A quantity of entertaining is being done these days and social affairs with the arrival of real summer weather are taking on an informality that is refreshing and delightful after the past several rushed weeks.

Much of the entertainment the last several days has been for out of town visitors or several who are leaving the city for trips to the east and for the brides-elect who have chosen the summer season for their weddings.

Music, too, has found its place in social events of the week with several instructors presenting pupils in accomplished and pleasurable recitals for parents and friends.

The college set is returning home for the summer vacation and the arrival of the younger folk will create more interest for the informal social series during the next several weeks.

Miss Vera Tipton Is Bride of Geo. Williams at Attractive Ceremony

A very attractive wedding was solemnized Thursday, June 7, at the home of Mrs. W. C. Tipton at 1334 East Third street, when her daughter, Miss Vera Tipton, became the bride of Mr. George Williams of Oakland, California.

The living room was a garden of old fashioned flowers. Tastefully arranged were tall baskets and jardinières of snapdragons, delphiniums, geraniums and gladioli in the pastel shades, mingled with maidenhair and interrupted ferns.

The vows were taken under an arch of orange blossoms and azaleas to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Frances Sellick. Dr. Frank B. Matthews of the First Baptist church officiated. The bride wore a bodice of white tulle with pointed train edged with net lace and a coronet of silk net and orange blossoms.

After the wedding breakfast, attended only by immediate members of the bride's family, the couple left for a two weeks' honeymoon in British Columbia.

Mrs. Williams for the past few years has been one of Oakland's popular teachers. Mr. Williams is manager of the Crowley Shipping Co. in San Francisco. The couple expect to make their home in Oakland, California.

Mrs. P. K. DeShields, who was Miss Doris Price of this city prior to her marriage which will be remembered as one of the lovely affairs of last year, has been visiting at Dixonville with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Price, and sister Mrs. Phil Strader. Mr. and Mrs. Strader accompanied Mrs. DeShields home to Portland Friday.

Cochrane to Make Home in Illinois This Season

Friends are regretting the departure of Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Cochrane from Roseburg for their former home in Southern Illinois, where they will be for the coming season. Mr. Cochrane has been a member of the Junior high school faculty the past year. Accompanied by Mrs. Cochrane's father, George Kornegle, who came to this city especially to make the trip with them, Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane left last week on a vacation trip by motor which will take them south, after a brief stay at Bandon. Over the Roosevelt highway to California points, they plan to travel, and then on to Yosemite Park, returning then to the Grand Canyon, visit in Denver and thence to Illinois. In Carmel, near where Mr. Kornegle lives, the Cochrans will visit the remainder of the season. This fall Mr. Cochrane will teach in Metropolitan school, near Carmel.

Miss Pauline Brigham, who arrived Tuesday from Canyon, Texas, is a charming visitor being welcomed here. Miss Brigham is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Albert Minurn, and will be remembered by many on her visit in the city last season. She is head of the piano department of the state college in Western Texas.

Miss Elizabeth Harding Is Bride at Beautiful Ceremony Sunday

At a quiet and impressive ceremony Sunday morning at the 9 o'clock hour Miss Elizabeth Harding and Mr. Eldon Ogil of Portland exchanged nuptial vows before an assemblage of about 25 relatives and friends, included in which were out of town guests who were bidden to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Harding, parents of the bride, in Garden Valley for the wedding.

The Harding home had been arranged for the service with a lovely floral setting of pink and green, roses shading from delicate color to deeper shades, and ferns predominating. These, with masses of greenery, formed an improvised arch before which the nuptial vows were exchanged. Sweet peas, roses and other cut flowers were graceful in tall baskets and bowls about the room.

Mrs. M. T. Bates played the wedding march from Lohengrin preceding and during the entrance of the bride and her attendant.

Little Norma Bates of Gaston, Oregon, was the charming flower girl and was dressed in white tulle over pink satin. She carried a basket of rose petals, which she dropped through the aisle to the improvised altar. Miss Walda Harding, sister of the bride and her only attendant, followed. She wore pink georgette, a model with pleated front and long sleeves, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and rose buds.

Tremendously nipping her dark type was the ensemble of beige georgette over rose satin, worn by the bride. Her shoes were in harmonizing shade and she carried a shower bouquet of rose buds.

Kenneth Ogil of Portland, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

A beautiful service was read by Rev. W. R. Baird, pastor of the First Christian church.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride and bridegroom and their wedding party received.

A breakfast, over which Mrs. Harding presided, was served following.

In the afternoon the wedding cake was cut by the bride and was served with punch to the guests who gathered informally preceding the departure of the couple on a trip south.

Bendel Rejoices In The Return Of Ruffles

From Pajamas to Party Frocks, Volants Aid in Expressing New Feminine Grace

BY HENRI BENDEL
For NEA Service

NEW YORK, June 9.—Last year, with straight up-and-downs the modish thing, a ruffle might have been defined as "something that used to adorn a petticoat when there were petticoats."

This year the woman who does not know ruffles as an exterior adornment does not know her styles.

Volants, as the French call them, are singularly expressive of the undulating feminine grace in which the new modes revel. They are the perfect trimming for summer, for their airiness and fluffiness have much in common with the breezes that charm us in summer.

From pajamas for the boudoir to gowns for formal Newport and Southampton functions, ruffles are eminently correct for trimming this year.

Finds Repetition Is Effective

The majority of them are of self-material. Especially this fact is true if the fabric is printed chiffon, georgette, crepe de chine, satin or handkerchief linen.

Ruffles that pose diagonally across a skirt are likely to follow the same line of chic across the waist and then emphasize it on the sleeves. The same is true of curves.

Repetition has its value in this particular field.

In addition to the geometric line along which ruffles are applied, the kinds, width and fallness of ruffles give endless variety to this kind of trim. The pert one-inch figured ruffles cut on straight lines and gathered very full so they stick out to show their colorful plumes have only distant relation to the soft, gently undulating, circular ruffle that is gathered not at all. Add to this the fact that their edges may be notched, scalloped, tucked, lace-edged, or colorfully banded, and one can see that I mean "endless" variety as ruffle possibilities.

Black flat crepe is one of the most successful materials for ruffled trimming for the reason that unless lace be rich or embroidered just the right sort, this material demands self-ornamentation.

I show today an import that is extremely simple and yet has distinctive elegance—a little after-noon frock in which its wearer would feel equal to any function.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner and Daughter Will Visit in South

Former Mrs. Marion Spends Matron Roseburg Few Days Here

Friends have been enjoying a visit with Mrs. John Steele, a former Roseburg matron who was in Roseburg from Saturday to Wednesday as the guest of Mrs. B. E. Stephens.

Mrs. Steele and her husband, who passed away last February, resided here 35 years ago. Mrs. Steele now makes her home in Los Angeles. She will visit in Portland with her nephew, Charles W. Steele, son of the late Judge and Mrs. George W. Steele, formerly of this city. From there she will go to Jacksonville, Florida, for the summer season, returning to Los Angeles in October.

The bodice is cut simply, with an interesting neckline consisting of an inset band forming a V that reaches to the center of the waist where the ruffles begin.

These ruffles are rows of rows of hand-rolled circularly cut affairs. Their nonchalance, it seems to me, would inevitably be transmitted to their wearer. A wide girde is caught in front with a rose-quartz buckle outlined in brilliant, the only touch of color.

For Summer Wear
I also show one of my new summer ensembles, a printed frock and plain coat of beige crepeella that makes great use of ruffles. Rose, beige and black are the dominating colors. Ruffles tier the skirt and curving around the bodice, suggest a bolero. Every ruffle is bound with brown, a color which is picked up in the border of the kerchief scarf.

The coat is full length and lined with the printed silk. The hat I choose for this ensemble is a Robson creation of black baku with a rose aligrette and black bow trim.

Suggestive of a wheat field under the summer's breezes is an other printed frock—both because of the soft tans and greens of its design on its shimmering surface and because of the waving manner in which its ruffles are applied.

Secures Rhythmic Effect
Circular ruffles tier the skirt in a waving, circular manner, follow the same rippling around the bodice and repeat the rhythm around the sleeves. These ruffles are bound alternately in green and in tans, increasing the rippling illusion.

With this green baku straw hat is worn, smart in its smallness, chic in its trim.

Hand-Rolled Ruffles
I show today an import that is extremely simple and yet has distinctive elegance—a little after-noon frock in which its wearer would feel equal to any function.
