After the Sinking of the Favorite

Life guards, aided by Johnny Weismuller (arrow), famous swimmer, are shown helping to recover bodies from the excursion boat Favorite which sank in Lake Michigan near Lincoln park, Chicago. Twenty-six bodies were brought out of the boat after the disaster, but Eugene E. McDonald, Jr. (inset), wealthy radio manufacturer and a member of the Byrd-MacMillan Arctic expedition, reported there seemed a score of bodies still in the craft before she was raised. MacDonald went down in a diving suit to explore the boat.

For the Coolidge Menagerie

The Coolidge's menagerie is soon to have another member—this time a western coyote. The animal is shown here in the arms of Mrs. Ray Sanders of Rapid City, S. D., who presented it to Mrs. Coolidge.
