THE EXACT replica of the Smallest Watch in the World—presented to Queen Marie—is now on display at our store for ONE WHOLE WEEK. So tiny is this timepiece that a thin dime covers it completely. Yet, it records the hours with the same precision that has made all BULOVA Watches famous. You really owe it to yourself to see this modern wonder of watch making skill.

CAPITOL BATH TUBS

POPULIST SURVIVAL

TOPEKA, Kans., Aug. 11.—(A. P.)—Bath tubs, installed in the office suites of the governor, the secretary of state and the state treasurer at the Kansas statehouse when the Populists were in power a third of a century ago, are still kept clean and polished by janitors. But they are never used, for since the Populists went out of power plumbing facilities have been extended to all the houses in Topeka.

Frank J. Ryan, present secretary of state, chided the Populist administration 20 years ago because use of the bath tubs was abandoned. He is now nearing his fifth year as secretary of state and has not yet bathed in the tub.

PLANE FALLS INTO BAY; 3 MEN HURT

OAKLAND, Calif., Aug. 11.—Captain James L. Griffin, pilot of the airplane entered from Long Beach, California, and his navigator, Ted Lundgren, and a passenger, H. A. Speer, fell into the bay adjacent to the Oakland airport here today while trying to land.

The tri-plane circled the field several times and then settled to land. The first attempt was unsuccessful. The ground was touched, the ground for some reason Griffin found he could not make the landing. He speeded up his motors, swerved to the left over the bay and crashed into the water.

STATES SEEKING COLUMBIA RIVER GRAVEL ROYALTY

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 11.—Whether the state land board shall fix a royalty charge on sand taken from the Columbia River by about seven sand and gravel companies is the question before the board after a hearing here today. The state of Washington is jointly interested and was represented at the hearing by Clark B. Savidge, land commissioner of the state, and N. H. Wright, assistant attorney general. Members of the board made repeated attempts to get from engineers and attorneys some suggestion of the royalty that should be charged, but without success. For some years the state has been charging royalty of 10 cents a cubic yard on sand and gravel taken from the Willamette, the money so collected going into the state irrevocable school fund.

Entering into the case is the question whether the state should collect a back royalty covering the years that the companies have operated in the Columbia without paying the state anything for the privilege. Fred G. Huebel, state engineer, presented a report calling attention to a recent hearing of Portland testimony was offered showing that sand has been taken from both the Oregon and Washington sides of the Columbia in about equal quantities, and declaring that on the basis of the gravel yardage reported, there would be due the two states in back royalty of 10 cents a yard a total of $162,875.60, or $81,437.80 to each state.

John F. Logan, attorney for the state, made an offer of $10,000 for the state to wipe the slate clean.

Future payments of royalty met with opposition. Contending against seven companies was the Ross Island Sand and Gravel company, represented by Jay Boyer, holding that under present conditions the companies operating in the Columbia are competing unfairly with the Ross Island company.

LEGAL MINDS IN CONFLICT OVER ELECTION LAWS

designation on the ballot. According to the opinion the congressional committee of each party would call the convention and fix the number of delegates to attend. It would decide how the delegates would be selected and the ratio of representation. It would be necessary for the congressional committee to endorse the candidate endorsed by the convention. The same purpose would be served, it is held, were the congressional committee to endorse a candidate and have the endorsement followed by an endorsement from a mass assembly of 100 or more voters.

The opinion holds that there can be no primary election for the reason that the law provides the time for primary elections, which is the third Friday in May, 1929, and biennially thereafter.

Leaders Favor Primary

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 11.—That a special primary will have to be called prior to a special election to choose a representative for congress from the third district to succeed the late Maurice E. Crumpacker, was the opinion expressed, as a private citizen and lawyer, here by John L. Rand, justice of the state supreme court.

One election would be incomplete without the other, said Justice Rand, who believed that the law governing elections should prevail in a special election to choose a congressman as well as in a regular election.

Ralph E. Williams, vice-chairman of the Republican state central committee, each expressed hope that a primary could be held.

Van Winkle Gives Law

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 11.—Certain parenthetical words in the title of the Oregon direct primary law, which appear to inhibit primary elections for the nomination of candidates to be voted on by a special election, are relied on by Attorney General Van Winkle as authority for his opinion that the governor cannot call a special primary election.

The opinion, sent to Governor Patterson Tuesday, quotes the title. After the clause "providing for holding primary nominating elections preceding any election in this state" the following words appear in parenthesis: "(except special elections to fill vacancies, presidential elections, municipal elections in towns or cities having a population of less than 2,000 inhabitants, and school elections.)"

Further it is cited that the supreme court has held that "as every act is required to have a title expressing the subject matter, the title is necessarily a part of the act and renders important aid in construing it in determining the legislative intent."

Dates Established
The attorney general also relies on section 3956, Oregon law, which reads: "On the third Friday in May, of the year 1929, and biennially thereafter, there shall be held in the several election precincts of the state of Oregon, a general primary nominating election at which shall be nominated or elected such United States, state, district, county, city, town and precinct officers as are to be elected or nominated at such general primary nominating election or general election of that year."

Act Holds Good

Another citation in the opinion in section 3920, Oregon law, which provides as follows: "Any political party and any assembly of electors as hereinafter defined and also individual electors to the number hereinafter specified, by caucuses, or by a convention, may be duly organized and called in the manner hereinafter provided, may nominate one candidate for each public office to be filled at the election, whose name shall be placed upon the ballot to be furnished as hereinafter provided."

This section then defines political parties. This law was enacted in 1901, prior to the adoption of the primary law, but since the primary law is held not to apply to special elections, it is held by Van Winkle that section 3920 still holds good with reference to special elections.
