COAL MINE EXPLOSION TRAPS 198

There is little hope that any of the 138 men remaining in the mine will be found alive. The village recreation hall has been converted into a morgue for the bodies thus far recovered. As rescuers came from the shaft before and the night crew went to work.

He Just Wouldn't Insure This

This isn't an insurance ad—but the owner of this car refused to listen to Oakland (Cal.) solicitors impugning him to take a policy. A week later, the car's brakes slipped on an incline, and it wound up in this manner, wrapped around a metal pole.

stretchers, the huge crowd of spectators rushed forward, but was restrained by state troopers and National Guardsmen.

Yes, It's a Fennec

Not long ago the News-Review printed a picture of a tiny, fox-like pert-looking animal which a Newark, N. J., animal fancier had received. There was a rush of readers to identify it. Those who decided it was a fennec, hailing from Africa, seem to have been correct. A young lady living in Toledo, Ohio, after seeing the picture wrote an interesting story about the fennec. It follows:

BY HATTIE M. GRIESE Of Toledo, Ohio

The fennec lives in Africa. It is found in Nubia and Egypt. It is a very pretty and lively little creature.

The color of the fennec is a very pale fawn that is almost a creamy white. The tail is bushy and boldly marked with black.

The adult fennec measures scarcely more than a foot in length, exclusive of the tail, which is eight inches long.

Strictly carnivorous, the fennec likes to feed upon fruits, preferably the date. It is said to be able to climb the trunk of the date palm to procure for itself this coveted luxury.

The fennec lives in the ground. It scoops a hole in the light soil. It also is said to build a nest in trees.

The curious little animal is not entirely without use to man, for its fur is of value among the native tribes of Africa. It is very warm when made up into garments.

On account of the smallness of the animal, a single pelt forms but a small portion of a coat, and the fur is highly valued.

Seldom during the day does the fennec show itself. It goes out mostly at night. Even when it has spent some time in captivity, it retains its restless nocturnal demeanor, sleeping most of the day.

It is a small, little creature, with an air of self-reliance that has a funny effect in so small an animal. Its eyes are blue, and the whiskers that decorate its face are long and thick and white.

The fennec is identical with the fox like animal that is known as "zerda" and "cerdo."

Former Residents Have Son—Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hatfield, former residents of this city, their friends will be interested to learn, have a 7 1/2 pound son, born May 15 gon. The boy has been named at their home in Cloverdale, Ore.—Chester Dale. The Hatfields are well known here. Before her marriage Mrs. Hatfield was Nellie Piekens.

WELCOME ODD FELLOWS

A Woodpecker Story From Nick and Nick's Tire Shop.

This morning when I woke up I raised the window blind and peeped out. The sun was shining on the house tops. Two little birds were flitting from limb to limb in the cherry tree, chattering to each other. The robin was alighting in the top of the oak tree.

Minstrel, broadcasting his love song to his mate. The woodpecker was pecking a hole in the gable of the old house. Once in a while he would beat on the end of a loose board with his bill, a tattoo, love message to his wife.

Presently she came and lit on the comb of the house, and said weeches, weeches, wlikto wink. He peeped over and looked up on her, she bowed right and left, to him, and danced the black bottom then she flew away. He went back and drilled away at the hole in the gable of the house. A rose bud was almost in full bloom near my window. Love and life was manifested in all nature. Then I thought of my own self and the conflict of life, and how often I have broadcast the wonderful qualities of the Lee tire to you through the columns of this paper, yet you unbelieving tire users of this world seem to think I am only a fibber, a fable maker, and that my Lee tires are no better than other tires. If you think this, we would be glad to show you a statement where Lee tires have given over thirty thousand miles of service. Lee tires cost no more than other good tires. We have high priced quality tires, we have intermediate tires, we have second line tires, we can fit most any car with all the different size tires. Our price is right. We meet all complete services. Drive in. Service off the street, cool and shady, easy chairs, too. Latest magazines and papers to read while we take off your old tires and put on new ones. We have been to Jerico. We will treat you right. Don our word, we will.

More Ships for "Air Minded" West

Three new tri-motored airplanes, each capable of carrying 12 passengers, and complete to the most modern comforts, have just been completed for the Western Air Express mail and passenger service between San Francisco and Los Angeles. The planes are said to have cost $80,000 each, financed largely through a loan from the Guggenheim Foundation. Upper picture gives a general view of one of these giants. Below, Anthony Fokker (left), builder of the planes, is shown explaining the motor arrangement to C. C. Moseley, vice-president of the California firm.
