ROSEBURG, OREGON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1927.

IMPORTANT MEETING TUESDAY EVENING

The public gathering to be held at the Antlers theatre next Tuesday evening is one which commands the attention of every business man in Roseburg, as well as others. It will be the initial meeting to bring about plans for the completion of the North Umpqua highway to Crater and Diamond lakes, one of the real important projects to be advanced and brought to a realization as soon as it can possibly be done. Never before has such concerted action been brought about to accomplish results and with the enthusiasm prevalent throughout the county for this much-needed highway there is no question regarding the successful outcome if our people will get solidly behind the enterprise. This they are doing without question and the News-Review believes we are advancing to a definite program that is sure to bring results. What this roadway means to Roseburg and Douglas county cannot be measured in wealth. It will be a veritable bonanza, opening one of the most scenic routes in the state and a mecca for the tourists and thousands of other people who will take advantage of the new highway to reach these national resorts, both of which are becoming more popular each year.

Surely the time is ripe for this city and county to do something real constructive for their own benefit and it is mighty pleasing to note the widespread interest being taken in the present plans to complete the North Umpqua highway. With concerted action there will be no defeat. Nothing but success is in store for our efforts if we only plan and work as a unit for this big achievement. With only a few miles yet remaining uncompleted to accomplish our ends it would appear that we have lost sight of a wonderful opportunity for advancement by not taking up this project before this late date. However, what has already been done in the way of road building and grading is the opening wedge for further development, and the faith of our people in the work already accomplished is not going to be dissipated by those whose power can aid materially in this development.

There is no such thing as defeat—we are going to carry on until we have realized our efforts.

SIMPLICITY

Much fun has been poked at John D. Rockefeller's gift dimes by the wits of the day. People who have gone to visit the governor of New York have found him sitting on his desk, swinging his legs like a school boy. David Belasco, dean of the drama in America, perches on a stool at a corner drug store and sucks soda through a straw. These are the marks of simplicity that these men, whose lives have been cast into great molds, retain. These are the marks of greatness that endure us to heroes. Rockefeller doesn't give away a dime because he is stingy and that's all that he wants to give. Those who know the great oil leader say that this is simply one of his ways of expressing human affection, and affections is not measured by dimes or dollars. It brings out what is left of the child in him, the gift of a shiny dime, not money, but a little brilliant something. Al Smith, still possessing the rare faculty of being himself whether he's in the governor's chair or sitting with old friends in "the neighborhood" in New York City. It is a lack of pose that has made Smith the idol of the most thickly populated corner in the world. Belasco, pitting hates and loves against one another through the long hours, still enjoying a bit of boyhood from the top of a strawberry soda. Childlike simplicity remaining where great emotions have had their battleground. Like a toy soldier dug up in Belleau Wood. It is splendid when really human qualities triumph over the position and wealth that are merely one of the world's weak symbols.

Down near Medford the other day a couple of enforcement officers fired several shots at a mountain rancher, whom it was alleged was engaged in manufacturing moonshine. The results of the escapade was the death of the rancher, though the officers maintain their aim was not directed at the fleeing man, but on the contrary had shot in the air, "just to scare him." This is a mighty lame excuse for murder. Then, an officer whose ability is no exact in hitting the mark when shooting heavenward is a dangerous person to deal with the public. He might go off half-cocked most any old time—resulting in the death of innocent persons.

Shooting at deer from the highway and using a spotlight to trap these animals is very poor sportsmanship. How a fellow gets any thrill out of such violations of the law is beyond comprehension. But there's a lot of poor sports who never get anywhere or anything only by underhanded methods.

That St. Louis tornado—coming without warning and wiping out some eighty-five lives—make a fellow love this old state more than ever. Outside of an occasional political upset Oregon never suffers from the elements.

We read from a local news item that the county jail is undergoing a fall renovating. With a new sheriff at the helm the outlook for better patronage is probably anticipated.

Dempsey still thinks he can whip Tunney. It takes a lot of punishment to convince some men—particularly prizefighters that enough's enough.

THOMPSON WILL OPPOSE LOWDEN FOR PRESIDENCY

Claims Lowden Would Not Help Waterways or Flood Control in Mid-West.

(Associated Press Local Wire)
CHICAGO, Oct. 1. — William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago, will permit the use of his name on the Illinois presidential preference ballot next spring if in so doing he can prevent former Governor Frank O. Lowden from obtaining control of the state Republican delegation, he told newspapermen yesterday.

He said: "If it appears there is any danger of Lowden's name being the only one on the ballot and of the delegation going to him by default, I'll consent to use of my name to prevent it."

Mayor Thompson and the former governor are political foes of several years standing. The mayor, in his talk with newspapermen, gave two reasons for his hostility. He spoke of Lowden's former connection with the Pullman company of which he was once general counsel, and the manner in which Lowden campaign funds were used in pre-convention presidential campaign of 1920.

"I don't think Lowden in Washington would help waterways or flood control," the mayor said. "I don't consider Lowden a good man to represent Illinois in the presidential race."

Mr. Lowden himself, although prominently mentioned for Republican nomination for president, has steadfastly refused to commit himself as to his intentions. His only answer to repeated questions by numerous delegations that have visited him and urged his candidacy has been that he "never knew any man to run away from the presidency."

Joseph Clune, mining man of Canyonville, accompanied by C. R. Hummel, recently from Oakland, California, were in this city today. Mr. Hummel, who is an experienced mining man, has just purchased the Evans claims, lying on Coffee creek, and will start prospecting them at once. Nothing more than assessment work has been done on the claims for some time, but they are said to contain considerable gold and cinnabar. Mr. Hummel will tunnel under the claims, and if the prospect justifies, will erect a mill on the property to care for the ore.

Cinnabar is causing a flurry of interest in various parts of the county, seven claims lying near Tiller having recently been sold for a high price. These will be developed on a large scale. Old cinnabar workings near Sutherland have also been inspected by outside people lately. The ore is said to test high in mercury, which is bringing a good price at the present time.

BOARD CONTROL TO BUY SUPPLIES
(Associated Press Local Wire)
SALEM, Ore., Oct. 1. — State departments today received letters from the state board of control notifying them that the board is now ready to become the central purchasing agency for all state supplies, under an act of the 1927 legislature. The first bids are to be opened next December 8 and every six months thereafter, and prior to each date for receiving bids the departments are to submit lists of their requirements for the ensuing six months.

Whenever any department has emergency requirements between the semi-annual dates for opening bids it is required to send a requisition to the board. This requisition will be attached to the voucher for payment that later goes to the secretary of state for approval. Recently the board made L. P. Campbell of the state highway department an assistant purchasing agent to supervise the purchasing for that department. This was held necessary because of the volume of purchasing done by the department.

PATTERSON CALLS REGENTS
(Associated Press Local Wire)
SALEM, Ore., Oct. 1. — Governor Patterson today issued a call for a joint meeting of the board of regents of the University of Oregon and Oregon Agricultural College to be held at Eugene next Friday. It is planned to have such a meeting twice a year with the object of bringing about a coordination of the two institutions.

RACING EVENTS AT STATE FAIR

(Associated Press Local Wire)
SALEM, Ore., Oct. 1. — Reineetta Logan made a bad start by finishing the first heat of the 2:12 pace in the state fair races yesterday, but won the next two and first money. The best time in the event was 2:11.

Golden Lady, Boudaline and Dick Dudley each took a first in the 2:20 trot, but Dudley had two seconds to his credit, the first and third heats, and took first honors. He took the second mile in 2:20. In the first running race Jockey Collins was thrown, while riding Pay Me, and in the next event Jockey O'Hara was thrown from Amazon Maid. Neither Jockey was seriously hurt. The horse stumbled and fell hard.

BAREFOOT BURGLAR WORKS IN PORTLAND

(Associated Press Local Wire)
PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 1. — Police are seeking a "barefoot burglar" whose operations, unless he is apprehended soon, give promise to equal those of "Inch and a Quarter Jimmy" of local notoriety. Since last Saturday this prowler, who works in the early morning hours, has entered four homes in Portland. Following operations in the Rose City district, where two burglaries were charged to him, he shifted scene to southeast Portland this morning, entering four homes there. In several instances the burglar was reported to have worked in stockings feet or barefooted. Barefootedness was discovered in one room where he had ransacked the entire lower floor. Little, it appears, was stolen in some of the places entered.

COURAGE OF CONVICTIONS!

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 2. The Courage of Conviction. 1 Kings 18:30-39.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of the Congregationalist.

Elijah stands as a striking and picturesque figure in Israel in a time of great spiritual unrest and danger. Backgrounds of the picture are often somewhat obscured and lacking in detail. It is a period of the history of Israel of which we lack exact historical knowledge and concerning which there had apparently gathered many traditions; but in its great essential verities, in the power of its contrast between good and evil, and in its supreme emphasis upon righteousness in character and conviction, the story is both ample and clear.

Israel was facing the problem of conviction with surrounding peoples whose religious life was idolatrous and corrupt. Without going into details it may be remembered that much of the religion of the peoples with whom Israel came into contact was associated with immoral rites and practices. Whether this came through the corruption of an earlier and simply sincere religious feeling or whether it was simply a perversion of the religious instinct makes little difference in the actual effect.

To Sustain Morality.

Much of the religious strictness and ritualism in Judaism had been developed with the manifest purpose of establishing and perpetuating sound morality. The "worship of the Lord" meant for Israel sheer moral law, a letting down of their standards. It was for this reason that leaders like Moses, Joshua and Samuel, and now Elijah, with belief in a personal God, set themselves sternly against idolatry and sought with such intensity to keep the religion of Israel free from contaminating influences of surrounding peoples.

In the time of Elijah the struggle to maintain the integrity of the religion of Israel had been seriously aggravated by the influence of a powerful power, Jezebel, who seemed to be the ruling power behind her husband, King Ahab. Jezebel was a woman of great intensity as well as of ability. Deeply devoted to the worship of Baal, she had determined with all a woman's persistency, to establish the worship of Baal in Israel.

Here was Elijah's opportunity. Upon him devolved the full bur-

Text: 1 Kings 18:30-39

And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down.

And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the Lord came, saying, Israel shall be thy name:

And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood.

And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time.

And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God.

den of leadership in Israel. It was a dangerous as well as a responsible task. And in the winning of his cause Elijah so spent all his strength and moral energy that he was left exhausted and discouraged, seeking a refuge in the wilderness and longing to die.

Had to Be Reminded.

Elijah had confidence in the power of God, but he lacked the power to estimate rightly the godly forces that operate in human life. It was necessary for the Lord to remind him, when he complained that he only was left of the faithful in Israel, that there were 7000 who had not bowed to knee to Baal.

Elijah's mistake has been a very common one even on the part of very conspicuous religious leaders. Such men, engrossed in theology and in their own ecclesiastical plans and purposes, have had a strange fashion of under-estimating the real good in humanity.

A Master of Balliol once said that the greatest church in these days is the church outside of the churches. While that is an exaggeration there is a fair amount of truth in it. It is always well to appreciate not only the power of God but the power that God has placed in men.

His Challenge.

Outstandingly, however, in this lesson is the great challenge of Elijah for men to declare themselves. He wants no false compromise, no amiable and good-natured indifference, no willingness to be complacent to the powers that have the upper hand at the moment. The moral challenge of life is clear and decisive: "If the Lord of God, follow him; if Baal, then follow him."

Can any one doubt that such moral and spiritual crises are present in every age and come in the life of every man? It is this fact that gives the ancient story of Elijah its significance for life today. It is of little use to read the story of his courage and decisiveness unless our own moral fiber is strengthened and a new spirit of determination is brought into our lives.

To be what one ought to be and to do what one ought to do with decisiveness is the secret of great living and of noble accomplishment. Moreover, it is the secret that every man, no matter how small his abilities and how great his fear, may discover for the enriching of his life.

THE TINYMITES STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The elephant ride was soon begun and they all found it heaps of fun. They rode around an hour or so and then wee Cappy said, "I'm rather tired of riding 'round. I wish some new sport could be found. We sat and sat on moving things until I'm almost dead."

"Oh, do be still," somebody cried. "This is, by far our finest ride. I feel just like a ruling king atop his monstrous beast. He's trimmed in trimmings very fine, and this is just the sport for mine. It seems that you might let the rest of us have fun, at least."

So Cappy said, "Oh, I'll agree to stay and see what we can see."

And mister elephant trod along till it was late at night. And then it heaved a tiresome sigh and stopped beneath the moonlit sky.

The Tynmites slid down to the ground and there they found their kite.

"Let's ride off now to Africa. That isn't far from here." They all thought that the thing to do, so through the air they quickly flew, and Cappy said, "When we arrive, we'll find queer things, I fear."

They rode all night, and fell asleep and not a soul was heard to peep. When morning came they drifted down and landed near some trees. A weird cry greeted them from far. "In Africa we surely are," yelled frightened little Cappy, as he dropped down to his knees.

And then out of the woods there came some men with long sticks all aflame. "They're cannibals," wee Cappy cried. "I know that's what we'll find." But little time

COOKING CLASSES CLOSE AFTER A SUCCESSFUL WEEK

The series of free cooking classes conducted by Miss Irene Kerr of Seattle, well known home economics demonstrator, and put on five days this week through the courtesy of the California Oregon Power company came to a successful close Friday afternoon at the Sykes building. The classes each day have been well attended by Roseburg housewives who have found much beneficial help in Miss Kerr's demonstration of electric cookery and new methods. The drawing for the cutting iron took place at the close of Friday's class lesson, the winner being Mrs. Grant Wilcox. Balloons were the tribute tree to the children by the Copco at the close of the afternoon.
