ANGORA GOAT IN HIGH PLACE IN U. S. INDUSTRY

Present Annual Production of Mohair Around Ten Million Pounds.

TEXAS LEADS STATES

Animal Valuable Also for Clearing Land; Large Number Raised in Oregon Areas.

SAN ANGELO, Tex., May 18.—
(A. P.)—Far from his native land, the Angora goat has risen to a position of eminence in the American livestock industry.

Despite numerous handicaps placed in the way of importing breeding stock until 1923, American growers, by selective breeding, have developed herds which are described by the department of agriculture as "second to none in vigor, uniformity, weight of fleece and character of hair."

Mohair Yield Heavy
Although the very existence of the breed in this country is unknown to many Americans, millions of these striking and valuable animals are being raised and are producing about 10,000,000 pounds of mohair a year for the domestic market. In addition, they have been useful in clearing brush from cutover land, and efforts are being made to increase their acceptability as meat animals.

"Unique in his enjoyment and utilization of what would otherwise be waste forage and browse," department experts assert, "the Angora goat has no peer in many respects among the profitable animals of our country. By choice a dweller in desert and brush land, clothed in the fine raiment he gave to monarchs of old, the Angora has conquered by enduring."

"With millions of acres in the United States adapted to goat raising and with our Angora breeders constantly increasing the shearing qualities of their goats and perfecting the type of hair, Americans should not stop short of producing all the mohair required by our manufacturers."

Asia Minor is the original home of the Angora goat, and for many years an edict of the Sultan of Turkey prohibited its exportation.
Nevertheless the mohair-producing industry has expanded until South Africa, which also maintained an embargo on exports until 1923, and the United States have become the other most important centers.

Word of the successful flight of the Bremen and its crew sent Mrs.

the United States to greet her husafter she received the news, as was the one below showing the father than half of the nation's total.

With mohair bringing eighty-five cents a pound and the goats producing from three and one-half to four pounds of fleece a year, the Texas herds are growing to such an extent that the necessity of providing sheds to protect them from the cold after the semi-annual spring shearing has caused something in the nature of a building boom on the ranches.

In Oregon also has carried large numbers on separate farm-clearing projects and still has excellent breeding herds, while elsewhere in Oregon and Washington vast areas of logged-off land are adapted to goat raising. Other herds are thriving in the Ozarks of southern Missouri.

REEDSPORT PLANS
BIG CELEBRATION
ON JULY FOURTH

Reedsport and Winchester Bay are making arrangements for a very elaborate celebration at Winchester Bay, July 4, according to T. H. News, general chairman of the Reedsport Strawberry Carnival committee, who was in Reedsport yesterday in connection with the Kiwanis club visit to the Reeds-port club. The Golden Link celebration will mark the completion of the Roosevelt highway between Reedsport and Marshfield, opening up a district that has long been without transportation facilities.

The celebration is being planned on a very extensive and elaborate scale, Mr. News says, and some very enjoyable entertainment is to be provided.

Mr. News took occasion to advertise the strawberry carnival in a very efficient manner and found that Reedsport is to be exceptionally well represented at the carnival. Practically all of the residents of that city are planning on attending one or more of the days of the carnival and they are in turn inviting Roseburg people to attend their Fourth of July fete.
