Glide Office Closed—

The central dispatcher's office at Glide has been closed, and O. C. Houser has returned to the local office of the Umpqua national forest. He has been at Glide during the entire fire season and has had charge of the protection work on the entire forest. His daughter, Miss Evelyn Houser, who operates the telephone switchboard and assists in the general office work, left last week for Portland to attend the Northwest School of Commerce, where she is taking a business course.

Did you ever stop to think

THAT a store should be a selling place, not a storage place?

THAT stores that accumulate many "shelf-warmers" are out of luck? It's usually their own fault; they should not try to place the blame elsewhere.

THAT profits are made when goods are sold? Many merchants seem to forget that fact.

THAT goods must not only be bought right, but must be sold right?

THAT advertising through the printed page is the greatest sales creator known?

THAT everywhere in every line of business, advertising is making real friends for those who advertise?

THAT well advertised goods are goods of known and proved value? They have won the confidence of the public.

THAT dealers, awake to the demands of the public, never try to substitute for quality? The consumers have cultivated a good memory and can't be fooled with unknown goods.

Well Advertised Lines of Goods Not Only
Make Customers, but Gain Their Good-Will and Their Future Business.

"HIGHWAY" ROUTED FOR COAST FLIERS

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 2.—There is now a "main street" of the air in the United States, with the aerial equivalent of stop, go and caution signals and of traffic laws and regulations.

This "main street" is in California, between San Francisco and Los Angeles. It was established last May by the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics and is operated jointly by the fund and the United States weather bureau, with army and navy and telephone company cooperation. It is an experimental meteorological service, receiving from 33 stations, in an area 400 miles long and 125 miles wide, reports each hour and a half from 6:30 a. m. to 3:30 p. m.

The stations furnish information on winds, clouds, fog, visibility and weather, which are flashed by wire to airports and to such planes as have radio. Several regular air lines and numbers of individual planes use the service. Maj. E. H. Bowls, in charge of the San Francisco weather bureau, directs the service and acts for the Guggenheim fund. One of the scientists who spent the summer in organizing the work is Dr. C. G. Rosby, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who describes some of the results.

One of the regions corresponding to an arid ground highway control is the airway about 100 miles north of Los Angeles, where the land elevation is about 4,000 feet. Here northbound planes often meet a prevailing wind from the northwest. Several of the regular planes using the airway, Dr. Rosby says, have an estimated flying expense of from $1 to $2 a minute. By charting the air strata the weather service estimates that a saving is produced for such planes of an average minimum of 10 minutes each, when flying against unfavorable conditions.

Much of this work has been done by the station at Lebec, Calif., sending up test balloons. Their records indicate a tendency to morning calm in the first 2,000 feet above the station, with wind above that stratum. This wind has been more from the northwest than from any other direction. Occasionally above the northwest wind a southwest wind has been recorded.

When high clouds overcast wide areas, it has been possible to step planes before they reached the impenetrable section. In one instance such a cloud area covered 100 miles of the airway, with most safe flying visibility beneath, but with no apparent way to get into this vast cloud tent, nor out of it. Several airports lay beneath it. Because of their numbers, the meteorological stations were able to spot the only "hole" in this cloud tent, and flying proceeded as usual.

The summer's observations have fixed an interesting characteristic of ocean fogs, which may be called their liquid nature. The Pacific fogs roll inland much as a tidal wave might, turning valleys into vast bays, running over comparatively low lands, but stopping like water when they reach high elevations.

A different type of fog is expected to receive study this winter, when it occurs more frequently than in summer. It is called radiation fog and does not come from the sea. The San Joaquin valley, which lies in an immense elongated bowl beneath the airways, is one of the locations for study of radiation fog.

GEO. BEBAN, NOTED ACTOR OF LATIN ROLES, IS DEAD

(Associated Press Local Wire)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—George Beban, character actor in motion pictures, died in a hospital here today from injuries received when he was thrown from a horse Sunday.

Beban, recruited from the stage, was known as one of the leading exponents of Latin roles on the screen. He had been virtually retired since the death of his wife in December, 1925.

The fatal fall occurred at a mountain lodge. Beban hardly had gotten astride the animal when it reared and he was thrown heavily to the ground.

Beban was born 55 years ago in San Francisco.

ALLEGED DRY LAW VIOLATORS BEFORE FEDERAL COURT

(Associated Press Local Wire)

MEDFORD, Ore., Oct. 5.—William McHardy, a white haired plainsman of the old school, and operator of a pool hall at Sprague River, Klamath county, went on trial in federal court here today, charged "with the sale and possession of wine tonics, the same being intoxicating."

McHardy was alleged to have dispensed two potent and popular tonics at three drinks for a dollar to Indians and palefaces.

The tonics were served to special prohibition agent and a half filled bottle of the beverage was introduced as evidence. The government alleges that the wine tonics were in demand by Indians on the Klamath reservation and witnesses testified to "drinking back of the pool hall."

Enforcement officers testified they drank some of the tonics and found them intoxicating. Ralph Kelly, of Hillsboro, Oregon, now a Washington county deputy sheriff, was the purchasing agent of the investigation.

Sentence will be passed next Tuesday by Federal Judge Beban upon Cal. Callender and Gus Riechberger, of Chilquin and Jack Martin of Fort Klamath found guilty yesterday of prohibition law violations.

The trials of Mike Murphy of Chilquin, Oregon, and Ben Mitchell an Indian, will be heard next week.

TODAY'S MARKETS

(Associated Press Local Wire)
BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

The demand for wool was slackened in this market in consequence of the uncertainty prevailing in London and Australia but now appears to have become fairly well readjusted to the new level of values. On both sides of the Atlantic, the markets for goods and clothing are reported liquid and with prices of wool at their present level, good business should not long be delayed. Some small lots of fall Texas have been purchased at 32 and 33 cents.

"The mohair market is firm with business light. About two million pounds of the fall clip in Texas is understood to have been moved and prices now are at 65 to 75 cents respectively for adult and kid hair. Foreign markets are firm.

The Commercial Bulletin will publish the following wool quotations tomorrow: Scoured basins: Fine and F. M. staple $1.10; fine and F. M. F. combing $1.03 to $1.08; fine and F. M. clothing $0.90 to $1.01; Valley No. 1 $1.02 to $1.05.

Mohair: Original bag average 12 months Oregon 55c to 60c. Graded stock: First combing 75c to 80c; good carding 45c to 50c.

Onions—Yakima onions easier, Oregon Danvers firm. Yakima yellow, $2.50@2.75 cwt; Oregon Yellow Danvers, $3.00@3.25 cwt.

The Play McGraw Is Protesting

Here's a remarkable action photograph of the play in the first game of the recent doubleheader between the Giants and Cubs, which the Cubs won and which John McGraw is seeking to have thrown out because of the play depicted here. McGraw claims Hartnett interfered with the attempt of Andy Reese to score from third base in the sixth inning and that this interference enabled Clyde Beck, Cub third baseman, to tag Reese out. Note in the photograph how far away from the base-line Reese was forced. Umpire Klem, it seems, was a bit away from the play.
