ROSEBURG, OREGON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1927.

COURAGE AND FOOLISHNESS.

Nungesser and Coli were the first. They rode on the wings of the White Bird into a fathomless night. Since their brave challenge a dozen men and two women have gone to join the gay little band of daring spirits in Davy Jones' locker.

St. Roman and Moumeyres, flying from France to Buenos Aires; Paul Redfern, winging his way alone from Georgia to Brazil; Pedler, Frost, Knopp, Scott, Erwin and Eichwald, all in the Dole race from Frisco to Hawaii; Bertaud, Hill and their passenger, Philip Payne, an editor—all these gallant adventurers of the air vanished into the Valhalla of courageous crusaders of the seas!

The voice of criticism has begun to call these long distance ocean flights foolish. A waste of human life. Lindbergh was brave and his deed held aviation vastly, but these ill-timed, mismanaged efforts are hurting aviation more than helping it.

It is the old voice that called Columbus crazy in the streets of Genoa. The scene has changed, but the voice is the same.

The Dole air race was not well prepared, and such a contest was useless, the voice declares. We cannot deny that.

But what we want to point out here is that the voice of criticism seems to have forgotten the main issue. That is the conquest of the air, an attempt to widen the boundaries of what man has found possible in aviation, the charting of the unknown.

All these people are heroes and they are not foolish. They are brave past common understanding. As for wasting human life, by the spirit of Nero, there are worse ways to waste human life than this!

Great causes claim life. Men die to open doors that others may crowd across the threshold. As long as the course leads onward brave spirits will lead the way, and there will be always those who watch and criticize.

That's a brave band of men and women gathered there at Davy Jones' locker. Don't be silly enough to call them foolish!

Blaming modern jazz on the jellyfish tendencies of men may be O. K., but some of the credit for the holds you see on a modern dance must go to the monkey.

We are interested in the fellow who chewed 112 sticks of gum only enough to wonder if he did it in an ice cream parlor and where he stuck it afterward.

New York has been having a milk graft investigation. It seems some of the politicians were getting the cream.

Speaking of juries, some of them could be hung and you'd never miss 'em.

HEALTH BULLETIN

Live Food

Without vitamins a food is dead. Vitamins are essential to life. An adequate diet necessitates definite quantities of all of them. Man cannot make the vitamins. They are a large number of vitamins, but only five or six are recognized at the present time.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS

The only question now is—Who'll be noticed in the newspaper Photographs the more? Mayor Gawge Baker or Col. Lindbergh.

SCHOOL DAYS

Well, the boys are off to college again. It's getting harder and harder to get a horse shoeed these days what with the great demand for tailbacks.

JACK LOCKWILL, THE LION TAMER

BY GILBERT PATTEN (Creator of Frank Merriwell)

Now ordinarily Jack would have turned the lion over to Saunders without a word, and have felt relieved to get the man, added to the fact that Saunders was advancing threateningly, aroused the spirited boy.

"You wouldn't dare strike me with that whip!" said Saunders. "Wouldn't I?" returned Jack, smiling grimly.

Our Constitution

A Masterpiece in Human Government but Little Known by the People.

BY HARRY ATWOOD President, Constitution Anniversary Association.

When the convention met at Philadelphia in the late spring of 1787, there was assembled a group of notably superior men from the standpoint of mental acumen, political understanding and moral courage.

Among the delegates were lawyers, physicians, merchants, financiers, educators, farmers, soldiers and statesmen.

More than half of them had rendered distinguished military service during the Revolutionary war, and a number had served an apprenticeship in constitutional-making in their various states.

Hamilton Close Adviser Alexander Hamilton was Washington's closest adviser. At that time, only 35 years of age, he was an outstanding political genius.

James Madison of Virginia was later president of the United States for two terms. He kept a record of the proceedings which have come to be known as the "Federalist Papers."

Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut was afterwards United States senator and author of the first judicial act and later chief justice of the United States supreme court by appointment at Washington.

Abraham Baldwin of Georgia was afterwards United States senator and founder and first president of the University of Georgia.

Morris' Prophecy Governor Morris of Pennsylvania is said to have given the following prophecy during the convention to have given utterance to the prophecy:

"The whole human race will be affected by the proceedings of this convention."

These are only a few of the many remarkable men who served in the convention. It is a striking fact that many of the fifty-five delegates became either presidents of the United States, foreign ministers, justices of the supreme court, college presidents, United States senators, members of the cabinet, or governors of states.

Many people seem to have the impression that John Hancock, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry were delegates to the Constitution convention.

Adams was in England, and Jefferson was in France while the convention was in session. Henry was appointed a delegate but refused to serve, and Hancock was not appointed as a delegate to the convention by his state.

GEO. GODFREY AND MUNN TO MEET IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—In a battle which has been regarded by some as likely to determine a logical heavyweight contender, George Godfrey of Philadelphia and Harry Munn of Lincoln, Nebraska, over the 17 round bout at Ebbets Field tonight.
