Mike Sexton of Rock Island, Illinois, head of the minors, in calling his league executives and club owners together again, said the call was broad enough to include the modified draft question and the whole major-minor agreement. The major leaguers, meeting the week after the minors had passed their anti-modification resolution early this month, notified the minor leaguers they were just as much dissatisfied as the "big five"—the American association, international, Pacific Coast, Western and Three Eye leagues. TO RAISE STANDARD

(Associated Press Lessed Wire)

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Waging a campaign to raise the standard of entries in the boxing ring, the New York state athletic commission has adopted an extensive program for penalizing violators by increased suspensions.

Instead of a 30 day banishment for foulting, the commission's new rule calls for a sixty day punishment on the first offense, day days for the second occurrence, six months for a third and revocation of a boxer's license for a fourth violation.
