughout the nation, McGraw's eyes twinkled. "Those are the lads I like. They can't go wrong choosing baseball for their profession if they are fitted. When I first came in there were leather-necked, tobacco-chewing characters in it whose mannersisms were objectionable but whose intentions were good. Now the game is on a higher level. I see more college fraternity pins on a ball diamond than there is on a campus."

Asked if he were going to retire, McGraw actually snorted. "Retire? Why should I?" and he glared at this reporter and for a moment there was a glimpse of the old flat-swinger, sarcastic, biting, sneering field general—the little Napoleon of baseball—the most thoroughly hated and at the same time best beloved man in the sport.
