CIRCUIT COURT WILL START NOV. TERM MONDAY

Light Session Is Expected as Few Cases Are Now on Docket for Trial.

Circuit court will open Monday and from present indications the term will not continue for more than a week, there being but few cases to be brought before the jury. Judge J. T. Brand of Marshfield arrived yesterday and will conduct court during the term, having traded with Judge Hamilton, who is now at Coquille. Owing to the fact that Judge Brand was only recently appointed, he was directly interested in many of the cases now on the Coos county docket and was therefore disqualified in the trial of these actions. He has made arrangements to trade with Judge Skipworth and Judge Hamilton until those cases of which he had direct knowledge have been disposed of.

The first case on the docket is that of the State of Oregon against French Transfer company. This is an action brought over from last term and is in the nature of a test case. The transfer company was indicted upon a showing made by the state that a transfer business had been conducted without proper state license. The company contends that the state cannot force payment of the license fees in question, and the decision of the court will have an important bearing upon the future activities of the state in handling the transfer license business.

The cases of the Port of Umpqua against the Inland Construction company and Zehring against the Douglas Fire Patrol, both suits to collect money, will probably be for trial this term, and indications are that there will be other civil actions to be heard.

The case of the state of Oregon against Harry Wilkins, a liquor violation case from Reedsport, will also be heard this term, it is expected.

The grand jury completed its work yesterday, returning two secret indictments. As the defendants are not yet in custody the names were not made known.

Avoid Excess Uric Acid!

To Be Well There Must Be Proper
Kidney Action

A STIFF, achy feeling is a common sign of sluggish kidneys and excess uric acid. One is apt to be tired and languid; nervous and depressed; suffer nagging backache, headaches and dizziness. GIRLS OF SENIOR HIGH TO PRESENT VODVIL NOV. 18

The Girls Club Vodvil to be given by the girls of the senior high school Nov. 18 promises to be a very interesting and enjoyable entertainment. This is an annual event, sponsored by the girls of the school, and usually draws a very large audience. This year the students are presenting what they believe will be the best program ever offered by their organization. The program will include two one-act plays, forty minutes of musicals, which will include the usual and a chorus of 15 girls and an 8-piece orchestra, a tumbling act, three choruses, together with monologues, sidewalk patter and other features.

The funds to be derived will go to further the activities of the club, which is made up of all of the girls of the high school, organized for the purpose of solving problems relating to girls' activities in the school and forwarding any movement for the interest of the school. The club now consists of 131 members. One of the activities of the organization is that of declining upon the uniforms to be worn by the girls of the school.

This year they are planning Christmas benefits and expect to use most of the money received from the vodvil for the purpose of relieving needy cases.

CROWD THRILLS WHEN COWGIRL TELLS STORY

not find him." Finally deserting her automobile, she started to walk around and from behind a building she heard the voices of several men. One of them said: "Slim, I'm getting mighty jealous of you." Miss Trickey moved to a point where she could see them. Slim Harris was sitting on a fence, his hands shielding his eyes. Lorena went up to him. "Honey," the girl testified she said, "who is the jake?" "Slim grabbed me. Don't you know enough not to make a crack like that?" he said as he led me away.

"I was only joking," the girl answered, and according to her testimony, she endeavored to placate him.

Pat McCarty then came up to where the two were talking, and ushered the girl to her car. Slim shouted after her: "Why don't you keep your mouth shut and not keep spreading that stuff all around."

"I didn't mean to be bawling you out," the girl said she replied. "Slim answered by swearing that he would 'crack her'." "If you do," Lorena answered, "it will be the last girl you'll hit." "Well, anyway," Harris replied, "after the roundup I'm going to leave you."

"If you do," the cowgirl answered, "if you do—I'll kill you."

McCarty then told both of them to go back to the car. Miss Trickey's testimony continued. She got in the driver's seat. Slim produced a half pint of moonshine and he and McCarty "killed" it, the cowgirl said. Then Slim shoved her out of the seat and down on the floor of the car, and himself took the wheel.

As the paid reached Lakeview in their trip from the roundup stables, Harris told the cowgirl he was going to get out and tend to some business he had, the testimony ran.

"I'll just show you I'm not so damned drunk as you think," he said to her.

"We started toward town," the girl continued. "When we got to the railroad tracks I told Slim he was too drunk to drive—the car had been going from one side of the road to the other. Slim told me to get out of the car. 'I'll show you I'm not too damn drunk to drive,' he said. You've wrecked too many of my cars and I'm going to drive," the girl answered.

She grabbed the wheel, then, she said, as the auto careened toward a telephone pole. When Harris wrestled with her and threw her back into the corner of the machine, she tried to climb up and she shoved her back down again, she said.

"Then he picked up a wrench from the floor and tried to hit me. I threw up my left shoulder to protect my head. He swung again—and again—and again. 'I'll kill you, I'll kill you!' the cowgirl quoted Harris. Each throat was accompanied by an oath.

"I was desperate; he was choking me and striking me. I didn't know what to do. I thought of my knife. I pulled it out and held it between my knees so he couldn't see it. I didn't want to hurt him. He kept on hitting me. Finally, in desperation—I struck him."

Miss Trickey jumped out. Slim after her. "I didn't know he was hurt. I ran, he followed me. I looked back and saw he was gaining; I looked back again, and he was closer. Then I looked and he had fallen."

"I ran back to him. 'Slim, old boy, what's the matter?' 'I'm hurt,' he said.

"I knelt down and put his head on my lap; I reached down to his breast to see if he was hurt. I felt warm blood on my hands—I screamed. 'Slim, old boy, talk to me,' but he didn't answer.

"Men and women came running. I asked them to get a car and take Slim to a hospital. They carried him to my car. I held him in my lap and tried to stop the flow of blood as we raced to the hospital."

The scene, without doubt, the most dramatic ever heard in this courtroom, left the audience breathless.

The room was jammed and the corridors were packed. Outside a large group had gathered—standing in the snow—waiting for an opportunity to enter the court.

On cross-examination, Miss Trickey was asked why she had told conflicting stories of the stabbing.

"I loved him so much," she said. "I didn't want any one to know I did it."

In answer to another question, asked by the prosecutor, demanding if she did not know that she would be acquitted if the killing was in self-defense, the girl answered:

"No. I didn't know the law. I thought I would either be hanged or be sent to prison for life."

The defense scored a point with the calling to the stand of Charles Snelling.

"Did you see Miss Trickey using a knife to make a bride? The witness was asked.

"I did. I asked her where she got the knife. She told me she had gone to town and got it."

PRUNE OUTLOOK BETTER AS RESULT CALIFORNIA SALE

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 10.—The closing out of surplus old crop prunes in California is expected to have a beneficial effect on the market, inasmuch as it will remove a large block that has been a weight on the market and has aided in depressing prices. While the trade here believes the sales will strengthen the market later, at the present time business in northwestern prunes is very dull. Prices have shown no change since the opening of the season. There is no great amount of prunes remaining unsold in the northwest. The supply consists altogether of large sizes and prunes most believe these will be wanted before long.

The California surplus of the 1926 crop amounted to about 6500 tons. The buyer announced that very few, if any, of these prunes will be available for domestic market distribution, as he plans to send practically all of them to Europe to replace European orders for Oregon prunes that have been canceled because of their shortage and lack of small sizes.

The prune export opportunities from the United States to Germany will be materially the perfecting of the commercial treaty between Germany and Jugoslavia, which reduces the import duty on prunes into Germany and which American exporters take advantage of under the most-favored-nation clause arrangement that we have with Germany. The treaty has been signed and it is understood that its ratification by the parliamentary bodies concerned will follow as a routine in a few days. In this connection the California Fruit News says:

"Bulk prunes imported into Germany are by this reduced from 10 marks to 6; per 100 kilos, in packages of 30 kilos or more, and packed prunes reduced from 20 marks to 8. This tariff will be effective 20 days after exchange of ratification documents between Germany and Jugoslavia. Unless renewed, the treaty expires two years after ratification. If and when these reduced rates become effective, they will apply on shipments from the United States into Germany as well and in addition to reducing the import cost, will withdraw for all practical purposes, the opportunity of reworking bulk prunes in Germany, which has been a tremendous disadvantage to California and Oregon prunes from several standpoints."

DEMAND IS GOOD FOR FALL WOOLS

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 11.—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

"The local wool market is comparatively quiet. Prices are very firm, however, and the mills are consuming a very considerable quantity of wool. Demand is more in evidence on fine and half blood wools.

"Fall wools of the best types are selling at 33@35 cents in Texas. The foreign markets are very strong, far to five per cent. higher than a week ago, largely due to the fact that England has gone into the primary markets without price limits because of the pressing need of wool.

"Mohair is rather slow still but prices are steady. Fall accumulations are all sold in Texas. Foreign markets are firm."

The Commercial Bulletin will publish the following wool quotations tomorrow:

Scoured basis: Oregon—Fine and f. m. staple $1.10@1.12; fine and f. m. clothing 90@95; valley No. 1, 95@1.00.

Question: Why should school children receive emulsified cod-liver oil?

Answer: Because the strain of the study-period and playground uses up energy, and emulsified cod-liver oil not only provides energy but also protects with its vitamins.
