KIDDIES USED TO PROTECT BANDITS

(Associated Press. Licensed Wire)
CISCO, Texas, Dec. 22.—Using children as a screen from bullets, five men robbed the First National Bank of Cisco today, but in the attempt to escape, one of the men was killed and the other four were believed surrounded by a posse of peace officers and citizens.
Running from the bank to two waiting automobiles, the men headed several children before them as a screen from bullets. Two of the children were shoved into a car by one of the men, who was fired upon and shot thru the head.
The children were not injured.
The loot, approximately $10,000, was recovered.

Flavoring the Press

The Salem Statesman devoted a special issue the other day to the mint industry, and by way of an original feature it added a trifle of peppermint oil to the ink with which the paper is printed. Since peppermint oil is potent stuff, the fragrance of mint was quite plainly perceptible to every reader of the paper on that day.

It seemed a great idea at the time, but inasmuch as the Statesman has announced an onion number for next week we are wondering. A man with an onion breath is bad enough, but a newspaper with an onion breath—well, we think we'll stay away from the office the day that paper comes.

CHEVROLET ARE POPULAR CAR IN OFFICIAL WORK

Popularity of Chevrolets for official service throughout the country is fast increasing, according to information received from the factory by H. P. Hansen, the local dealer. They have been in border patrol use for some time and recently fleets have been acquired by various branches of the public service throughout the country, even the special delivery section of the Portland post office choosing them for its work, and now the Los Angeles police department has purchased thirty-six in one order. "After an investigation covering a period of six months, we have learned, Los Angeles police officials have bought thirty-six Chevrolet touring cars," said Mr. Hansen, the local dealer. "During this period operating costs were made the chief subject of careful study. "According to the captain in charge of motor transportation in the southern California city the Chevrolets will be used in patrolling and investigating other general police department work. A total of 233 cars are operated in police work in Los Angeles, and as the funds covering their use and maintenance are definitely budgeted and the cost must not exceed the limit, the question of economical transportation is most important.

"Six months ago, the police captain has explained, his department began to check with care the operation costs of several Chevrolets owned privately by members of the department and of others belonging to persons not members of the police organization. The results are shown in the purchase of thirty-six cars."
