ROSEBURG, OREGON, THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1927.

HE TURNED DOWN $2,000,000.

The mainspring of our modern civilization largely is made of gold; yet there are men whom gold cannot move. Henry Steenbock is professor of agricultural chemistry at the University of Wisconsin. He recently invented a method of adding to the calcium-producing qualities of food—something long awaited by medical science. A cereal company offered him $2,000,000 for the invention; he refused the offer.

Instead, he has transferred his rights to the University of Wisconsin, and plans are now being formulated for making the fruits of his discovery available as widely as possible for the benefit of all mankind.

"I had my moment of temptation," he admits. "With that money I could build my own laboratory and be free from all financial worry.

Men's ambitions are either to make money or to do something for humanity. Mine are not concerned with money. I want to be the best food chemist in the world, and I have only begun. If I took that money my life purpose would be perverted."

And with that, Professor Steenbock rests his case. Few men place that high a value on their ideals. Most of us, taken up onto a high mountain and shown the kingdoms and powers of the earth, would be willing to bow the knee and take possession.

But the modest Wisconsin professor was made of other stuff. What if he might have graduated from the pinched gentility of the campus to the luxurious ease of great wealth? He has gained a greater satisfaction, doubt it not, in waving luxury and purposelessness aside.

For the rest—he has reminded us that the mainspring of our nation is not, after all, fabricated entirely of gold.

KEEPING UP WITH THE NEIGHBORS.

Once upon a time there were two neighboring families who went under the well known names of Smith and Jones. They had been young folks together, and were distantly related. They had had a few family feuds, but they got along well together on the whole, and had prospered.

When automobiles came in, each family had its automobile. When it became stylish to have two automobiles, the Smiths were not far behind the Joneses. When it became stylish to have three automobiles the Joneses were not far behind the Smiths. One day the Smiths took a notion into their heads that they should have more automobiles than the Joneses. They bought a car for each of the children, and one for each of their servants.

The Joneses said that this was the height of extravagance and foolishness, but what could they do? The two families had been equally leaders in the community for years, and the Joneses could not afford to fall behind. So they, too, ordered cars for all their servants.

This pretty little allegory of everyday life has its parallel in international nonsense. Call the Smiths England and call the Joneses America, use the word cruiser in place of the word automobile, and you have the whole story of the disarmament conference impasse and deadlock.

Reduced to simplest terms, it becomes an absurdity.

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 23.—Armed yesterday visited Highland Court Apartments, located at 711 1/2 Commercial street, seized 2,000 quarts of home brewed beer and arrested Lora Gaines, Mrs. Helen Kempstead and two men. COOPERATIVE PREDATORIAL CONTROL INAUGURATED IN ALASKA

Predatorial animal control work has recently been inaugurated in Alaska, under a cooperative agreement between Governor Parks and the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. R. K. Stewart, of the Biological Survey, formerly assistant leader of predatorial animal control in California, has been detailed to Alaska as leader to study predatorial animal conditions there and to develop and demonstrate suitable methods for controlling these animals, particularly wolves and coyotes, which prey upon wild game and livestock to a serious degree. In cooperation with the Alaska Game Commission, trappers and other persons will be instructed in the control methods de-

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

We saw a headline today which shouted—"BOY DIES WITHOUT AID OF PHYSICIAN!" Well, well, well.

HAPPY?

The world is full of springtime, and the cows are full of grass. The roads are full of flivvers, and the tanks are full of gas. The flivvers are full of youngsters, and the youngsters full of pep. And all in all it's good advice. To sort of watch your step.

OMIGOSH!

The wife of a neighboring farmer was taken down with cholera morbus this summer, and as she felt the chill hand of death sneaking around her waist she called her husband to her bedside.

"Husband," she said with a tear in her eye, "I fear that I must answer the last summons in a few hours; and I cannot go before my Maker until I make a confession to you. This is the hardest thing I ever have had to do, but I must take this terrible weight off my conscience." The husband drew nearer as she continued:

"I haven't been so good a wife to you as I should. I have been sorely tempted during my life, and I am ashamed to say that I was not always able to resist the voice of the tempter. But every time I fell from grace I put a bean in that two-gallon crock in the pantry. When I am dead and gone I want you to count them beans—they are all there—just so you will know the extent of my sinning. Yes, they are all there—all except two or three batches I cooked up last fall for the threshers."

Jack Lockwill at Summer Camp

BY GILBERT PATTEN (Creator of Frank Merriwell)

"That's dirty stuff!" cried a shrill voice. To the bully's surprise, Peewee Lannan rushed up and stood looking at him with contempt and hatred in his faded blue eyes. "A fellow that'll sock his best friend is a rotter!" said Peewee. "Oh, is that so, you little snipe?" snarled Saunders, seizing Lannan and wringing his arms. "Take it back or I'll twist your wing off!"

"Oh—oh, don't!" squawked Peewee, writhing in distress. "You're breaking my arm!" "I'll turn it out of the socket, you miserable runt!" threatened the ruffian.

Lannan's cries brought many other boys hurrying to the spot. But, though they muttered angrily among themselves, fear of the bully kept them from interfering.

Lockwill, having dressed after a rub-down, heard Peewee's yelps of pain as he came out of the gymnasium tent. The sounds took him to the scene in haste. Usually cool-headed and self-controlled, Jack's wrath mastered him when he saw what Saunders was doing. For a second time, he hit Buks and knocked him cold. Then he carried him to the floor and threw him overboard.

1168 MILE TEST PROVES ECONOMY OF DODGE SIX

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

Eleven hundred sixty-eight miles on 57 gallons of gasoline, or 21.5 miles to the gallon, to San Diego in a new Dodge Brothers Senior Six sedan is the record of Mr. S. M. Cook of Myrtle Creek. At every check the speedometer tallied exactly with the published road distances. The distance was traveled over good and bad roads without changing out of high gear.

Only once on the whole trip, did Mr. Cook change from high into second and that was out of Coacoma City on the return up the coast to Roseburg through Grants Pass. As a final check on the mileage he was making on gasoline, Mr. Cook kept careful account of the amount used from Grants Pass to Roseburg. Very slightly more than 3 gallons was consumed.

"At all speeds the Dodge Senior is the smoothest car I ever rode in," says Mr. Cook. "Vibration is entirely eliminated. It pulls down to the last mile running as smoothly as at any other speed. It accelerates to the desired speed without laboring. With a few exceptions my driving range with the new car was from 20 to 40 miles an hour."

"When I came out of Paso Robles on the 8 1/2 mile grade the car with little effort passed six other well known six-cylinder automobiles pushing up the highway. Water never heated to the summer average driving range as indicated on the Dodge motorometer, the thermometer holding the engine at the most efficient temperature."

"Interest of the public in the Dodge Senior Six is no great thing. It is a commonplace. Every time I stopped or left the car crowds would gather around it and lift the hood to view the motor. At first I didn't mind but finally the persistence of the people became a nuisance."

"Several times I had a great lot of fun comparing my car with other makes and 'holding' the owners about the superior quality. Every decision was that there is more value in the Dodge Senior than in other different makes costing considerably more money."

"I am going to take another trip of 2180 miles to Kansas City starting Friday via the McKenzie Pass, Twin Falls, Ida., Salt Lake, Utah, Denver, Colo. I have made this trip several times each time via a different way, taking the roads as they come."

RICHARD HEDRICK TO SPEAK ON 'RADIO' AT TEMPLE TONIGHT

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

"Radio" will be "The Little Ministers" subject tonight. The little hand handles his subject in a truly remarkable way. Radio fans will especially enjoy this sermon although it will be truly interesting to all. This talk will not be broadcasted on it is merely an illustrated subject.

Tonight Richard will play on his famous violin. This violin was made in Klingenthal, in 1719, by Johann Christian Schlotter, and is one of the only three-quarter size violins made by a master. It had been used for half a century in a monastery in Italy, and was brought to this country by his grandfather.

Friday night will be the last night of Richard's campaign. This afternoon at 2 o'clock Richard's mother, Hazel Hedrick, will tell the story of his life.

ROGUE RIVER FISHING SURVEY TO BE MADE

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 23.—An intensive survey of Rogue river fishing conditions, urged by the Rogue River Fish and Game Protection Association, will be considered jointly by the state fish commission and the game commission at the next meeting, September 12, it is announced by Harold Clifford, state game warden. A man to make observations and study over several years may be appointed at that time.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

Action Needed
Prune growers will hold another meeting next week, August 31, at Dallas, to decide what to do with their prunes.

One has to concede that talk is helpful, but what is more needed, than talk is action to accomplish co-operation and standards for higher prices.

The subject has been discussed in Oregon for more than a quarter of a century, and the goal seems as far off as ever.

Persons who are skillful growers and shrewd sellers probably will prefer to go alone or to form a club of their own, leaving the rank and file to shift for themselves.

There are so many growers of prunes here and elsewhere, that it is difficult to bind them together in a compact selling organization, and to keep them from underselling for temporary gains.

As to the growers, there need of pulling together, there should be no debate among growers.—Portland Telegram.

MARKETS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 23.—The prices of fresh produce on the local market have reached the lowest point and this morning showed definite changes to higher levels as the peak of the shipping season is passed and the end is not far off, according to local wholesale dealers.

California Elbertas are about done and were quoted around $1 and higher this morning. The very small northwest peach crop is seen as a strong influence for a rising market.

Trading in other lines of fresh fruits and vegetables was at generally steady prices today with demand a little slow.

Country dressed meats and poultry were quoted at steady prices this morning. Light hams were weak at 13 cents, the very top for prime birds not too heavy.

All grades of whole eggs are higher today on the daily exchange.

Extras are up a cent to 33 cents, firsts up 2 cents to 31 cents and mediums up a cent to 27 cents. Current receipts advanced sharply 3 cents to 27 cents. Advances come as result of very small receipts from the country.

Butter prices for wholesale grades are unchanged and shortages in receipts effected withdrawals of 4181 pounds from storage yesterday.
