BETTER OUTLOOK FOR BEEF CATTLE U. S. REPORT SAYS

Prospects for the cattle industry during the next year or 18 months appear decidedly favorable but do not justify expansion in breeding herds, according to the August Cattle Outlook report just released by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Market receipts of cattle and calves during the fall of 1927 are expected to be the smallest for any corresponding period in the past five years, the report continues. The number of cattle on farms and ranges has decreased about 10,000,000 head during that period, most of the reduction being in cattle kept primarily for beef production. Feed and pasture conditions in most of the range states are unusually good. This abundance of feed together with a relative scarcity of cattle in those areas and the general optimism which now pervades the industry are expected to result in holding back considerable numbers of breeding cattle and young stock, all of which will help to curtail market receipts.

Consumer demand for beef is expected to continue good for several months, with a slight tendency toward decrease probable. A larger prospective supply of other meats may cause some decrease in the demand for beef. Although the price of corn this fall will probably be higher than in the fall of 1926 the August 1 crop report indicated a corn crop 6 per cent larger than in 1926 in the Corn Belt states west of the Mississippi river and it seems probable that the demand for feeder cattle from that area will be as great as in the fall of 1926. Heavy feeder steers are expected to be in better demand than lightweights.

Prospects favor a continuation of the general upward trend in cattle prices which has been in evidence for the past three years. Although a seasonal decline probably will occur late in the fall, the prospects are that it will be less than usual. With prospective supplies of range cattle this fall smaller than in recent years and present prices of most classes and grades of cattle higher than at any time since early in 1921, prices of grass cattle this fall are expected to be higher than last year.

The cattle industry now appears to be at about the same point in the production cycle as it was in 1920 and 1921. During those years beef production was beginning to be profitable after several years of heavy marketings and low prices. As prices advanced breeding stock was held back and ranges were restocked with the result that the number of cattle in 1920 and 1921 western states, including Texas, increased from 14,500,000 in 1913 to 20,700,000 in 1920.

LINDBERGH BACKS THE MODEL PLANE SERIES

Colonel Charles Lindbergh, America's most famous flyer, gives his unqualified endorsement to the plan of The News-Review to instruct children in the art of making model airplanes.

"This is one of the finest movements furthering development of aviation," he said. "It is more than that. It teaches the principles of flying to the coming generation which will see an aviation age in transportation."

"In building successful model airplanes these children must master the same principles of the air, of weight and of speed as are involved in the larger airplanes. They will be better equipped to deal with the new era. Their time certainly will be well spent."

1917. This tremendous increase in numbers was followed by liquidation, a prolonged period of relatively low prices and generally unfavorable conditions in the industry. It was probable that the maintenance of numbers of cattle at a point just sufficient to provide market supplies of beef approximately equal to those of this year, and allowance for population increase would tend to eliminate many of the violent swings which have characterized cattle prices in the past and put the industry on a more stable and profitable basis.

SON ROSEBURG LADY INJURED BY ROCK

Mrs. B. E. Drollinger and Mrs. Mary Tester have just returned from Marshfield where they were called by an accident to Mrs. Drollinger's son, D. H. Carpenter, who is employed by the Houser Construction company at Houser, Oregon. Mr. Carpenter was loading rocks with a derrick, when one large rock, weighing several hundred pounds, which was hoisted in the air, broke loose and fell to the car on which he was standing. The impact caused Mr. Carpenter to fall to the ground, narrowly escaping death as the rock hit him. Both of his legs were struck, but fortunately were not broken. He was badly bruised, one ankle was severely strained and the ligaments in the other torn. He was taken to Marshfield, and it will be necessary for him to be in bed for some time. Mrs. Drollinger brought back her small grandson, Cecil Carpenter, who will remain with her until Mr. Carpenter has recovered.

COPCO'S UNIQUE WINDOW DISPLAY PROMOTES THRIFT

The old saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" is disproved by a most unique and original window display in the window of the Copco building on North Jackson street. It is safe to say that no local display has ever attracted any more widespread interest and comment than this exhibit which was originated by H. L. Brounley, advertising manager of the power company.

The main item of interest is a nature study in the form of a woodpecker's winter storehouse crammed full of acorns. The "storehouse," by the way, consists of two sections of electric light poles, which are often chosen by these thrifty birds as proper places in which to store their savings. As may be supposed this procedure does not make much of a hit with the Copco line-men who find point of this type difficult and dangerous to climb.

Upon the poles in life-like attitudes are seen two woodpeckers of the popular red-headed variety who seem to be busily engaged in carrying out their daily "thrift program." A large piece of bark also stuffed with acorns shows that the birds do not confine their efforts to Copco light poles but also pick on trees to house their "savings accounts." Placed here and there about the window are finds placards and Copco booklets calling attention to the desirability of Copco's Preferred stock as a suitable investment for those who would practice thrift.

It is interesting to note that with all of the natural evidence shown in the display, there are still some skeptical observers that maintain that the whole thing is a "frameup" and that the poles were manufactured and filled by hand. This is to be expected in the present day and age when "antique" furniture is said to be turned out by the carload faithfully reproduced even to the "wormholes" and various and sundry "liquors" of "rare, old vintage" are distilled, colored and aged practically overnight. However, those who have studied bird life or are familiar with the habits of the woodpecker family all agree that the exhibit is true to nature.

The display was sent here direct from the company's home office at Medford, where it has attracted a great deal of attention and comment, during the past few weeks. It is reported that the idea has already been copied and a somewhat similar exhibit is now being shown in Portland.

FRIGIDAIRE

What is a Frigidaire? We are asked this question every day. A Frigidaire is a refrigerator that requires no ice. Simply turn the electric switch and you have an ice box colder than ice—no muss, no drip, no attention. It also freezes or makes ice and can be used for making ice cream, sherbets, ices, cold salads—keeps fruits, milk, butter, vegetables, meats, etc. cold. Frigidaire is actually automatic in operation. Nothing to start, nothing to stop, nothing to regulate.
