CHAMBERLIN'S TOUR

And now Clarence Chamberlin, who made a very notable flight across the Atlantic last summer, has begun an aerial tour of America similar to the one Lindbergh made a few months ago. His tour has much the same aims as Lindbergh's—to foster civilian aviation and create new public confidence in airplanes. This is a job worth doing. Chamberlin doubtless will get a warm reception from all of the cities he visits. He deserves it. His fame has been slightly dimmed, through no fault of his own, because of the fact that his flight across the Atlantic came right on the heels of Lindbergh's. But Chamberlin, as an aviator, apparently is fully Lindbergh's equal—if anyone on earth can be said to be that amazing young man's equal—and he has conducted himself since the conclusion of his great flight with just as much composure and good taste as Lindbergh showed. A forced landing marred the first leg of his aerial tour. Let's hope that bad luck leaves him alone for a while now, so that he can have an entirely successful and enjoyable trip. He is a credit to the country and he deserves all the good fortune an aviator can have.

A REAL RACE

With all due respect to that gallant sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton, we were never able to get much of a kick out of those widely-advertised yacht races to which he is everlastingly bringing new boats. They are so hedged about with restrictions, time allowances, rules and regulations that they lack appeal to the average landsman. If the wind is stiff, the great sloops do not race; if it is light, they jog along slowly that the punch of the contest is lost. This summer, however, there will be a yacht race "as is a race." The king of Spain is offering a cup for a yacht race from New York to Spain. A large number of sea-going yachts have entered already, and you can look for some real thrills when the race takes place. Trans-Atlantic yacht races have been held before and they are contest for real sailors. So daringly do the yachtsmen crack on sail that the affair is truly risky; hardly a race of this type has been held without one or more sailors being lost overboard from one or another competing yacht. Watch for this race this summer. It will give you some real thrills.

THE WHITE HOUSE FLAG

Gridley Adams of New Rochelle, N. Y., chairman of the National Flag Code Committee, tells a congressional committee that flag ethics are violated even by our White House. The eagle on the president's flag, it seems, points the wrong way. This has pained Mr. Adams, and he wants something done about it. Probably he's right. These sticklers for points of etiquette usually are. But somehow, for the life of us, we can't get excited about it. We hope it is not unpatriotic for us to remark that there is just a wee bit too much fussing nowadays about "ethics of the flag." After all, the flag itself is the important thing. It is a symbol of our country and the love we have for it; an emblem of our patriotism. So that it be honored in spirit, who cares whether the formal details be absolutely letter perfect? Too much officious attention to minor points doesn't do a bit of good.

TEN ROUND BOUT TO FEATURE BOXING CARD FEBRUARY 7

Scott Holley, Colored Fighter, and Joe Jossie Are to Meet in the Headliner.

Clyde Ward, local boxing promoter, says that he has a real main event lined up for the card to be presented Tuesday, Feb. 7. The headliner is to be a 10-round battle between Joe Jossie, of Tacoma, and Scott Holley of Tia Juana. Holley is the deaf and dumb colored boy who fought Joe Jewett on the last card and gave fans a real exhibition of ring cleverness. Holley is from Tia Juana and has been fighting in that vicinity and at San Diego. He was at Klamath Falls when Timmer Sauters, who was scheduled to fight Jewett, became unable to fight and so sent Holley to take his place on the card. The negro was out of training, but convinced fans that he is an old hand at the game, for his ring cleverness, coupled with a terrific punching power, gave the ringworms an exhibition that made the fight one of the most interesting of the season. Jossie, who is to meet Holley, is a fast boxer and hard hitter from Washington. He has been fighting around Tacoma and Longview and has a good reputation there, so that the 10-round bout should be a contest that will give fans their money's worth.

As a special event, Mr. Ward has secured Joe Wilde of Eugene.

to box four rounds with Fred Warnick of Portland. Wilde boxed young Judd on the last card and is a clever boy and packs a hard wallop.

For the semifinal Mr. Ward is endeavoring to secure an opponent for Carl Miller, Eugene fighter who is very popular in the Willamette valley. There will also be two preliminaries on the card.

SINCLAIR DEAL DESCRIBED TODAY

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A deal by which the Sinclair crude oil purchases company bought from the Continental Trading company for $400,000 a contract which saved it $2,000,000 was disclosed today before the senate committee investigating disposal of the profits of the hastily formed and now dead Continental concern.

The Continental, whose guarantors included Harry F. Sinclair and Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of Standard of Indiana, had contracted to sell oil to the Sinclair company for $1.75 a barrel. It had paid $1.50.

A. L. Carlson, secretary-treasurer of the Sinclair Crude, who was placed under severe fire by Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, committee prosecutor, finally testified to the $400,000 contract, but told the committee that "he did not make it," in answer to a question as to its origin.

Part of the profits of Continental, the government claims, found its way to Albert B. Fall after he left Teapot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair.

PRUNE PICKIN'S

By BERT G. BATES

GOOD EVENING FOLKS

Little did we think
That when the
Robins selected
Poseyville as their
Winter haven
That the rest of the Coast would Boost the idea
Like they have—
Just shows how Much good of
Robin Redbreast
Really does!

Dean Collins, whose poems are one of the fine features of the Portland Telegram, had the following to say in rhyme concerning the visit of that flock of robins in the Umpqua Valley:

SONG TO ORDER

"Tune up your lyre, Dean Collins, and accompany yourself," says the Hood River Glacier, "while you sing of those 10,000 robins, harbingers of Spring, sighted down Roseburg way the other day." They say a swallow, a single swallow, Can never, no never, make a Spring. There's gotta be other things that flap and flutter and chirp and sing And fill the hill and the plain and hollow With birdsong and all that sort of thing.

And that is why with delighted bobbin' And leap and caper and chortle gay, I hear the flight of 10,000 robins. Heeded this way from Roseburg way. I dry the tears of my Winter's bobbin', And holler: "It's almost Spring! Hooryay!"

Ah soon, full soon on the lawn and garden
Will crimson vests with a noble curve,
Make the angle worm's life more hard in
His daily struggle, than worms deserve;
While the jolly redbreasts my greening yard in
Gobble them down with vim and verve.

But though they harry and thump and mangle
The lowly worm, I cannot repine;
I cannot hope that the birds will strangle
O' tangled angles, the while they dine;
I cannot threaten nor scold nor wrangle—
For Spring comes with them right down the line.

A single swallow, a swallow single
Can never produce a Spring, they say.
But 10,000 robins! It makes one tingle
To think of their bright Spring wailestays gay!
So harp and psalter and lyre I jingle
In praise of the robins down Roseburg way.

After reading the above you'll surely want to SPEND THE WINTER WITH THE ROBINS IN ROSEBURG!

We suggest that the Poseyville chamber of commerce adopt that line in caps as their slogan. It tells the story of our climate better than all the statistics you can quote.

It wouldn't make a bad title for a booster song.

Think we'll copyright it.

"HE MUST BE INSANE," SAYS HIS PARENTS

was so disappointed. He came home and cried over it. He used to mourn to because his father went off and left us. He used to say if his father had stayed home and he had his companionship things would have been different.

Missed His Father
I always tried to encourage him and tell him that he could be a real man even if his father was gone. Of all my children Edward seemed to miss his father most. He was the only child who mentioned his father being gone. He was only 2 when his father left in 1917.

My life has been just one tragedy after another. I'll stay until the finish if my funds hold out. I'm against capital punishment. The way I look at it, it's not the way of punishing anyone. It doesn't do any good. Seems as if a person is insane he should be put away and cured.

Edward said the other day.

Harth's TOGGERY

"Mother, I wouldn't read the papers." It's terrible. You can just go there and look at his face and never think such a thing as this would befall him. I can't figure where he could carry out a thing like that. Seems like someone over than he is in it.

Poor little old Ed... It's just unbelievable. I can hardly make myself believe he's in it... It's so tragic. Sometimes I seem bound to break. Then I take on a little courage and go on.

Recalls His Childhood
I can see him in every conceivable way when he used to be at home and picture him in this trouble.

Anyone who was normal couldn't do such a thing. How can everyone be so bitter? It was just justice and fairness. Lots and lots of things can be turned and twisted. Only my God is with me. Anybody in trouble like this draws nearer to God.

GEORGIE DIXON LOSES

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 1.—In a slashing encounter here last night, Herman Auerbach, Salt Lake, won the nod over Georgie Dixon, Portland middleweight, after 10 rounds full of action. It was conceded to have been the toughest match Dixon has yet encountered and the decision was a close one. The semi-stamp was equally as spectacular. Johnny Woods of Seattle, taking the decision over Jimmy Fox of Los Angeles. Teddy Fox of Salem won a four-round decision from Cliff Hunter, Vancouver, Wash., in a good preliminary.

it out. The Church of England will try again, and the Arch-requests "prayers for the success for the second attempt."

To the laymen, struggling to find exact wordings for a prayer, seems unnecessary. Prayer is addressed to omniscience, which reads the heart and the mind.

It has been suggested that no prayer is necessary except "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner." Even that is almost unnecessary, for it is hard to imagine that the Lord would NOT be merciful to feeble creatures born of his own power. However, about such subjects laymen know nothing.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

Into the wagon jumped the bunch. Then Clowdy yelled, "We've had no lunch. Before we start upon our ride, let's see what we can find." So, everyone jumped out again to seek a bit of food, and then the woodsman said, "I'll share my lunch." The Tinymites thought this kind.

A bundle full of things to eat was soon brought forth. My, what a treat! The Tinymites gathered 'round the man and each one had a share. The woodsman didn't eat a bite, he told the Tinymites, "That's all right. Go right ahead and eat it. I am sure that I don't care."

"Oh, no," said one. "This will not do. We'd rather you would eat some, too." So, just to please the Tinymites, Master Woodsman ate some cake. When they had finished, Clowdy said, "Oh, my, but I'm a sleepy head. I'll have to take a nap because I cannot keep awake."

"A good idea," said the man. "As far as I'm concerned, you can. In fact I think that all of you should rest up for a while, because you start out on your ride." The Tinymites all sat down and stretched. Then as they slowly fell asleep, it made the woodsman smile.

Well, goodness me, how time does fly! An hour or two went drifting by, and then the woodsman woke the bunch. "Your sleep is over," said he. "Hike to the pond and wash up clean and then you all will feel real keen, and then to ride 'twill make you just as fit as it can be."

Although they found the water cold, the Tinymites did as they were told. They then hopped in their wagon with a very merry cry. Said Clowdy, "This will be real
