PAYMENTS MADE TO FALL AIRED BEFORE JURORS

Dome Fall's reply, as given by Littleton, was that geologists were investigating drainage in the reserve and he would make no determination until that inquiry was completed. Littleton did not disclose by what witness all these matters would be presented and there was speculation as to whether Fall or Stinchler or both would take the stand. However, defense counsel said that had not yet been determined. George W. Holland, attorney in the geological survey, took the stand as the first witness after Littleton concluded and identified for the government the executive order or President Wilson creating naval oil reserves number 3 on April 30, 1915, and produced all documents of the interior department referring to the case. Stephen G. Quigley, clerk at the state department; Dr. George Otis Smith, chief of the geological survey; Lee E. Martin of the comptroller general's office then produced documentary evidence in connection with the case, including the Teapot Dome lease which Fall insisted on examining. E. C. Finney, first assistant secretary of interior, the next witness, testified that Fall had asked him to recommend some one to look after the naval oil reserves and he suggested Dr. Mendenhall, of the geological survey, who was named. Later Fall told the witness he was sorry he had designated Mendenhall, but gave no reason. Finney identified a chart dividing the work in the department between Fall and his assistants and which oil lands were placed under Finney. "Who did pass on naval oil leases for the department up to the time the chart was made?" asked Roberts. William Leahy, for Fall, objected, but was overruled. "With the exception of all leases except this one and naval oil number two in California (Elk Hills) I passed on the leases," Finney replied. "Did this lease ever come to you?" "No."

YOUNG GIRL IS FOUND INJURED; MEN ARE HELD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) HOOD RIVER, Ore., Oct. 19.—A romantic escape in which Inez Frederick, 14 year old junior high school girl of Hood River, embarked Monday ended in grief this morning when she was found beside the Union Pacific tracks at Cascade Locks, west of here, bruised as a result of a jump from a freight train. Alice Walters, 16, another junior high school girl of Hood River, also disappeared Monday but officers had no definite information that she had accompanied Inez, though they suspected that the two had left together. No trace of her had been found today. When she left home Alice took with her all pictures of herself. Early Monday neighbors saw Inez throw a suitcase from her window of her home. Later she was seen entering an automobile in which two men were riding. When picked up in a hysterical condition this morning, Inez said she had boarded the freight train east of Hood River, intending to get off at Hood River and return home. She was unable to get off until the train was passing thru Cascade Locks. She could give no further information. Henry Wilson, living at Cascade Locks, heard her cries this morning and went to her assistance. Later she was removed to her home under a doctor's care. Nine men were picked up in the railroad yards at Cascade Locks this morning and were being held pending investigation.

KILLS WIFE; SHOTS SELF

(Associated Press Leased Wire) MILWAUKEE, WIS., Oct. 19.—Fred Schultz, 31, purchased a rifle, made a will in favor of his "beloved children" and shot his wife to death last night in front of Temple Beth-El, a synagogue. Gordon Goetzinger, 16, her escort, was probably fatally wounded as he tried to shield the woman. The husband turned the gun upon himself as 200 worshippers rushed to the temple and doctors held little hope for his recovery.
