MARTIAL LAW DECLARED IN STRIKE ZONE

county about 30 miles north of Denver.

Nearly 500 strikers gathered outside the mine about 5 a. m. They were met at the gates of the mine by Louis N. Schert, chief of the state law enforcement department, and a dozen of his men. The strikers were commanded to halt but argued thru the gate and engaged in hand to hand conflict with the guards. The police used their guns as clubs but were overwhelmed by the strikers who used rocks, clubs and knives. Schert rallied his state men and they withdrew to a position further in the property. As the strikers approached again Schert warned them to stop and fired two shots over their heads. The strikers continued their advance and the state officers leveled their guns directly into the strikers and opened fire. After nearly a score had dropped, the strikers fled precipitously from the gates. One of the injured is not expected to live and several others were seriously wounded. One of the injured was a woman dressed in man's clothing. Neither of the two dead was identified.

A number of state police also were injured and Sam Lee, one of the officers, had a finger severed by a knife in the hands of one of the strikers. Strikers said from seven to nine had been killed but this could not be verified. The state police turned a hall of bullets into the strikers. They apparently were unaware they were being fired at until their ranks began to thin and the shrieks of the wounded pierced the air. The strikers then beat a hasty retreat taking many of their wounded with them. Later they erected a white flag over an automobile and returned for several more wounded.

One troop of cavalry, two armored tanks, one headquarters company, four companies of infantry and a medical detachment were ordered out for strike duty by Colonel Paul P. Newton, adjutant of the state guard. Disturbances also broke out in southern Colorado but there were no casualties. Pickets appeared in the Aguilar district in Las Animas county and strikers in state of Colorado and deputy sheriffs fought a hand to hand fight. Twenty of the strikers were arrested and placed in jail at Trinidad.

LONGMONT, Colo., Nov. 21.—Six striking coal miners who were shot this morning by state police are dying in the Longmont Hospital. Doctors said their injuries were so serious that there was little hope they could live more than a short time. Thirteen other strikers are in the hospital receiving treatment for wounds received in the battle with state of fire at the Columbine this morning.

First reports that Adam Bell, leader of the striking I. W. W. forces in the northern Colorado fields, was killed, were found to be erroneous. Bell is in the Longmont Hospital with serious injuries.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 21.—Responsibility for the deaths of the men killed at the Columbine mine this morning rests squarely on the strikers themselves, Governor W. H. Adams said today. "Chief Louis Schert of the state law enforcement squad, had every patience with the advancing strikers, and he ordered his men to fire only when it appeared that his own life and those of his deputies were in jeopardy."

DAVIS AND BEST CLAIM EFFORT MADE TO MOVE

family still lives on the land, told the judge that he wife had refused to move until she had a home to move to. There are three children.

Deputy Cochran contradicted the stories, saying that it was obvious that both families were still living on the place. Davis and Best were brought through Roseburg late Saturday on the way to Portland and were at the county jail for a short time while Deputy Marshal Cochran conferred with Sheriff Percy Webb concerning the case. Marshal Cochran informed the sheriff that Mrs. Best, who refused to accompany her husband to the outside, is in a destitute condition. There is little food at the cabin and only a small supply of wood, he stated. "There are three children, aged 18 months, 4 and 7 years. The sheriff was advised that he may soon be ordered by the court to go in and bring the family out, which will be a difficult task to perform, as Mrs. Best, it is understood, will fight removal and will battle the officers, it is claimed.

Much Trouble Given The Davis-Best case has given the courts a great deal of trouble. The two men entered the Umpqua national forest and squatted on lands in the Fish Creek desert. This land was classified as non-agricultural and therefore was not open to entry, and when the men were ordered off they defied the orders of the forest service.

The matter was then taken into the federal courts and they were held to be trespassers and were ordered to move within 60 days, but this they have failed to do and are now back in court charged with contempt of court. The men, it is claimed, have made a determined effort to colonize the land in that immediate vicinity, and have induced several families at different times to take up claims, but none of these have remained longer than a few months. The men are evidently prompted by a desire to secure the land which will be greatly increased in value by the construction of the Umpqua highway. They are now circulating petitions asking for the reclassification tion of the lands, the petitions being directed to the secretary of agriculture. In the event recognition is given the petitions the government will make a further investigation to determine whether or not the lands are suitable for agriculture, and if so may open them to entry under the classification of agricultural lands, in which case the men would have a right to file homestead applications.

FLIVVER PLANE IS NEWEST THING

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A $2,500 "flivver" monoplane has been designed by Clarence D. Chamberlin to provide for aviation what Henry Ford has given to the automobile world.

Through a system of mass production similar to that employed in the Ford auto factory, the trans-Atlantic flier said he expects to be able to market a "fool-proof" plane at a price between $1200 and $1500. The first models would cost about $2,500, he said. Chamberlin was said to have invested all of the prize money he received from his flight to Germany in the Chamberlin Aeronautical corporation, a $500,000 concern, to build the plane of which he has dreamed. The ship will have a body about 20 feet long and a wingspread of about 30 feet.

"Small planes have been my favorites," Chamberlin said, "and it has been my plan to develop one that will be absolutely fool proof, within the means of the average person and requiring as small a space as possible for taking off and landing."

Free flying instruction will be given purchasers of the "flivver" planes, Chamberlin said, in announcing that his company would establish a chain of airplane schools throughout the country for this purpose.

Quantity production will start after the first of the year, Chamberlin said. The plane will be a two-seated monoplane, weighing about 500 pounds, and will be equipped with a small air-cooled motor of foreign design developing from 60 to 75 horsepower. Its maximum speed will be about 100 miles an hour and its landing speed 10 miles an hour. Later, he said, the motor will be manufactured in this country.

SUICIDE IN MEDFORD

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

MEDFORD, Ore., Nov. 21.—Basil Tice, 45, local resident Sunday forenoon fired a bullet into his own brain, in a suicide attempt and this afternoon was still living, without a chance for recovery, according to local physicians. Tice was found unconscious in his room in a lodging house. No motive is assigned for the act.
