CLEAN CHARACTER NEED OF LEADER

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
BOSTON, Oct. 12.—The next presidential election will be a call for established character and political honor rather than a contest for super-wisdom in statesmanship, former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois told the Boston city club of which he was guest of honor today.

The former senator said it appeared that the nominations for president would come as a reward for personal life or private integrity.

"If President Coolidge or Governor Smith of New York, shall, over all partisan opposition, be summoned to renewed leadership, it will not be by reason of political partisan superiority, but because each has shown clean, personal life and a pure political probity," Mr. Lewis said.

"And true it is, that if from the west Vice President Dawes of Illinois should be called that command will come not from convention intrigue, but from the hearts of his countrymen who know his generous gifts to the needy and applaud his life of unstained political statesmanship."

FLASHES OF LIFE

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
NEW YORK.—From Miss Marjorie Gehrke, smiling society beauty, who in a recent magazine article praised European men in contrast to Americans, come a few crumbs for the homebreds, to-wit: They are handsomer and healthier than foreigners, and besides are said upon arriving from Europe, everything published was not just as she had written it.

NEW YORK.—A six footer of aristocratic mien at the Waldorf, also distinguished by a spike-tailed coat with gold braid, has identified himself as William Schurch de Witte, a count, son of a prince and grandson of the late Count Sergis de Witte, a famous premier under the czars. He is now a floor waiter, having worked up in six months from kitchen boy. Proud of his job, he says: "I have more self respect than when I was playing bridge or attending tea parties in New York society." He kept his incognito until recognized by a woman guest of the hotel whom he had met socially, he says.

PORTLAND, Maine.—In order to reduce and enjoy yourselves at the same time, girls, play golf. The advice comes from Miss Helen Payson, who has just won the championship of Canada. In a few months after taking up the game she lost 20 pounds and had a good time doing it.

BEAR SUPPORTERS WILL HOLD RALLY

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 12.—Plans have been completed for a monster rally to be held at the Berkeley stadium this afternoon, when the varsity football team of the University of California will leave for Portland to meet the University of Oregon Saturday.

With the exception of Harold Kaufman, guard, who was injured in the game with St. Mary's Saturday, the Bears are in excellent physical shape, and a light workout before train time will represent the sum total of today's practice. Kaufman's place at guard will probably be filled by Louis Pitto.

MAN WITH BROKEN NECK IS WORKING

REDDING, Calif., Oct. 12.—Henry Daumbach, 73, hydraulic expert in the employ of the Estabrook Gold Dredging company at Trinity Center, 50 miles north of here, returns to work today, with a broken neck encased in a steel collar, but otherwise in as good physical condition as he was three months ago before he fell and snapped three vertebrae in his neck.

MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS

From birth to the end of the period during which children are compelled to attend school, they are especially susceptible to many of the acute communicable diseases. The majority of the diseases are communicable from the onset of observable symptoms, some of them before that in a discernible manifestation of anything abnormal. It is obviously impossible to eliminate by school inspection, or by any other way, the transmission of infection through those who present no evidence of being ill. Much more, however, might be accomplished in preventing the transmission of diseases in schools if all children presenting evidence of health disturbances were examined, and kept at home until they had fully recovered. Any change from the normal appearance of the child should harbor suspicion. Fatigue, pallor, dizziness, fever, running nose, inflammation or redness of eyes, inflamed and swollen tonsils, pain in the ears, enlarged glands, a beginning cough, or any other unusual deviation from the normal, should prevent the child from attending school.

Many times children are sent to school when their parents know that they ought to be kept at home. It is the duty of parents to keep children at home and notify the school when signs of illness are evident. Children who come to school with any of these signs should, as soon as they are discovered, be sent home. They should not be allowed to return to school until the health officer has assured himself that they have so far recovered that they will not be the source from which diseases may be transmitted. Early isolation of those suffering from communicable diseases is one of the most potent factors in limiting and preventing the spread of disease. Early isolation depends on prompt diagnosis, which requires the co-operation of parents, teachers, physicians and health officials. Many times the symptoms are trivial and on that account the child is allowed to go to school. Such children may sometimes escape the vigilance of medical inspection. The safest method to pursue is to exclude all children from school who present any signs of illness. They should be isolated until such a time as it may be safe to allow them to return to school.

All school children should have a thorough physical examination when they enter school and they should be re-examined as often as necessary to insure health and protection in the schools. Closing the school without closing of other gathering places is no longer desirable in outbreaks of contagious diseases. Schools should not be closed in epidemics because keeping careful record of the school attendance frequently brings to light hidden cases of the disease, and because the children are usually much safer at school under definite supervision and control than playing about the streets with children who may even have the disease.

Children with communicable disease should be excluded during the illness and as long as the disease can be transmitted to others. Epidemics arise from concealed cases, and control of a situation, perhaps serious, is sometimes lost through this concealment. Absolute control of communicable diseases demands one hundred per cent co-operation and the reporting of every case.

FACTS

—AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

TO GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

OUT OF such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion.

Nothing counts but hard-won facts, gathered and used with an open mind.
