Everything Was Burned But the Silver

A woman walked into one of our stores in Arizona one day and asked for some polish to "clean burned silver." The salesman was curious and an inquiry elicited the information that a short time before her home had burned to the ground and nothing was saved that would burn.

After the fire, however, the Anniversary Silver Set was taken from the ruins and was in such a good condition that only a thorough polishing was necessary to make it suitable for use again.

This little incident demonstrates the high standard of merchandise we offer—merchandise that has made this Company a household word in millions of homes.
