ROSEBURG, OREGON, TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1928.

RIDICULOUS SITUATION

Although hundreds of other cities in the United States, including several in Oregon, have established airports at their own expense by means of bond issues, Roseburg, it seems, has no legal right to do likewise without first obtaining permission of the courts.

Milton Bronner, European correspondent of this paper and NEA Service, writes, of the new non-stop Berlin to Paris air line, operated by the famous German Luft Hansa company.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE AT GAS PLANT. M. R. Brown, manager of the local gas plant, has returned from Medford, where he attended a conference of the managers of the Southern Oregon Gas Corporation.

Other Presidential Campaigns—1868. The Republican national convention of 1868 met in Chicago and nominated for president General Ulysses S. Grant.

Rev. J. R. N. Bell Led Active Life

Career as Minister and Newspaper Publisher Included Roseburg and Other Douglas County Places; Born in Virginia, Served in Confederate Army, Prominent in Masonic Fraternity.

In his interesting obituary sketch of Dr. J. R. N. Bell, pioneer publisher and minister of Roseburg, who died at Corvallis, Oregon, last Sunday night, the Corvallis Gazette-Times says:

A native of Pulaski county, Virginia, the future fighter and preacher was taken to Wytheville when he was but two years old. In this quaint little town of the Old Dominion, the lad enjoyed life until March 15, 1861, when he was mastered into the Confederate army as a private in the Wytheville Grays, which became a part of company I, 25th Virginia battalion.

High in Masonry. In 1871, the Virginian was given his first pastorate. He was then a member of the Methodist Episcopal church South, Arkansas days and Arkansas ways were a great deal different from the calm, sweet hours Mr. and Mrs. Bell had known "down in the Virginia."

Brings a Dollar to Oregon. In March, 1874, the lone private of the Army of Virginia arrived in Ashland, Oregon. All the money he had in the world was one poor silver dollar. He did not say a word about being a minister, but set to work to earn some grocery money for himself and pin money for his wife.

Unremitting Padlock Crusade of Prohibition Officials Driving Chicago's Night Life From City

(Associated Press Local Wire) CHICAGO, June 5.—Chicago's night life is being driven outside the city limits.

Prohibition enforcement, efforts have left open in the city only a few of the more imposing nocturnal rendezvous, but no lights have blinked out under the seal of injunctions, roadhouses and chicken dinner farms have sprung up in greater numbers in suburban places.

More than 300 other places have been padlocked by the government during the same period—beer flats, soft drink stands, pool rooms and restaurants that had violated the prohibition laws. Cases are pending against 475 more.

Observation of "hip pocket" evidence has been used successfully by federal officials in padlocking Chicago resorts. A night club is held guilty where patrons bring their own liquor and mix it with beverages and ice furnished by the club. The violation where the act is observed by a dry agent is al-

OBITUARY

SYLVESTER LORENZO BUELL was born in Iowa, October, 1849, and passed away at Salem, Oregon, May 26, 1928.

He was one of twelve children, five brother and two sisters having passed away before him. He came to Oregon with his parents, Leonard and Julia Ann Buell in 1852. The family moved to California in 1869 and after spending a year in that state returned to Oregon and settled in Looking Glass in 1870, where Mr. Buell's parents resided the rest of their lives.

In 1876 Mr. Buell moved to Forest, Oregon, where he was united in marriage to Miss Ella Monger of that place. One child, a son, was born to this union.

In 1895 Mr. Buell was united in marriage to Miss Esther Metcalf of Myrtle Creek, Oregon. One daughter and one son survive this union.

Mrs. Buell passed away at Myrtle Creek, Oregon, in 1909. Mr. Buell leaves to mourn him two sons—Ross Buell of Portland, Oregon, and Thomas Buell of Sparks, Nevada, one daughter, Mrs. Frances Knight of Myrtle Point, Oregon.

THE ANYMITES STORY BY NAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNOCK

While Scouty shut the faucet tight, the others ran, with all their might, and hopped aboard their floating boat. "Ah, everything's just fine," said Carpy, as he looked around. "We've floated up off the ground. Please hurry up there, Scouty. I'll pull in the anchor line."
